Martial Law Near as Arab Riots Mount In Holy Land

British Constable, Two Natives Are Slain in Fighting.

3 Palestine Cities Damaged by Bombs

Naval Building Sped by Il Duce as Tension Is Heightened.

The Palestine Situation
Rioting Arabs plunged Palestine into a near state of war, with British troops and police fighting pitched battles with armed mobs.

Speeding up of Italian naval construction by Premier Mussolini as a result of increased Anglo-Italian tension was revealed.

In London, a lengthy visit by Italian Ambassador Dino Grandi to Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden was interpreted as an effort by Mussolini to smooth England's ruffled feelings. Meanwhile a new colonial secretary was named as concern grew over the situation in Palestine.

Disorders in Jerusalem.

By the United Press.

Jerusalem, May 28.—Rioting Arabs plunged Palestine into a near state of war tonight, with British troops and police fighting pitched battles with armed mobs.

Bombings, snipings and incendiarism spread throughout the Holy Land. Military vigilance and restrictions, bordering on martial law, were enforced.

Today's trouble reached a climax when unidentified assailants, believed Arabs, murdered a British constable near the Austrian hospice in the old city of Jerusalem. The constable arrived only a few weeks ago from London and was a member of the first British soccer football team in Palestine.

Officials believed it was only a matter of hours until martial law would be declared. Reinforcements were being rushed from Egypt. It is understood they are bringing artillery pieces and machine guns.

At least two Arabs were killed today and many wounded in conflicts with British troops.

Troops were met with a barrage of rifle fire on entering the village of Qubatia. Two Arabs were killed and one critically wounded before the rioters fled.

Hiding on rooftops and behind buildings, Arab snipers opened fire on troops at the village of Silateldahr. Three snipers were wounded. The others escaped.

Bombings occurred at Haifa, Jaffa and Safed, damaging public and private buildings. Troops patrolling the Southern Railway dispersed an Arab mob apparently attempting to dynamite the tracks. Forests around the Jewish settlement at Achuza, in North Palestine, were set afire by Arabs.

Naval Building Speeded.

Rome, May 28 (U.P.).—Premier Benito Mussolini is speeding construction of Italy's two 35,000-ton battleships as result of Anglo-Italian tension growing out of the Ethiopian dispute, naval officials declared tonight.

The new sea giants, to be armed with nine 15-inch guns each, may be ready for launching within a year, one at Genoa and the other at Trieste.

The battleships are intended to give Italy's fleet "offensive backbone" to answer any possible challenge from Great Britain's overwhelming capital-ship strength.

Italy's East African colonial war radically altered both British and Italian plans of operation in the Mediterranean. Some quarters be-

3 More Cool Days, Weather Man Says

North and northwest breezes whipped across Washington yesterday, drove the clouds away and the thermometer down.

The thermometer dropped to 58 yesterday morning. Today a low in the 40's is expected.

Saturday the temperature will rise a bit—maybe—the weather man said, but the nip still will be in the air.

No rain is in sight.

Yesterday's high was 67, reached at 3:30 p. m.

Divorced Wife of Prince Rospigliosi Becomes Bride of Louis F. Reed, Jr., in Jersey City; Party Celebrates With Champagne.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 28.—The former Marion Snowden, oil heiress recently divorced from Prince Girolamo Rospigliosi, member of an Italiam family of nobility, was married late today to Louis F. Reed, jr., in Jersey City, N. J., and an hour later predicted that "this marriage will take."

The 23-year-old society girl set her champagne glass down on the table of a Manhattan hotel suite and looked blushingly at her husband.

"There isn't much to say," she said. "I'm happy, of course—glad to be a Mrs.

"But I'm not so good a prophesying. I don't know what's going to happen."

She had no comment to make of Prince Rospigliosi, whom she married in Rome when she was 19.

She and her husband, son of a New York attorney, will leave for an extended Bermuda honeymoon Saturday.

The bride's mother, Mrs. Walter Sherman Davidson, who voiced public disapproval of her daughter's first marriage, did not attend the wedding today.

"She's in Bermuda," Reed explained. "We'll see her there at my home at Somerset Bridge.

"I'm not working now, and I have no plans for working in the fall. I guess Marion and I will stay in Bermuda for some time."

They celebrated with champagne. Other champagne quffers who attended the wedding were James H. Snowden, jr., Harvard student and brother of the bride; Pendennis Reed, brother of the bridegroom, and his wife, Carol.

Revolt Spreads Against Sacasa Nicaragua Rule

Rebels Seeking to Install Somoza, Army's Head, Says Government.

By the Associated Press.

Managua, Nicaragua, May 28.—A revolt against the Nicaraguan government, joined by units of the national army, spread today to several sections of the country.

A government spokesman admitted the uprising was under way and it appeared to be especially serious on the east or Caribbean coast.

Authorities in several cities were removed by the rebels, including those of Bluefields, principal Caribbean port of Nicaragua.

The spokesman said the movement was designed for the overthrow of President Juan B. Sacasa, one-time Minister to Washington, in favor of Gen. Anastacio Somoza, head of the national army, trained by United States Marines.

Government sources mentioned no casualties. (An unconfirmed report in San Jose, Costa Rica, said five soldiers of the Nicaraguan national guard were slain in the Rio Coco area. Dispatches from Nicaragua said a state of siege might be invoked.)

"It has been known for the past few days," said a government spokesman, "that a fictitious popular uprising was being prepared on the Atlantic coast tending to oust the civil authority in that section.

"The legitimate authorities of Bluefields, Puerto Cabezas, Cabo Gracias and other cities of that section hove been removed.

"Other uprisings of like nature are announced in other sections of the country.

"They are part of a plan to overthrow President Sacasa, impede future presidential elections, and induct into the presidency the chief of the national army, Gen. Somvza, who is constitutionally unable to be a candidate."

Japan Demands China Suppress Student Strike

By the Associated Press.

Tientsin, China, May 28.—Officers of Japan's enlarged military garrison quickly demanded tonight that Chinese authorities stamp out a strike by thousands of students who called upon China to "rise against the Japanese invasion."

Strained Sino-Japanese relations were further aggravated by the student demonstrations.

Upon Japanese demands, Chinese police were sent to patrol the streets. Students had marched through them spreading anti-Japanese pamphlets denouncing smuggling in north China and Japan's recent heavy reinforcement of its Tientsin and Peiping garrisons.

The Chinese government protested both these situations to Tokyo without avail.

Chinese reports accused the Japanese army command of threatening to use its troops to disperse the demonstrators and take over control of the city. The Japanese would not comment on these reports.

These Chinese sources further alleged that Japanese were known to have participated in supplying the students with anti-Japanese posters, "hoping thereby to precipitate an incident."

The city was uneasy, viewing the situation as packed with explosive elements.

Students of 13 colleges and schools, after calling the three-day strike, sent telegrams to fellow students throughout China calling upon them to "join us in the campaign of anti-Japanese resistance."

"Down with imperialism, down with smuggling, down with Japan," said student slogans. They presented a petition to municipal authorities asking them to prevent the landing of 2,000 additional Japanese troops due shortly.

$250,000 Is Paid Quintuplets For Parts in Three New Movies

By the Associated Press.

Callander, Ontario, May 27.—A fortune of $250,000 spot cash for a movie contract was dumped into the laps of the five little sisters Dionne today when they achieved the tender age of 2.

This handsome birthday present brought the quintuplets' cash on hand to $450,000 and their earnings in the two years of their lives to $500,000.

When they were born in a crude farm home their father, Oliva Dionne, expressed worry about how he was going to feed them. As part of the birthday celebration the quints today presented their parents with a check for $1,000.

The contract was signed for three feature length pictures (Twentieth Century-Fox Films) to be completed by the end of 1938, and if all goes well the quints will make much more out of it.

The babies are guaranteed an additional $50,000 at the end of 1938 if all are alive, and, furthermore, will get 10 per cent of the film receipts. Their first and only feature length picture, "The Country Doctor," was a box-office hit.

Announcing the contract, David Croll, Ontario minister of welfare and one of the quints' guardians, said the quintuplet fund is now at a point "where neither the babies

Possemen Kill Boy by Error; 2 Others Shot

50 Additional Aids Are Sent to Area; Woman to Be Questioned.

By the United Press.

Angola, La., May 28.—Possemen, scouring the Tunica Hills for a convict-murderer, became nervous and confused today, fired indiscriminately at every suspicious figure they saw, killed a farm boy by mistake, and wounded two of their own number.

The searchers, hunting for Wilfred Lindsley, Baton Rouge "bad boy" who escaped from a prison farm last night after murdering Guard Capt. Nelson J. Himel and his wife, accidentally shot to death Billy Wade, 21-year-old farm hand. Two prison guards in the posse also were shot by a third guard, who saw them stalking through the woods and mistook one of them for the fugitive.

Bloodhounds frequently picked up Lindsley's trail across the damp ground and Warden Louis Jones believed his capture was imminent.

The fugitive, 23 years old, was sent to the prison farm for life three years ago for killing a youth in a fit of jealousy over a girl. He was a trusty, serving as yard boy at the Himel quarters. He was armed with Himel's revolver and rifle when he escaped in Himel's automobile. The car was abandoned a mile from the prison.

"Shoot to Kill" Order.

Possemen had orders to "shoot to kill" and were prepared for a battle.

The two wounded guards were Tom J. Fluitt and Charles McCrory. They were shot as they beat through wooded country 12 miles east of here, near the W. C. Percy store, by Howard Courtney, another guard. Courtney said he saw them through the dense marshland growth and fired both charges from his double-barreled shotgun, knocking both to the ground.

Fluitt, struck in the lower part of the body, was believed fatally wounded. McCrory was shot in the left hand and leg. One finger was blown off. Both men were taken to the prison hospital for emergency operations.

The Wade youth, a cousin of Sheriff Ted Martin, who was leading one section of the posse, was slain by two guards, a white man and a Negro. Their names were withheld. They reported the young farmer was dressed in a blue shirt, similar to that worn by convicts, and he failed to heed their command to halt. Relatives explained that young Wade was deaf, and so he died without knowing he had been hailed.

Asks for More Men.

At 2 p. m. Sheriff Ted Martin, leading one section of the posse, telephoned the prison for more men, guns and ammunition. He said he was sure he had Lindsley trapped and needed 20 more men to complete a cordon about the area.

The search centered near the Little Bayou Sara Creek, where two State highway policemen reported sighting a man "about Lindsley's size" darting through the woods a quarter of a mile away.

More than 50 men, including prison guards, deputy sheriffs, State highway police and agents of the State Bureau of Criminal Identification, were rushed to that area. They used the Perry store as field headquarters.

Trained manhunters were in charge of the dogs.

As more police and civilian volunteers poured in, the search was widened. Highway police stopped and searched all vehicles, including freight and passenger trains.

State agents went to Brookhaven, Miss., to question an unnamed woman, believed to be Lindsley's sweetheart, who often had visited him in prison.

At the prison, a coroner's jury decided that Himel and his wife were murdered by Lindsley. As reconstructed from the testimony, the story was:

Body Fell Into Tub.

Mrs. Himel, a woman of 50, retired to her bathroom about 3 p. m. yesterday. Lindsley followed, tried to assault her, and cut her throat when she struggled. Her body fell into the bathtub, fully clothed.

Lindsley went to the bedroom to await Himel's return. As the captain entered the house and paused to hang up his hat, the convict shot him in the back, rifled his pockets, seized his guns and fled. Himel was 61, and had been employed at the prison 20 years.

6 Killed as Auto Is Struck by Train

Chicago, May 28 (AP).—Four women and two small children, members of a party en route to a cemetery to decorate graves for Memorial Day, were killed today when their automobile was struck by the inbound Logansport local of the Pennsylvania Railroad in Calumet City, Ill.

The dead, all of Calumet City: Miss Mary Trembczynski, 24, driver of the car; Regina Luczak, 24; Mrs. Eleanor Kunka, 29; Daniel Kunka, 3, son of Mrs. Kunka; Lillian Cichy, 24; Patsy Fleming, 2.

The bodies were identified by Miss Trembczynski's father, Joseph, owner of Calumet City Tavern.

The occupants of the car, he said, were on their way to Holy Cross Cemetery, near the scene of the crash.

Calumet City police said the car was driven directly into the path of the Chicago-bound train and was carried 1,000 feet before the engineer could stop.

Four Die at Sing Sing For Murder in Holdup

Ossining, N. Y., May 28 (U.P.).—Four Brooklyn men, all under 30, were put to death in the electric chair at Sing Sing Prison tonight for a holdup murder. It was the prison's third quadruple execution in the last 18 years.

The executed men were: Vincent de Martino, 27; Frank Russo, 23; Charles Kropowitz, 22, and George Rosenberg, 22.

Thomas Seeks U. S.-District Fiscal Survey

Will Ask Investigation to Determine if Capital Is Undertaxed.

1936 Budget Would Be Continued Until Report Is Given President.

By James D. Secrest.

Senate conferees on the 1937 District supply bill today will challenge the good faith of the House managers when Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, introduces a resolution authorizing President Roosevelt to appoint an impartial commission to determine the proper fiscal relationship between the Federal and District governments.

At the same time he will offer a joint resolution continuing all appropriations for maintenance and operation of the District government, now in the 1936 act, during the next fiscal year. That will amount to approximately $35,000,000, according to Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor.

The commission proposed by Thomas would comprise three nonresident experts—an economist, an outstanding city manager and an engineer. It would be financed by a $50,000 appropriation to be taken out of the Federal contribution to the District.

Report by January 1.

The resolution provides that the commission shall make its report to the President by January 1. Meanwhile, the District budget may be submitted to Congress without the United States lump sum, which would be determined and inserted by the Budget Bureau after receipt of the report.

"The purpose of this resolution is to end the interminable struggle every year over the Federal contribution of the District," Thomas said.

"If Washington is under-taxed, as the House contends, the commission would unquestionably adjust or even abolish the Federal contribution accordingly. If, on the other hand, the National Capital pays one of the highest per capita taxes in the country, as we have been advised by a tax expert, the lump sum payment might be raised.

"This resolution gives the House an opportunity to show the country it is right, if it acted in good faith. We will certainly abide by the judgment of the commission."

Silly, Says Blanton.

The commission resolution proposal brought an immediate and characteristic retort from Representative Thomas L. Blanton, chairman of the House conferees, who previously had turned down the idea i.. conference.

"It's so silly, it's absurd," he said.

The Senate conferees yesterday showed a distinct disinclination to accept an initation sent them earlier in the day by the House managers to a parley to be held in the House Appropriations Committee room.

Thomas, while declining to say that the invitation will be rejected pointed out it would be futile to hold another conference so long as the House conferees remain adamant on the Federal contribution.

The House invitation signed by five managers, suggested that another conference be held on the morning of June 1 for the purpose of either reaching an agreement on the bill or to formally sign a disagreement so reports may be made back to the respective houses.

Must Meet Again.

Senator Thomas said that, in the event the deadlock continues unbroken, it will be necessary for the conferees to meet again to sign a disagreement.

The chairman of the Senate subcommittee has not yet abandoned hope of a reconciliation, despite the decision, to introduce a continuing resolution. He does not plan to ask adoption of the resolution immediately for that reason.

Thomas pointed out the continuing resolution would not only continue the $5,700,000 lump sum payment, but would reappropriate funds for character education and, of course, would carry no restriction against outside work by District employes earning $2,400 a year or more.

As the Senate conferees have indicated a willingness to compromise on the character education item and the employe limitation, the House would gain more by reaching an agreement with the Senate on the regular District supply bill than by permitting the continuing resolution to become a law.

The District government also has more to gain from passage of the 1937 bill, providing the Federal contribution is left at $5,700,000.

Among the new construction items that would be lost under a continuing resolution would be the replacement of Chain Bridge, an addition to Eastern High School, the new Police Court Building and ten school building, expansion and purchasing items.

A continuing resolution appropriating $35,000,000 would provide about $7,373,000 less than carried in the District bill as it passed the House and around $8,750,000 below the measure as voted by the Senate.

Senators Reject Boost In Corporate Imposts; Report Out Bill Today

He Withholds Expected Attack on Landon; Silent on Bolt.

By Felix Bruner.

Senator William E. Borah, Presidential candidate, warned the Republican party last night that its chance of victory lies in convincing the voters that it is not "going back" to pre-New Deal conditions, and in an effective program of relieving the problems of the individual.

Nowhere in his speech, delivered over the radio, did Borah mention another candidate, and nowhere did he indicate the course he would take should the action of the Cleveland convention not meet with his approval. The speech, described as the Senator's "last word" before the convention, left his plans as much a mystery as ever.

Borah briskly attacked monopolies, discussed international relations, attacked "old guard" party leaders, accused big oil companies of being active in the campaign, and declared the future of the party will be in the hands of the candidate rather than in those of the platform makers.

Those who had anticipated that Borah might attack Gov. Alf M. Landon, his leading opponent, failed to see in the speech anything that could be construed as such an attack. His reference to oil companies did not involve the Kansas Governor, as Landon's oil interests were entirely independent of the large companies.

"The candidates of the respective parties will be the platform," Borah told his listeners. "As seldom before, this campaign will be a campaign of candidates and the attitude of the party on public questions can only be fully known when both platform and candidates are known and understood."

The Senator digressed to warn the country that "the nearest approach to a practical guarantee of peace for the people of this country is to remain wholly aloof from any and all foreign controversies or political commitments."

Borah referred to the theory that a controlling factor in the campaign will be the question of the integrity of the Constitution. But, he said, to destitute and jobless workmen and farmers, as well as to independent business men "debates over constitutional government and the integrity of the courts may seem strangely remote from their personal problems."

Must Aid Citizen.

"No inteligent and effective presentation of the problems of maintaining our free institutions can be presented in this campaign or, in my opinion, at any time, unaccompanied by an effective proposal

Wearied House Votes 6 Times; Cites Townsend

He and Two Associates Will Be Tried for Contempt Here Next Fall.

By Sidney Olson.

By standing up and sitting down six times in ten minutes, a majority of the House of Representatives yesterday voted to uphold the chamber's dignity by citing Dr. Francis E. Townsend and two of his aids for contempt.

The repeated stand-ups of the majority, which came so fast that a number of the members were puffing visibly, came about through the persistent and stubborn efforts of Representative Joseph P. Monaghan (Democrat), of Montana, a Townsendite, to block the resolution.

At each point in the movement of the resolution toward passage Representative Monaghan, a tall, heavy-jawed young man with red spots of anger in his pale cheeks, shouted for a point of order or made an objection.

Invariably Speaker Joseph W. Byrns gavelled him down with great pounding cracks of the gavel on its block, shouting for order. Each time Monaghan was overruled. Each time he appealed from the ruling. Each time Representative Thomas L. Blanton moved to lay the appeal on the table. Monaghan would then call for a division, meaning a standing vote of the House.

By giving the Townsendites a "fast count," each of these took only a moment or two. Then the show went on, with Monaghan immediately objecting to the next move in procedure, and appealing from it to the House.

By the triple-play method—Monaghan to Blanton to Byrns—the House was kept jumping to its feet, much to the irritation of the members, who began growling heartily at Monaghan.

The final vote was 271 to 41 to cite

Tugwell Wins Wider Powers By Senate Vote

Rural Rehabilitation Plan Restored to Relief Bill; Farm Loans Provided.

The Resettlement Administration won the first skirmish in the Senate fight over the $1,425,000,000 relief appropriation yesterday. By a vote of 38 to 28 a provision for rural rehabilitation was restored to the bill. It had been eliminated by the Appropriations Committee.

The effect of the Senate's action, which followed a long debate led by Senator La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, is to broaden somewhat the curtailed powers of Dr. Rexford G. Tugwell, resettlement administrator. As amended, the measure appropriates $85,500,000 "for rural rehabilitation, loans and relief to farmers and livestock growers."

All committee amendments, except those applying to relief, were accepted in consideration of the bill, which carries a total appropriation of $2,369,000,000. Progress was being made very slowly in consideration of the relief section, although the Senate tentatively adopted the amendment turning the money over to President Roosevelt instead of to Harry L. Hopkins, works progress administrator.

G. O. P. Amendment.

Consideration of the bill is expected to be resumed today, with the possibility that the Senate will be held in session tonight to pass it and make way for the tax bill. A score of amendments already have been submitted from the floor and must be disposed of. Among them is the principal Republican amendment to turn relief money over to the States.

"The great amount of criticism of the Resettlement Administration is not justified when the facts are known," La Follette told the Senate. "The soil conservation program of the RA may prove to be one of the

Way Now Cleared For June 6 Recess

Bill Stripped of 11th-Hour Presidential Proposals.

By Robert C. Albright.

Flatly refusing to follow the President into drastic taxation of corporate profits, Senate Finance Committee Democrats, in a secret caucus yesterday, put an end to days of dalliance by agreeing to report out their own tax bill today, minus eleventh-hour Administration recommendations.

It was the second sharp rebuff dealt the President on the tax issue, but it shattered an impasse that threatened the leadership's June 6 adjournment plans, and cleared the way for Senate consideration of the tax bill, last master key to adjournment, early next week. Leaders said it means Congress can complete its work by June 6.

Last-minute agreement on the Senate's modified tax rates followed a day of uncertainty, which produced four new attempts by Administration Senators to frame a compromise, and much talk of another White House conference. Conservative Democrats, who said they had gone their limit in the compromise approved previously by the committee, would accept no steeper substitute.

Now Up to Senate.

The decision to report out the bill, which will be put to a vote of the full Senate Finance Committee today, projected the Administration's fight for high undivided profits taxes definitely into the Senate, and thence into conference with the House, which already has approved the high Administration rates.

In the background of yesterday's broken deadlock was said to be Vice President John Nance Garner, although committeemen declined to discuss the role he played. Garner did not participate in the formal discussions, but called two Senators out of the committee. Garner traditionally has taken the view that the place to iron out differences is in the final conferences between House and Senate.

The committee's own plan, frowned on by the President but expected to be reported favorably today, taxes corporation income and dividends as follows:

Eighteen per cent flat tax on corporation income, compared with 12½ to 15 per cent under present law.

Seven per cent additional tax on undistributed corporate profits, compared with no surtax under existing law.

Four per cent individual income tax on dividends received by shareholders, compared with no such tax at present.

Continuance of existing capital stock and excess profits levies.

Yield Put at $560,000,000.

These changes, coupled with special rates to encourage liquidation of personal holding companies, experts said would yield about $560,000,000. A so-called "windfall" tax on refunded processing taxes would add another $82,000,000 to the bill, and new import rates on certain fish and vegetable oils another $10,000,000. Nevertheless, the committee measure was said to fall shy more than $500,000,000 of the total of $1,137,000,000 in permanent and temporary taxes asked by the President.

Ostensibly protesting this revenue shortage, the President on Tuesday night told committee Democrats he favored higher rates on undivided corporate profits, and suggetsed that new schedules be prepared by the Treasury. When these were forthcoming, so-called conservative members of the committee declared, they were far more drastic than the House rates, and would add only from $60,000,000 to $70,000,000 more revenue to the bill.

As a "courtesy" to the President,

Queen Mary Logs 28.73 Knots; Record Crossing Within Grasp

Passengers, still uninformed whether a speed trial was in progress, reported vibrations of metal furniture in the aft sections.

After delay in Cherbourg Harbor, the British vessel steamed westward at an average speed of 28.73 knots, indicating the ship traveled her top speed of 32 knots at least several times during a course of 326 miles.

Officials declined to state the highest speed, but if the Queen Mary ran more than 31.30 knots for an hour it would better the French Normandie's best average for one hour of official time.

The log of the westward Atlantic crossing was started at the end of the Cherbourg breakwater, reversing previous plans to begin the official record from Bishops Rock at the west entrance of the English Channel. The giant liner paused at Cherbourg, with various reasons—including loading of gold shipments—advanced for the delay.

Lowden Avoids Definite Stand On Nomination

Ex-Governor of Illinois, Back From Europe, Has 'Open Mind.'

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 28.—Former Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois today said on his return from a six-week visit to Europe that he was maintaining an open mind on questions as to which aspirant should get the Republican Presidential nomination.

"There are few in the field I could not heartily support," he declared, naming several leading candidates. "And there might be others in the field since I left that I don't know about."

Asked whether he thought the Republicans should have a progressive or a conservative candidate, he replied:

"A good candidate."

Beyond this he declined to discuss politics, turning away questions with the statement:

"After all, I've been away for six weeks."

"What's the crop situation?" Lowden inquired. "I've heard a lot of tall tales while I've been gone about drought."

When he was asked if he had any comment on the suggestion of Robert Lucas, former executive director of the Republican National Committee, that he be made permanent chairman of the national convention, he replied with mock seriousness:

"I have had a very nice time taking the baths at Baden-Baden, Germany."

"What do you consider a necessary agricultural plank in the Republican platform?" he was asked.

"The hill climbing and walking in Germany have done me a world of good," he replied.

Then, in a more serious vein, he said:

"When the Republican National Convention meets, I am going to be on the back of Juno, the old mare, on my Sinnissippi farm, looking over the cornfields."

He was accompanied on his vacation by Mrs. Lowden and Alanson B. Houghton, former United States Ambassador to Great Britain and Germany.

Butler for Landon.

Buffalo, N. Y., May 28 (AP).—Edward H. Butler, published of the Buffalo Evening News and delegate at large to the Republican National Convention, today said he was "prepared to vote for the nomination of Gov. Landon for President."

Butler is the eighth member of the uninstructed New York delegation of 90 to declare in favor of Landon. Yesterday Edwin C. Jaeckle, Erie County chairman, announced the six delegates from Erie and Niagara counties would "favor" Landon, and a short time ago John C. Clark, of Binghamton, announced he also would support him.

"My observations throughout the State lead me to believe that the public generally * * * favor the nomination of Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas by the Republican National Convention," Butler said.

Coughlin Cohort Groomed.

Detroit, May 28 (AP).—Petitions were being circulated today for the nomination of Louis B. Ward, one of the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin's chief assistants, as a candidate for United States Senator on the Democratic ticket.

Political observers regard the petitions as an indication that the Royal Oak radio priest and his National Union for Social Justice might take an active part in the coming Michigan political campaign, although Ward denied he was the candidate of Father Coughlin or his organization.

Ward, an advertising man, has been listed as a lobbyist for the National Union for Social Justice in Washington. He also has written a biography of Father Coughlin.

Borah Fails to Attack Landon in Radio Speech; Makes No Threat of Bolting the Party.

By Franklyn Waltman

UNDOUBTEDLY all the campaign workers in Gov. Alf M. Landon's vineyard breathed a sigh of relief last night when Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, completed his radio speech. The Idahoan, in the view of many, had shot his last bolt—and he had neither attacked Gov. Landon nor specifically threatened to bolt the party!

WALTMAN

It made all the Landonites feel good—not because they suffer from guilty consciences, since they are fervently convinced that the Kansas Governor's record is as clean as a hound's tooth—but because recent reports and rumors had worked some of the Landon lieutenants into a mild case of jitters.

Stories that Senator Borah would loose a withering attack on Gov. Landon, or that he would flatly state that if the party nominated the Kansan he would bolt, had been repeated so frequently that the Landon managers were looking for trouble last night. But it did not come.

And now it appears more certain than a week ago that Gov. Landon will be the Republican Presidential nominee. If Senator Borah had anything against Gov. Landon which he felt impelled to express, last night was his opportunity. The occasion had been splendidly built up for him. His speech was heralded as the chief political event of the week. The political reporters early in the day lined up for copies of the address. The politically inclined everywhere tuned in to hear the Lion of Idaho—growl or purr.

He did not exactly purr—but he did not growl. As a political speech Senator Borah's address was a good one—a very good one. It constituted an excellent discussion of the problem of industrial monopolies, which the Republicans might well take to heart, for there are many in this country who agree with the Idahoan on that score. But there was nothing spectacular or startling about the address. Wittingly or unwittingly, the reports that Senator Borah would skin Gov. Landon got him an audience—and he settled down to the business of expounding some good economic and political philosophy.

We do not say that Senator Borah played any part in building up anticipation over and interest in his address last night. But it recalls a story of the late Huey P. Long. He announced to the reporters one morning that he would go on the air that evening and take Gen. Hugh S. Johnson apart—and in little pieces. The story was played on the front page of virtually every newspaper in the country.

That evening Senator Long took a few mild flings at Gen. Johnson and then launched into a lengthy exposition of his share-the-wealth program. When he completed his speech, one of those present in the studio asked if he had developed cold feet about flaying Gen. Johnson.

"Did you ever sell patent medicines?" asked Long.

"No; but what has that to do with it?" asserted the inquirer.

"Well, I have," retorted Long, "and you have to get an audience before you can make any sales. I was getting an audience when I pulled that interview."

But to return to Senator Borah: It is unlikely that he again will have a chance to lay his position effectively before the country prior to the nomination of a Presidential candidate at Cleveland. He is not a delegate to the convention and consequently will not be in a position to address that body. Thus it is assumed that if Senator Borah had anything to say against Gov. Landon—as he repeatedly has been reported—he would have said it last night.

It is true that Senator Borah left the door slightly ajar when he asserted that his interest in curbing industrial monopolies transcended all personal considerations for him and that "what the party does under present conditions, therefore, I must regard as final." And he indicated that he wished a candidate committed to smashing monopolies as well as a platform.

There is no doubt that the Republican Party will have a ringing plank assailing industrial monopolies and calling for their restriction. Senator Borah, at least, has achieved that. This can be predicted safely because in recent weeks each of the Republican possibilities has gone out of his way to make clear that he is opposed to industrial monopolies.

Gov. Landon did this in his radio interview of several weeks ago; no less than Col. Frank Knox and Senator Arthur Vandenberg have done it. And there is no reason to believe that anyone of them, if nominated and elected to the Presidency, would go back on their promises in that respect.

As for Gov. Landon, who appears as the most probable nominee, he has had personal experience with monopolies in the way of oil companies, pipe line companies and railroads when he was engaged in the oil business as an independent operator. In those years he constantly battled the big companies—and frequently licked them.

Since his advent in public life, Gov. Landon has not been kind to the Standard Oil and other large oil combines. On one occasion he gave them a merry chase in Kansas and they capitulated to his demands. Any contention that the Standard Oil or any other big oil company owns Landon or that he would do their bidding is a subject for amazement and snorts of laughter out in the oil country. Even Democratic newspapers—supporting President Roosevelt—have denounced such contentions. The Landon hands, in a political sense, are not soiled with oil.

Work Pushed In Republicans' Cleveland Hall

Loud-Speakers Installed; Accommodations Made for 15,000.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 28.—Electricians, carpenters, sound engineers and others worked feverishly today to complete preparations in Public Hall for the Republican National Convention, starting June 9, when the party will choose candidates and adopt a platform for the 1936 Presidential campaign.

"All phases of arrangements are up to schedule," said James L. E. Jappe, secretary of the Cleveland convention committee. "When delegates arrive they will find the stage set in every detail."

Giant loud speakers stood in hallways as engineers and electricians progressed with installation of an elaborate new public address system.

From the speakers ramp, reaching deep into the seating arena, Senator Frederick Steiwer, of Oregon, the temporary chairman, will open the convention and deliver his keynote address. From there also Congressman Bertrand H. Snell, of New York, choice of the arrangements committee for permanent chairman, will guide the convention's progress.

Will Seat 15,000.

The revamped hall will seat proximately 15,000 persons. The committee has assigned 2,761 seats to delegates and representatives of the press.

Ralph Williams, of Oregon, vice chairman of the national committee, said, "If we had 100,000 seats we could not satisfy the demand for tickets."

The party's national arrangements committee will hold its final preconvention session next Tuesday. The national committee will meet here next Wednesday to prepare the temporary roll of the convention and open a hearing on contests for seats.

Secretary—LaFayette B. Gleason, New York.

Chief Assistant Secretary—Charles M. Harger, Kansas.

New Trial Is Won By Negro Slayer

Montgomery, Ala., May 28 (AP).—The Alabama Supreme Court today granted a new trial to a Negro convicted of killing a white man on the grounds the 30-year sentence was "excessive and unjust" and the result of "passion or race prejudice."

The court's opinion said the Negro, Richard Goldsmith, should not have been convicted for any offense higher than first degree manslaughter "conceding that he fired the fatal shot that killed Guy Sellers."

"The record discloses the most reprehensible conduct on the part of the deceased and his companions, the State's two witnesses, who invaded the sanctity of the home of a helpless old Negro woman, terrorizing the inmates, and for the evident purpose of prostituting her granddaughter or for some other improper purpose."

Pinchot Visits Landon; Tells Party's Needs

Independent G. O. P. Says He Is 'Favorably Impresesd' by Kansan.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., May 28.—Observing that Gov. Alf M. Landon had given him an "extremely favorable impression," Gifford Pinchot, independent Republican and former Governor of Pennsylvania, said in an interview tonight the Republican Party must have "a progressive candidate on a progressive platform" to win in 1936.

Pinchot held a press conference on the front of the executive mansion after he and his old friend, William Allen White, editor, were dinner guests of Landon.

Smiling and chatting rapidly, Pinchot said:

"In my opinion no man can win the Presidency who does not present a progressive platform."

"Do you cansider Landon a progressive?" he was asked.

"I don't believe anyone can talk with him for five minutes without getting the impression that Landon is a progressive."

Pinchot declined comment on the address tonight of Senator Borah, of Idaho, who seeks the party's Presidential nomination.

Pinchot and White arrived by motor car for dinner when the Borah broadcast was about half completed. Gov. Landon, in response to questions, said he had heard "parts" of the Borah address. He also had no comment.

Asked if he would be "receptive" to the Republican Vice Presidential nomination, the gray-haired Pinchot said:

"I have lived long enough to know better than to accept invitations before they are made."

Plea to Youths.

Pittsburg, Kans., May 28 (AP).—William Allen White, noted Emporia editor and author, sounded a plea to youth of the land today to "stick to" the democratic form of government and avoid "the threat of economic security without liberty."

"There are only two kinds of government in the world," White told Pittsburg State Teachers College graduates in a commencement talk.

"One kind of government in which the people govern themselves reasoning it all out with free speech and in parliamentary debate.

"The other herds the people about by ukase, by proclamation, by supermen, by minorities seizing power and defying the majority.

"Although the menace is abroad in the world, America now is immune from the threat of economic security without liberty," he said, "but it is in the air.

"Surely there is something valuable in our theory of government by the consent of the governed—the ancient rule of reason through the ballot box, * * * surely the old way, the slow way, the democratic way, the free way of liberty under law must persist in this, our beloved country."

Mrs. Thomas to Seek Husband's House Seat

Troy, N. Y., May 28 (AP).—Mrs. William D. Thomas announced here today that she would be a candidate for the Republican nomination for Representative from the Twenty-ninth Congressional District to succeed her husband, the late Representative Thomas, of Hoosick Falls.

Representative Thomas died last week in Washington.

Mrs. Thomas helped conduct his affairs during his long illness, and was always active with him in Washington. She has a daughter in high school.

New York State now has one woman Representative in Congress, Mrs. Caroline O'Day (Democrat), of Westchester.

Gen. Spalding Named to Post Held by Lincoln

Latter to Retire at Once as Assistant Staff Chief on Disability.

Brig. Gen. Charles S. Lincoln, assistant chief of staff in charge of the supply division of the General Staff, was ordered home to wait retirement yesterday because of physical disability. He is 61 years old.

He will be succeeded by Brig. Gen. George R. Spalding, now Army division engineer at New York City.

The War Department also announced that Maj. Gen. Stanley D. Embick will assume his duties as deputy chief of staff in charge of the war plans division.

In the Army service for 35 years, Gen. Spalding had four previous tours of duty in the Washington area. In 1903 he was attached to Company E, second battalion engineers in this city; in 1917 he served with the Reserve Officers Training camps at Fort Myer and Fort Lee; in July, 1919, he was a student and instructor at the Army War College, graduating in 1920 and staying on until 1923, while from 1933 to 1935 he commanded the post and engineer school at Fort Humphreys.

He was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal, the French Legion or Honor and the Belgian Order of Leopold.

Tax Deadlock Broken

some members of this group suggested that a delegation from the committee ought to call again at the White House and inform Mr. Roosevelt they could not go along. After arguments pro and con over who should go, this plan was abandoned.

The afternoon caucus of committee Democrats, where the impasse was broken in favor of the committee's own bill, was summoned by Senator William H. King, Utah, acting chairman during the illness of Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi. An agreement was entered "not to talk" about the understanding reached.

At least three Democrats are said to have opposed the compromise—Senators Barkley, of Kentucky; Black, of Alabama, and Connally, of Texas. Nevertheless, a majority of 12 votes is expected to line up for the plan at the full committee meeting this morning.

The last stand to revise upward the committee's rates in line with the President's suggestions was made at a morning meeting of the group. With a motion still pending by Senator Walter F. Edge, of Georgia, to reaffirm compromise action, Senators Black and Barkley each offered two modifications of the plan outlined at the White House Tuesday. These substitutes projected the committe into fresh controversy, and were not accepted.

Barkley's Plan Outlined.

One plan by Barkley would have repealed capital stock and excess profits levies, continued the 12½ to 15 per cent corporation income tax, made dividends taxable at 4 per cent, and imposed surtaxes on undivided profits ranging from 13 to 40 per cent, to raise a total of $625,000,000. The second proposal by Barkley, designed to raise $617,000,000, would have retained the present capital stock and excess profits levies, continued present corporation income taxes, made dividends taxable at 4 per cent, and imposed levies ranging from 8 to 40 per cent on undivided profits.

Senator Black offered a plan to raise $650,000,000 by retaining the capital stock and corporation income taxes, applying income taxes to dividends, and imposing rates on undivided profits ranging to 30 per cent, but with the first 20 per cent of earnings exempt. An alternative put forward by Black would have raised only $485,000,000. This plan exempted the first 30 per cent of undivided profits from surtax, but imposed rates ranging to 30 per cent, where more than half of a company's earnings was withheld from shareholders.

With a majority of committee Democrats opposed to anything higher than a 7 per cent tax on undivided profits, the Black and Barkley proposals merely served to prolong the discussion

Faced with determined committee sentiment, the President acquiesced in the decision to report favorably the committee plan to avoid an adjournment impasse, it was believed. Through Administration committee stalwarts, he previously had fought the same battle to stiffen undivided profits taxes, and only through patient negotiation by Chairman Harrison had the rate finally been worked up to 7 per cent. Believing this was the best he could do, Harrison is said have agreed to fight for no higher rates on the Senate floor.

Senator Harry Flood Byrd, of Virginia, who submarined the steep House undivided tax rates a fortnight ago by disclosing that many larger corporations would escape tax-free, aired his revenue views in the Senate yesterday.

"I have frequently expressed my approval of additional revenue if we continue our huge spending program," he said, "yet in the rush of adjournment we should not adopt ill-considered and half-baked legislation which may do great harm to many. I will vote for any reasonably sound tax legislation, but suggest as one solution a reduction in spending equivalent to the new revenue anticipated, and then a careful study by a commission of our entire tax structure so as to equitably impose the new burdens and especially to explore the field of tax-exempt securities as a source of new revenue.

"Even after including the revenue expected from the House bill, the deficit in 1937 is estimated by the budget director to be $2,675,636,720, and this does not include the flood control bill and other appropriations recently enacted."

Cummings Bars Hooded Legion Inquiry by U.S.

Sen. Benson Asks Congress to Act; Intimidation in Ohio Charged.

By the United Press.

The Department of Justice yesterday declined temporarily to join the investigation of Black Legion terroristic activities because there was insufficient evidence that Federal laws had been violated.

Duncan C. McCrea, Detroit prosecuting attorney, had appealed for aid from the Federal agents after his investigation of the slaying of a WPA worker by the night-riding band because he "knew too much" uncovered evidence indicating the terrorists were operating in more than 15 States.

Attorney General Homer S. Cummings replied that more information concerning possible Federal law violations would be necessary before the Justice Department agents could enter the case, but left the way open for throwing Federal men into the investigation by inviting McCrea to submit such information.

"As of course you are aware," Cummings telegraphed McCrea, "the authority of the Department of Justice in criminal matters is limited to violations of Federal statutes. If you have any information indicating that a Federal offense has been committed, I would suggest that you submit the same to the Department of Justice."

Congress Inquiry Nearer.

Meanwhile, efforts for Congressional investigation of the Black Legion and other "un-American" secret orders gained impetus on Capitol Hill.

A thorough inquiry into all such "subversive" organizations by a joint Congressional committee was proposed in a resolution introduced in the Senate yesterday by Senator Elmer Benson (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota. A similar resolution was offered in the House Wednesday by Representative Samuel Dickstein (Republican) New York.

Benson urged Congress to act promptly before "we awake to the day when our cherished American liberty will be a thing of the past." His proposal called for appointment of four Senators and four Representatives with full power to make a thorough investigation of secret orders "seeking to establish dictatorship or rule by force and terror in the United States."

New Appeal to U. S.

Detroit, May 28 (AP).—New appeals to the Federal Government to throw its power into the fight to uproot the Black Legion, secret society of night-riding terrorists, were before a half dozen governmental agencies tonight.

Resolutions demanding Congressional investigations awaited action in both the House and Senate in Washington, where the Michigan Democratic Congressional committee was drafting legislation to empower J. Edgar Hoover's Department of Justice operatives to strike at the black-robed order.

Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea sought new light on the extent of the Black Legion, which he believes is active in at least 15 States, by proposing that the Internal Revenue Department check up on the income tax returns of Virgil F. Effinger, Lima (Ohio) contractor, who has asserted that the organization has a national membership of 6,000,000.

Cites Collections.

McCrea said he had evidence indicating that Effinger is collecting 10 cents a month from members of the Black Legion, as well as selling them the death's head robes and other regalia they are charged with wearing on the midnight flogging parties of which they are accused in several States.

Postoffice inspectors were reported at work in Jackson, Mich., where five men are charged with beating a reluctant member with the heavy, three-pronged whips such as have been seized in several recent raids, checking reports that mail carriers there belonged to the order. One mail carrier is under suspension.

Still another Federal inquiry was sought by Representative Dingell (Democrat), of Michigan, who said he would ask that a Federal grand jury be called.

In Detroit, where the slaying of Charles A. Poole, May 13, led to the fast moving expose of the Black Legion, charges were heard that the shrouded band had enrolled numerous Detroit patrolmen and southern Michigan prison guards in an effort to build up swiftly an organization skilled in the use of firearms and permitted legally to own them.

Officers' Names Listed.

"We have no idea how deep inroads of the Black Legion into police personnel may be," said Chief of Detectives Henry W. Piel. "The names of several officers have been found on lists seized from Black Legion members."

Three teams of detectives were assigned to the investigation and five police officers were summoned to the office of Police Commissioner Heinrich Pickert for questioning.

A parallel investigation is under way in the department of street railways, and eight employes have been suspended.

A resolution demanding an investigation of the Black Legion in Ohio, where it has been accused of night riding and with attempting to gain control of relief activities in the Lima area, was placed before the Ohio Senate immediately after an earlier resolution to the same effect had been defeated.

In Boston, officials said State detectives and Federal potal inspectors were attempting to learn if numerous threatening letters and dummy bombs sent recently to citizens and officials in New England were the work of the Black Legion.

Echo in Kentucky.

Still other echoes of terrorism were heard in Saylersville, Ky., where a number of floggings of both men and women were attributed by authorities to a secret society known as the "Black Legs." It was not known whether the group there was affiliated with the Black Legion.

Possible use of the Michigan criminal syndicalism statute as a weapon against the Black Legion was studied today by Prosecutor Owen Dudley, of Jackson County, who said the law prohibits any "advocacy of crime, sabotage, violence or terrorism as a means of accomplishing industrial or political reforms."

2 Local Women In Holy Land Scoff at Danger

Palestine Factions Issue 'Almost Engraved' Riot Cards, They Say.

Despite the fact they have been stoned by rioters and are almost constantly in danger, two Washington women, Dr. A. Maris Boggs, director of the Bureau of Commercial Economics, and Miss Quincy Smith, daughter of the late E. Quincy Smith, dislike the current disorders in Jerusalem, where they are living, because, they nonchalantly say, the trouble interferes with their "daily rides."

"We're staging a little private war of our own in Palestine between the Arabs and the Jews, with a little anti-Christian animosity thrown in," said Miss Boggs in a letter received yesterday by Miss Willard Howe, an employe of the General Accounting Office, who lives at 1230 Quincy street northeast.

"The Jews mistake us for Arabs and toss stones at Benjy (which is what we have named our American auto); while the Arabs mistake us for Jews and toss a few more."

Take Turn About.

Miss Boggs said that the rioting takes place almost according to schedule. "The Mohammedans murder the Jews on Friday * * * and on Saturday (the Jewish Sabbath) the Jews murder the Arabs."

She told of having been warned by an Arab "to get home at once, as at 10 o'clock the Jews were scheduled to start killing."

"You see, almost engraved invitations are issued just at what hour one is to be killed—so polite are they. My informant was correct. At that hour such Jews as had dared to open their shops shut them, or rather, pulled down the steel shutters. Then the battle began.

"The British, however, have the situation well in hand. We are under martial law and have been for some time. The police and soldiers, always in pairs or more, carry their guns ready for instant use.

"There was to be a so-called "great program" today, but it only resulted in the usual strewing of the streets with tacks to puncture tires and do other damage. Cars left on the streets are burned and some few Jews have been killed.

"We live on the edge of a wealthy Jewish sector—in the newly developed part of Jerusalem—in a most isolated spot with no phone. Phones may be installed after months of waiting, and we are waiting.

Rides Restricted.

"All this trouble, however, restricts our daily rides. We are permitted only to go to Bethlehem three and one-half miles to the south and to Ramallah, 12 miles to the north. All other rides are unsafe. Meanwhile we are living most happily and cheerfully in our new little home."

Dr. Boggs founded the Bureau of Commercial Economics in 1913, shortly after her graduation from Bryn Mawr. The purpose of the organization is to promote friendship between nations through showing educational films.

Dr. Boggs is a fellow of the Royal Geographic Society and a member of the Academy of World Economics and of the Academy of Political and Social Sciences.

She and Quincy Smith have been traveling in the East for nearly a year. They have lived in Jerusalem for the past six months.

Riots Mount in Holy Land

lieve Il Duce will launch a big naval building program soon if finances permit. But, until new units can be added, Italy plans to rely upon its mine layers, submarines and bombing planes.

Grandi Sees Eden.

London, May 28 (AP).—Mussolini's apparent effort to smooth England's ruffled feelings gained impetus tonight through Ambassador Lino Grandi's long visit with Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden.

Other signs have pointed to apparent overtures, but the London press was salty. The Star said editorially:

"Mussolini condescends through newspaper interviews to tell us his terms for being a good Christian neighbor. Among other things it seems sanctions must go and the British navy must withdraw from the Mediterranean.

"Then his excellency in Rome will remove his Libya army and grant Britain an inestimable boon in his agreeable friendship. After that doubtless he'd like more trade with us, and possibly a loan to help consolidate his civilizing mission in Africa.

"The dictator knows what he wants, and it looks like he's getting it, for he is finding sympathetic ears in influential places in Britain."

Other apparent unofficial Italian overtures were seen in Italy's avoidance of pressing for removal of British legation reinforcements from Addis Ababa.

London dispatches from Rome for several days have struck a more conciliatory note, with repeated statements that Italy harbors no aggressive intentions.

One obstacle to Italo-British harmony is Italian onti-British propaganda, which has caused the government to make a series of representations to Rome since last fall.

New Secretary Named.

The new cabinet minister, who is 51 and a Conservative, succeeds J. H. Thomas, Laborite, who resigned last week because of the government budget leakage scandal.

Authorities said the situation in Palestine was approaching a state of rebellion and that the full attention of a cabinet minister was needed.

U. S. Mission Endangered.

Khartoum, Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, May 28 (U.P.).—Foreigners besieged in the lonely American mission at Sayo, southwestern Ethiopia, were in grave danger of attack today when Galla warriors, 3,000 strong, fought a pitched battle with Ethiopian troops.

The Gallas, mobilized by their chieftain, who has deposed the Ethiopian governor of Wallega Province, precipitated bloody fighting when they attacked an Ethiopian customs official attempting to flee with the customs treasury.

The Galla chieftain has proclaimed himself king of Wallega, a province not yet occupied by the Italians.

A relief column dispatched by Marshal Rudolfo Graziani, acting viceroy and governor-general of Ethiopia, still is two days' march from Sayo. Messages brought by native runners reported the foreigners have not yet been attacked.

nor the rest of the Dionne family need worry about their normal requirements for the rest of their lives."

"The company," he said, has paid $250,000 down as advance payment. They have guaranteed another $50,000 in two years and, in addition, the babies will receive 10 per cent of the net reciepts from each picture as royalty.

"On the basis of actual acting time, this will amount to at least $10,000 an hour for the children."

Expresses Resentment.

The Dionnes' mother and father, who have five other older children, have been at odds with the guardians and the father frequently has expressed resentment that they were taken from his control. The quintuplets are the only ones of recorded medical history to live so long.

Perhaps as a concrete gesture toward healing the breach, however, the babies sent their parents the $1,000 check, approved by the guardians.

It was decided to change the name of the youngsters' home from "Dafoe Hospital" to "Dafoe Nursery." Croll explaining: "With the babies so well and sturdy, it is no longer a hospital."

Unnamed amounts were given by the guardians to the two nurses and the cook of the babies, their two housemaids, three provincial constables who guard them and their spiritual adviser, Father J. McNally.

Broadcast Party.

New York, May 28 (AP).—The Dionne quintuplets refused to do more than gurgle and cry for a broadcast celebration tonight of their second birthday.

But their physician, Dr. Allan Dafoe, and other speakers served for the temperamental sisters who have just become high-priced movie stars.

A hygienically treated microphone was used in the broadcast tonight direct from their playroom in Callander, Ontario.

"Today they are healthy, happy, normal children, celebrating their second birthday—the only record of its kind in medical history," reported Dr. Dafoe. After thanking the thousands of people who made "unselfish offers of help to the babies in the early days," Dr. Dafoe said, "I truly believe that without the power of Divine Providence our little Dionne girls would not be with us today."

Illness Forces Cutten to Quit Grain Market

Noted Speculator Reported Suffering From Chronic Heart Ailment.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 28.—Arthur W. Cutten, who rose from bookkeeper to become one of the world's greatest grain speculators, is through with the market.

Too ill to discuss his plans himself, his wife said today that a heart ailment, from which he has been recuperating since last December, "never would again permit him to take an active part in business affairs."

Ironically enough, the United States Supréme Court less than two weeks ago gave Cutten a clean slate to continue trading after the Grain Futures Administration sought to bar him from the Nation's commodity exchanges for two years.

It affirmed a ruling by the Circuit Court of Appeals of Chicago, which acquitted him of charges that he failed to report his holdings in 1930 and 1931 for the purpose of manipulating prices.

In that decision, Cutten, who often figured in Federal suits during 20 spectacular years in the market, won the greatest court battle in his career.

He was free to trade again, but illness shattered his plans.

"Mr. Cutten, never will be strong enough again to take up trading," his wife said. "He is just going to rest from now on."

She declared that Dr. Arthur F. Byfield, his attending physician, had ordered him not to think about his business or discuss it even with intimate friends.

Dr. Byfield said of Cutten:

"He is suffering from a chronic ailment which he always will have."

Despite his illness, Cutten still is in the courts. Last March 10, he was indicted for failing to pay $414,525 in Federal income taxes for 1929. Another indictment was returned against him April 28, charging he attempted to evade income payments totaling $229,944 for 1930 and 1933.

Eastern Bus Fares Will Be Cut June 1

Cleveland May 28 (AP).—L. H. Ristow, general traffic manager of the Greyhound System in eastern United States, announced today that "the most drastic and general rate cuts in the history of motor bus travel are to become effective Monday, June 1."

The cut, he said, would effect every city east of Chicago and the Mississippi River, north of the Ohio River and along the Atlantic Coast to Florida. There also will be a lowering of rates in certain Western and Southern States, he added.

The new fares bringing most long distance runs below 2 cents per mile and in many instances as low as 1¼ cent per mile, are as result of the company's conviction that the coming summer will bring the biggest travel season since boom times, he said.

Frank E. Ball Killed in Ohio Airplane Crash

By the Associated Press.

Findlay, Ohio, May 28.—Frank E. Ball, 33, wealthy Muncie, Ind., glass manufacturer and sportsman pilot, died in the wreckage of his private cabin plane today when it went into a spin and crashed near Findly Airport.

The ship burst into flames and burned his body so badly it was several hours before positive identification was established by Department of Commerce Inspector Joseph Reed, who said "there is no doubt the pilot was Ball."

Officials of the Barnhart funeral home, where the body was taken, said members of the Ball family in Muncie were en route to Findlay.

Circling the airport for a landing, the plane went into a spin when one wing seemingly collapsed, and crashed from an altitude of about 500 feet, bursting into flames instantly.

Before pilots and others from the airport could reach the wrecked craft it was destroyed, the flames burning away all identifying marks.

Ball, officials of the Muncie Airport said, left the field today alone, without announcing his destination.

Edward Leach, a pilot for the Mackey Flying Service, told Reed the plane had circled the airport and was turning into a normal position for landing.

"Then one wing panel seemed to collapse, and the ship went into a spin," he said. "It struck that way—nose down."

Coroner H. O. Crosby said the pilot undoubtedly died instantly.

Family Prominent.

Muncie, Ind., May 28 (AP).—Frank E. Ball, killed today in an airplane crash at Findlay, Ohio, was a member of a family long prominent in industrial and political life in Indiana.

He was assistant treasurer of the Ball Bros. Co., of Muncie, manufacturers of glass cans and bottles. His father, Frank C. Ball, is president of the firm.

George A. Ball, an uncle, is Republican national committeeman from Indiana.

Ball was graduated from Princeton University and stroked the varsity crew there for three years.

He became interested in aviation several years ago and he and his cousin, Edward F. Ball, hold most of the stock in the Muncie Airport.

Ball is survived by his parents, one brother, E. Arthur Ball; three sisters, Mrs. Alvin Owsley, wife of the U. S. Minister to the Irish Free State; and Mrs. Alexander Bracken and Mrs. Fred Petty, both of Muncie.

John Fiorenza Doomed to Die For Strangling

New York Jury Convicts Upholsterer as Titterton Murderer.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 28.—Trapped by a piece of string, the perpetrator of what appeared for several days to be a "perfect crime" tonight faced a mandatory death sentence for the murder of Nancy Titterton.

Rejecting his dual defense of alibi and insanity, a general sessions jury convicted John Fiorenza, 25, of assaulting the comely author in her Beekman place apartment and then strangling her with her own pajamas.

Fiorenza, dull-eyed, taciturn upholsterer who overlooked a bit of cord when he removed the traces of his crime, was remanded to the Tombs until June 3, when he will be consigned to the electric chair at Sing Sing.

Defense Counsel Henry Klauber, who had grown steadily more optimistic as the hours ticked away with no word from the jury room, said:

"An appeal is mandatory under the law and the law will be complied with."

Klauber expressed hope he would win a new trial for his client on the ground the jury was not permitted to consider a manslaughter or second-degree murder verdict.

The jury composed of business and professional men indicated some of its members were impressed with the insanity defense by calling at one point for the testimony of a psychiatrist who had pronounced Fiorenza a potential lunatic three years ago.

Complimenting them, Judge Charles C. Nott, jr., said their finding was "not only justified but absolutely required by the evidence."

U. S. Develops Way to Extract Its Manganese

Bureau of Mines Evolves Process to Cut Down Annual Imports.

By the Associated Press.

A new process for extracting manganese from low-grade American ore, holding potentialities of freeing this country from dependence on foreign supplies of the important metal, was announced yesterday by the Bureau of Mines.

For the first time pure manganese can be recovered electrolytically from ore containing as little as 10 to 15 per cent of the metal, R. S. Dean, chief metallurgist of the bureau, said.

Heretofore the United States has depended almost entirely on Russia, Brazil and parts of Africa for its annual requirement of about 370,000 tons of manganese. Because it is indispensable in the making of steel, a method for using this country's deposits has been sought for years. During the World War considerable difficulty was encountered in maintaining imports in quantities needed for commercial and war needs.

The new process, invented by S. M. Shelton, metallurgist of the bureau, makes recovery possible by keeping the acidity of the bath in which the metal is deposited absolutely constant and by including a reducing agent, to prevent oxidation.

Manganese is dissolved from the ore with sulphur dioxide, a by-product of smelting operations formerly discarded in large quantities, and an excess of finely divided ore is suspended in the tank to control acidity, Dean said.

Iron rods or plates are then inserted in the solution, an electric current is turned on, and the manganese separates from other elements to cling to the iron. After a thick deposit accumulates the rods or plates are lifted out, the manganese is broken off and the process is repeated.

With $84,600 expected to be provided in an appropriation bill now before Congress, the bureau plans to build a "pilot" plant at Boulder City, Nebr., to demonstrate the value of the process by producing several hundred pounds of the metal daily and to obtain accurate cost figures.

Strike Agreement Forced by France

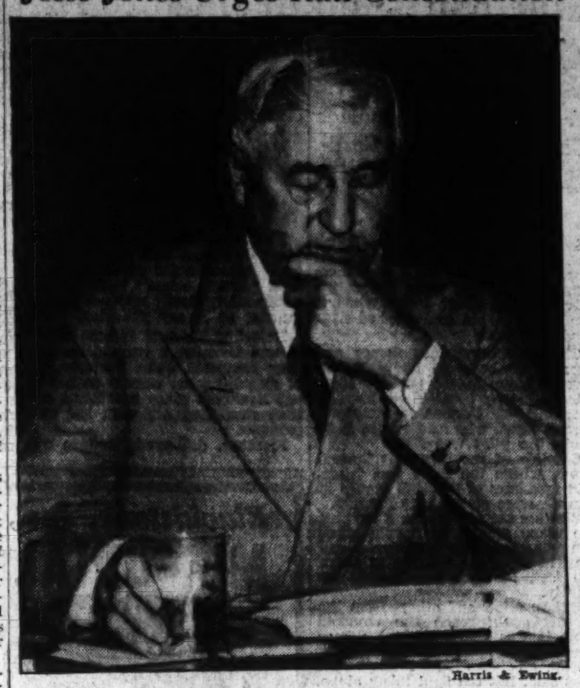
Paris, May 28 (AP).—The French government, alarmed over the spread of factory strikes to munitions plants, forced through an "agreement in principle" between operators and workers tonight.

The swiftly-growing forces of protesting employes—which reached 60,000 in three days—accepted a proposal to meet the owners at 4 p. m. tomorrow to formulate a "specific accord."

The workers, who have confined their walkout to a state of passive resistance, seek higher salaries, vacations with pay, a 40-hour week and collective-bargaining agreements.

The first clash of the strike occurred today at the great Renault auto factories—comparable to the large Detroit plants—when white-collar workers attempted to break through picket lines. Several were injured.

Jesse Jones Urges Rail Consolidation



Harris & Ewing.

Appearing before Senate Interstate Commerce Sub-committee, the RFC chairman complained of too much railroad mileage in the United States, advocating plan of consolidation; but stated it was likely executives would not welcome the suggestion because railroad presidents would be trading themselves out of jobs.

Weary House Cites Townsend

Dr. Townsend, the Rev. Clinton Wunder, of New York, and John B. Kiefer, of Chicago, chiefs of the Old Age Revolving Pensions, Ltd., for contempt of the House.

Dr. Townsend, commenting in Baltimore on the House action, said:

"The House was afraid to bring me before it for an open discussion of the merits of this notorious case."

After a swift taxicab ride to Baltimore with the Rev. Gerald K. Smith, the Bayou Messiah who inherited the mantle of the late Senator Huey P. Long as chief of the share-the-wealth movement, Dr. Townsend began issuing a barrage of statements.

These blasts challenged the discomfited committee to arrest him. Finally he ordered his officers, Wunder and Kiefer, already under subpena by the committee, to refuse to testify. They followed orders. Thus they likewise came under the committee's displeasure, which resulted Wednesday in a 6-to-2 vote to bring the matter up before the House yesterday.

The House preferred to turn the trial of Townsend over to the District Supreme Court rather than hold it in the chamber, in order not to spike early adjournment hopes.

As the proceedings got under way yesterday shortly after noon one member loudly called out, "Yay, lobsterpuss!" by way of greeting to sunburned Representative Marion A. Zioncheck (Democrat), Washington, otherwise known in news columns as "The Playboy of Harvard Hall," and other things significant of his numerous escapades during his recent four weeks' honeymoon.

Shortly after noon the House began to function on the resolution. By 12:40 p. m. the clerk was reading the lengthy committee report of Chairman C. Jasper Bell (Democrat), Missouri. The members sat, filing their fingernails, chatting, and tapping their feet impatiently, except to laugh and applaud when the report described Dr. Townsend's dramatic exit as he said, "That is all, gentlemen. Thank you and good-bye."

As the report ended, Blanton and Managhan were on their feet.

Speaker Byrns chose Representative Blanton, who made a point of order that the House itself should try the tall apostle of the $200-a-month gospel. The Speaker held his objection out of order. Monaghan then shouted his way into recognition, although Representative Bell had the floor.

With 11 plump lawbooks stacked before him, their edges showing numerous pink bookmarks, Monaghan was prepared to prove that the committee itself was out of order in making the Townsend investigation. Byrns whacked his gavel and matched his voice in shout for shout with the husky young Montana Townsendite as the House began to mumble impatiently.

In Baltimore, Dr. Townsend said he was "amused" that the House had not cited Downey for contempt also. He said the reason was that Downey would have been elected Governor of California if he had been cited.

Conviction on the contempt charge carries a maximum penalty of a year in jail or a $1,000 fine or both.

Monday the investigating committee will resume hearings on its inquiry into the Townsend plan.

Says He Would Weigh Any Proposal to Save M. & St. L. as Unit.

Reconstruction Finance Corporation Chairman Jesse Jones yesterday ridiculed charges that Frederick Prince, Boston financier, would profit from the RFC-approved dismemberment plan for the defunct Minneapolis and St. Louis Railroad.

He told a Senate Interstate Commerce sub-committee, headed by Senator Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, that the proposal to liquidate the road had been devised because bondholders could not agree among themselves. Then he heartened the committee, composed of Senators from the Midwest, whose States are served by the road, by saying that he was ready "at all times" to consider any adequate plan to save the line as a separate entity.

After arriving at the committee room half an hour late, Jones immediately launched into a discussion of the theory and practice of American railroading that startled the committee.

He declared there is too much railroad mileage, and some of it must go before the roads return to a profitable basis. He said dismemberment of roads and the abandonment of tracks was the only solution.

"Would you dismember other roads that are in the same situation as the M. & St. L.?" Shipstead asked him.

"We would if we could," Jones replied, "but it is pretty hard to get railroad executives to trade themselves out of a job."

The RFC chairman declared he would never give his assent to a railroad consolidation or dismemberment unless all employes were provided with jobs.

He said it was a policy of the corporation not to lend funds to roads abandoning spurs and lines that proved unprofitable. "Because a line doesn't pay is no reason for its abandonment," he declared. "It is the public service a road renders that determines its value, and I think you've got to take the core along with the apple."

Turning to the charges of James McElwee, a Peoria, Ill., manufacturer who previously told the committee the M. & St. L. deal had been entered into solely for the profit of Frederick Prince, Jones recounted the history of applications for RFC loans.

He said a tentative commitment for a loan of $4,750,000 had been made to a bondholder committee, headed by F. J. Lisman and Philip Roosevelt, both of New York, not long before the dismemberment plan was advanced.

This commitment, he said, brought protests from other bondholders, groups. Among the protestants was McElwee.

Jones quoted from a letter from Roosevelt in which the latter protested any RFC loans to the receiver on the grounds more funds would be requested from time to time, and that no loan should be made except for reorganization. This attitude was later taken by the RFC.

Reads Barringer Letter.

He then read a letter from the RFC's chief railroad examiner, John Barringer, who had been accused by McElwee of being a "tool" of Frederick Prince's, and of being responsible for the M. & St. L. abandonment plan.

Barriger called McElwee's accusal "manifestly ridiculous," and pointed that Prince, instead of gaining from the proposal, would have lost heavily. A communication from Lisman to Jones also branded McElwee's testimony as of no effect. "It is absurd on its face," Lisman's letter read, "because it could not possibly benefit Prince."

Chairman Shipstead questioned Jones at length over the latter's change from the bondholders' proposal to that agreed upon by the competing railroads, whose officers had agreed to take over the M. & St. L., scrapping about 600 miles of track.

Jones contended the dismemberment plan was the better, since it would strengthen the other roads, give a return to the bondholders, and "be in the public interest."

For more than an hour Jones and Shipstead argued the merits of the two plans, and the committee, admittedly favorable to maintaining the road in its present condition, received only cold comfort from the Jones answers.

Finally, however, Senator Murphy (Democrat), Iowa, took up the questioning. He reminded Jones of his service to the Great Northern Railroad in selling its bonds at 4 instead of 5 per cent. Jones, visibly warming at Murphy's phrases, at last agreed to consider any proposal that bondholders might put forward, and the committee immediately adjourned until next Tuesday, when Jones will be called to complete his testimony.

2 Civic Groups To Aid Cripples Get to School

P.-T. Congress Offers to Join Kiwanis Club in Affording Transport.

While fate of the deficiency bill remained in the hands of Congress, two civic organizations stood ready to aid 50 crippled children who can't get to school for lack of bus facilities.

The District Congress of Parents and Teachers which, through its student aid committee, has carried on extensive activity in behalf of needy children, offered to join the Kiwanis Club in an effort to enable all the 83 physically handicapped children to stay in school for the last three weeks of the term.

Without the $1,350 included in the deficiency bill, now before the Senate, school authorities on Wednesday stopped the five buses transporting boys and girls enrolled in Weightman and Magruder schools.

Yesterday more than half thepupils had to stay home. Only 21 of the 45 enrolled at Weightman could get there. Parents carried them to school in private cars. At Magruder School, where 38 Negro children are enrolled, 12 attended.

Yesterday Bynum E. Hinton, Kiwanis Club president, said members would lobby intensively for the bill. He said Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, assured him transportation for crippled children can be restored as soon as the $1,350 item is approved.

Thousands Join In U. S. Strikes For Higher Pay

By the United Press.

Factory hands, transportation workers and truck farmers in widely scattered sections of th country were on strike yesterday for higher wages and better working conditions.

At Syracuse, N. Y., striking Remington-Rand employes celebrated a victory when workers who voted to return to work failed to appear when the plant whistle blew. Union leaders said 7,500 employes were on strike.

At Chicago 3,000 members of the Warehouse, Store and Terminal Handlers, Checkers and Clerks Union walked out. They demanded 60 cents an hour, an eight-hour-day and a six-day week. The strike threatened to spread to thousands similarly employed.

At Milwaukee, 400 stevedores struck for higher wages. This disturbance threatened to spread to other Great Lakes ports and tie up shipping.

Three hundred taxi drivers were on strike at Dallas, Tex., for an increased percentage of fares.

Truck-farm workers walked out in California seeking higher pay, and textile workers in the Crown Wosted Mills plant at Providence, R. I., struck against a step-up in work loads and discrimination against union members.

Farm Strike Called.

Memphis, Tenn., May 28 (AP).—The Southern Tenant Farmers Union called a general strike in the east Arkansas cotton fields today to force plantation owners to deal with its representativese.

"Stop all work—stop every hoe—stop every plow—strike on every plantation and farm," said strike notices distributed in Cross, Crittenden nad St. Francis counties.

Cotton choppers already are on strike in the area, demanding a wage boost from $1 to $1.50 for a ten-hour day.

H. L. Mitchell, secretary of the union, said share-croppers, tenant farmers and day laborers generally were asked to join the strike.

He asserts that 3,00 cotton choppers walked out and that they will be joined by hundreds of share-croppers and tenants.

Murderer of Woman Sentenced to 199 Years

Chicago, May 28 (AP).—Thomas Starr, 28, Negro rag picker, was sentenced today to serve 199 years in the Joliet State Penitentiary for the murder of Mrs. Lillian Guild, 59-year-old gift shop manager. Mrs. Guild was killed with a brick in a Y. W. C. A. hotel room on May 9.

An additional sentence of one year to life, to run concurrently, was imposed by Chief Justice Dennis J. Normoyle on a burglary charge, the result of his invasion of the room of Miss Lois Rickert, at the St. Luke's Hospital nurse's home five days after Mrs. Guild was slain.

Starr pleaded guilty to both charges.

Culbertsons Bridge

A Bad Pre-emptive Bid.

From time immemorial one of the major points of difference in the bidding of bridge hands has been on the subject of pre-emptive bidding. Players who are in the most complete agreement on a system of bidding as a whole, split into two distinct schools where pre-emptive bids are concerned, the first maintaining that virtually all pre-emptive bids are unwise in that they shut out the partner more effectively than they do the opponents; the other school just as stoutly insisting that the bids, properly used, are of enormous value.

Personally, I always have believed that pre-emptive bids, properly used, are valuable, but it cannot be denied that they have been more greatly misused by average players than any other class of bids. This is, in part, my reason for introducing into the Culbertson system a radically new type of opening three bid, which will be fully discussed in this column shortly.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
4 spades	Pass	Pass	5 hearts
Pass	Pass	5 spades	Pass
Pass	Pass

South's first hand pre-emptive bid was bad, inasmuch as his partner had not yet passed, and he himself held more than three defensive honor tricks. It always has been an important tenet of the Culbertson system that pre-emptive bids, partner not yet having passed, should have an upper limit of two plus honor tricks. The reason for this rule is, of course, obvious: hands with three honor tricks and more, if opened pre-emptively, may well lose out on slam opportunities, due to the difficulty of getting together with partner. That is just what happened on this hand.

North, despite his two and one-half honor tricks, was helpless over South's four spade bid. There was absolutely no means by which he might tell whether his hand would be valuable enough in connection with South's to fulfill a 12 or 13 trick contract, and his pass to four spades was, therefore, quite correct. Of course, when the five heart bid was passed around to him he had to take some action on his hand and, in my opinion, made a good choice in bidding five spades.

Obviously, however, a splendid opportunity was lost, inasmuch as a grand slam in diamonds was a lay-down and, at the least, a small slam could have been reached had South opened the bidding properly with only one spade.

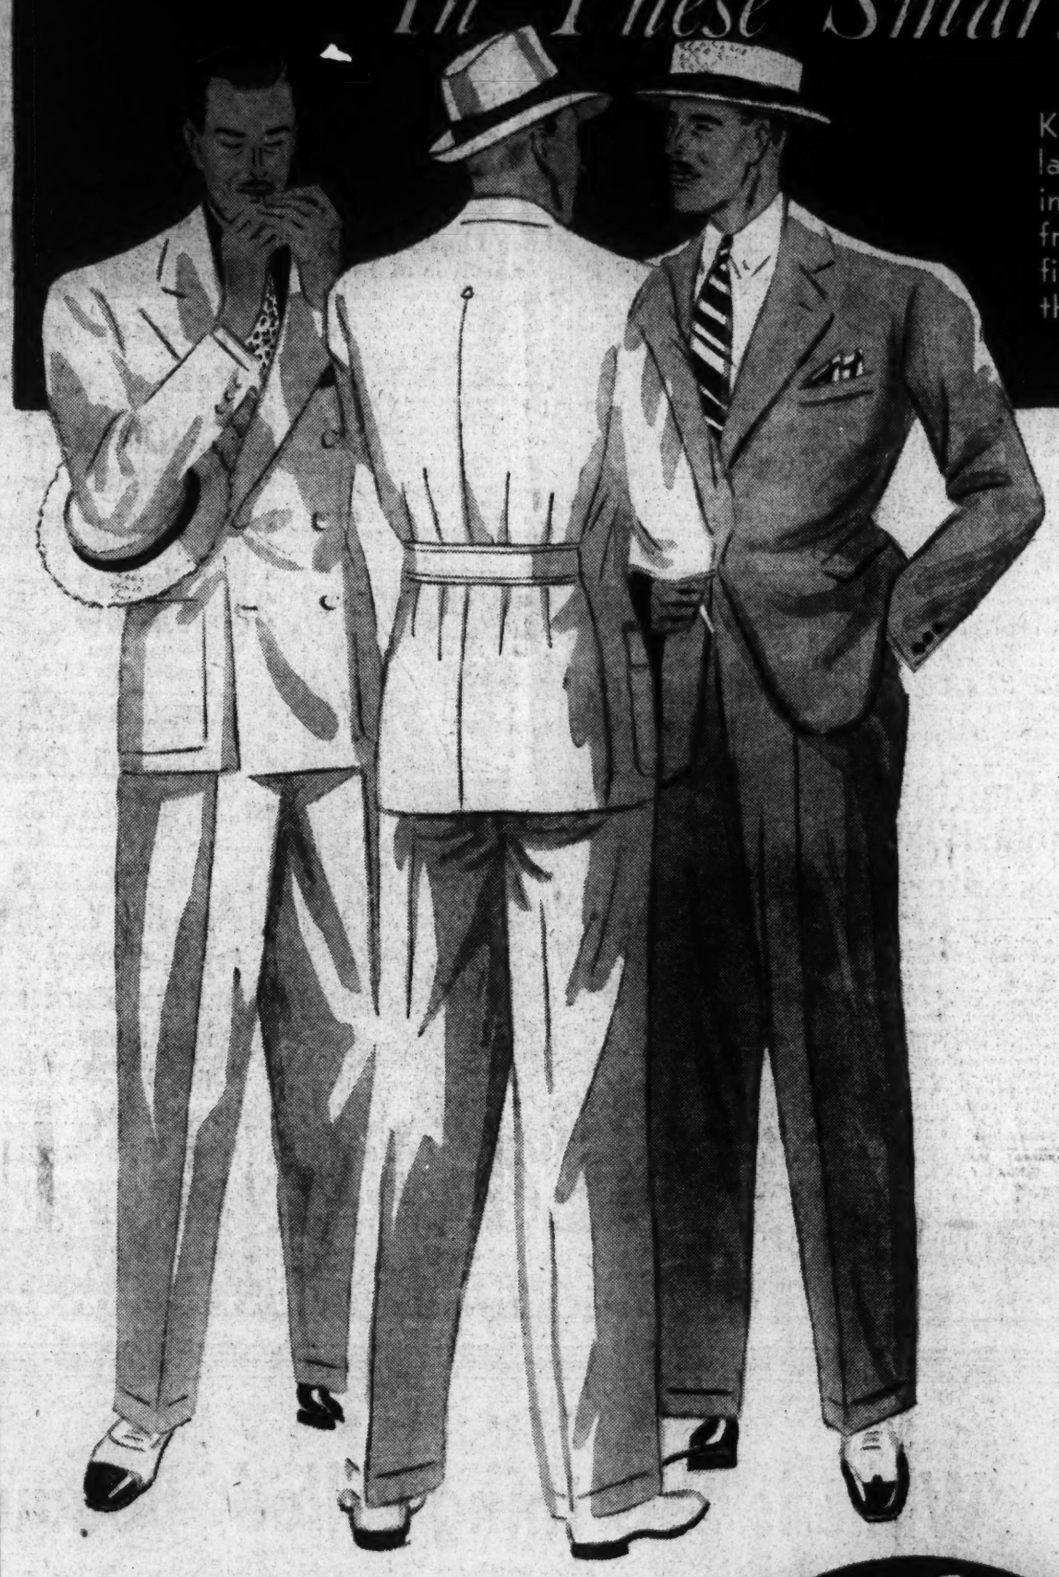
In These Smart, Cool Suits



Keeping smart and comfortably cool this Summer is largely a matter of visiting The Men's Store—and choosing your Summer apparel from this large selection of frosty-cool clothes. And Woodward & Lothrop's careful fitting and attention to detail play a vital part in making the suit you choose as smart in August as it is in June.

Fine Summer Suits
With Vests $45

For those men who consider a fine suit incomplete without a vest for proper grooming, we recommend these three-piece lightweight suits. The vests are so light as to be practically hardly noticeable. Finely-woven gabardines in white and Summer shades and tropical worsteds in the new checks, stripes and plain colors.

Other Summer Suits, with Vests, $29.50 and $35

Tropical Worsted Suits
2 Pieces $22.50

Made of all-worsted yarns, they look like heavier suits and keep their shape longer. A special loose, open-weave keeps you cool by letting your body breathe freely. For business and sports wear in crisp shades and neat patterns.

Palm Beach Suits
2 Pieces $16.75

The by-word among men for Summer style and lasting heat-free clothing. The suit that meets every occasion of warm weather. In handsome new darker shades, distinctive fleck weaves, checks, plaids. You will like them better than ever.

Seersucker Suits
2 Pieces $12.75

It is always "fine weather" for the man who gets down to business in a Lorraine-Seersucker suit, for they are airy-light to keep your mind free from weather conditions. Sports styles, too.

Irish Linen Suits
2 Pieces $16.50

Always the leader in Summer smartness—always correct. Highly mercerized to give a lustrous, snow-white finish. Double tub shrunk for correct fit. Single and double breasted and sports models.

Bill to Prevent Chain Price Cut Passed in House

Roll-Call Record Vote Is Averted in Strategy by Bankhead.

Working as smoothly as a well-oiled machine, the House yesterday passed the Patman antichain store price discrimination bill, in exactly the same form as its proponents desired it, by a nonpartisan vote of 290-16.

Only amendments approved by the Judiciary Committee were adopted. Changes offered from the floor invariably were crushed by a chorus of prolonged "Noes!"

The final standing vote was taken after Majority Leader Bankhead had utilized parliamentary strategy to save time and to obviate a roll-call record vote. When debate under the five-minute rule had been completed late in the afternoon, he engineered a point of "no quorum," and demanded a roll call. Members flocked into the chamber and more than 350 answered to their names.

Thereafter, a demand from one-fifth of the previous quorum call was necessary before a roll-call vote could be ordered, and the opponents were unable to muster a sufficient number. So a standing vote was ordered and 290 members were able to vote for the bill, but no record was left to cause embarrassment in the coming election.

The measure now goes to the Senate, where a similar bill, introduced by Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, majority leader, already has been approved.

Passage of the Patman bill brings to an end the agitation for chain-store legislation that has troubled Congress for ten years. Numerous Congressional committees, as well as the Federal Trade Commission, have conducted extensive hearings. Yesterday's action by the House, leaders believe, sets at rest the question of Federal regulation of chain-store merchandising.

The immediate effect of the bill will be to raise prices of consumers goods, both sides in the controversy agree. Manufacturers are prevented from slashing prices in relation to the size of the order. "Fake" advertising rebates, as well as "phoney" brokerage fees also are eliminated.

A proposed ban on the "basing point" system of determining prices was stricken from the bill when the House adopted a committee amendment to that effect. The original provision of the bill would have prohibited selling goods to dealers on the basis of arbitary prices fixed at given points over the country.

Military Rites To Mark Burial Of Flier Today

Thomas Hewitt, jr., war-time flying hero of the Lafayette Escadrille, will be buried in Arlington National Cemetery at 11 a. m. today.

Plans for a funeral with full military honors have been completed by the National Press Club Post, American Legion. Hewitt's body, which lay unclaimed at the District Morgue for several days, was taken yesterday to the funeral home of W. W. Chambers, 1400 Chapin street northwest.

The former aviator, poverty-stricken, died Sunday in a downtown rooming house. Friends and war buddies joined to save him from a grave in potter's field.

A guard of honor from the French Embassy will accompany the body to Arlington. A brother, James Hewitt, was located in Philadelphia and will attend the services, which will be held in Arlington Chapel.

American Legion officials were informed that Hewitt's mother lives in New York. She is in ill health, however, and will be unable to be present. Hewitt and his wife were estranged. They have a 10-year-old son, Thomas 3d. Efforts are being made to bring the son here in time for the funeral.

Coronation Set May 12, 1937, Edward May Drop Traditions

Court Officials Reported Advising Ruler in Traditional Pageantry Would Be Unwise; Ten Monarchs Expected to Attend.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 28.—Britons wondered whether King Edward VIII intends to take still another slap at tradition by dispensing with some of the historic ceremony of his own coronation in Westminster Abbey, set for May 12, 1937.

The announcement of the coronation data was contained in the Official Gazette and the date will be proclaimed in a colorful ceremony tomorrow in the center of London.

The date was chosen at a meeting of the privy council. A day early in May was selected, it was explained, so foliage of trees would not spoil the view of millions of witnesses along the route of the King's procession.

With his modern outlook on life, Britain's first "flying monarch," it is said, believes much of the ritual of the coronation has outlived its usefulness.

May Reduce Pomp.

He is believed to want a modified, shortened version of the pomp and pageantry through which a British ruler is formally invested with the authority of his throne.

Court officials, it is rumored, have been pointing out to Edward that a departure from the precedents of centuries might be unwise and perhaps displeasing to the public as a whole. But a rumor persists the King is unconvinced and may yet insist on certain changes.

The ceremony will reach its climax in Westminster Abbey when the Archbishop of Canterbury places the jeweled crown upon the bachelor King's head. It comes nine months after mourning for the late King George will have ended.

Ten ruling Kings and Queens, 150 Indian princes and several hundred thousand visitors from throughout the world are expected at the ceremonies.

Court First Test.

One of the first tests of the King's attitude will be the famous Court of Claims, the old, old ceremony at which lords and commoners of England put forward their claims to attend the King at his coronation.

One claimant will assert the right to stew herbs. Another will insist he has the family right to serve the salt; another to deal out napkins.

The ceremony itself, preparations for which will now begin in earnest, will cost thousands of dollars. King George's coronation cost more than $1,000,000, half of it going for the entertainment of foreign royalty.

Hikers to Great Falls.

Members of the Wanderbird Hiking Club will walk Sunday from Seneca to Great Falls, Md., stopping at points of interest along the way and winding up the day's activities with a campfire supper. The group will meet in front of the National Theater.

Dr. C. T. Messner Dies in Capital; Was Health Aid

Heart Attack Is Fatal to Dental Chief at Home; Rites to Be Monday.

Funeral services for Dr. Clinton Thad Messmer, chief of the dental department of the United States Public Health Service, who died yesterday of a heart attack, will b eheld at 11 a. m. Monday in Arlington National Cemetery with military honors.

One of the foremost dental surgeons in the country, Dr. Messner was stricken at his home, 5712 Thirty-third street northwest, as he slept.

Since 1924 he had been chief of the Public Health Service's dental department. He entered the department in December, 1919, a month after his honorable discharge from the Army with the rank of lieutenant colonel.

He first was placed in charge of the ninth district with headquarters at St. Louis. At that time he was ranked a dental surgeon. In 1921 he was transferred to Washington and in July, 1928, he was made senior dental surgeon.

Dr. Messner was born at Oxford, Ind., on October 13, 1885. After he was graduated from the Indiana Dental College he returned to his home town and practiced for three years. In 1911 he became an instructor at a dental college in Portland, Oreg.

When the United States entered the World War Dr. Messner enlisted in the Army Dental Corps and was commissioned a first lieutenant. His brilliant service brought him rapid promotion so that when he was discharged two years later he was a lieutenant colonel.

On June 24, 1909, Dr. Messner married Edna B. Menafee, of Lafayette, Ind. His survivors, in addition to her, are a son, Jack, and a daughter, Jean. The son is a student at the University of Maryland dental school in Baltimore.

Dr. Messner was president of the Association of Military Dental Surgeons form 1926 to 1928. For 27 years he was a member of the research commission of the American Dental Association and once served that organization as secretary. He was a fellow of the American College of Dentists and a member of the International Association for Dental Research.

Shop Employe Is Robbed, Two Homes Entered

A shop clerk was robbed and several homes reported entered in a minor crime wave that broke out here early yesterday and last night.

Lewis Thompson, 25, of 435 Fifteenth street northwest, an employe of a hamburger shop in the 2100 block Fourteenth street northwest, was robbed by a armed bandit.

Thompson told police he was in the shop alone when he man entered, drawing a gun from beneath his coat.

Marvin Harris, 5337 Broad Branch road northwest, reported his grocery store in the 500 block Minnesota avenue northeast, broken into and $21 worth of cigarettes and groceries stolen.

Meanwhile, three Negroes eluded police over the roofs of a block of houses in the 500 block M street northwest, after they broke into the home of Hettie E. Holmes, Negro schoolteacher, 502 M street.

Police, answering a call, arrived in time to trap the men in the home. They called the Detective Bureau for aid. Meanwhile, the prowlers worked their way up to the roof and escaped, dropping 20 feet into an alley at the end of the block.

Iraq King's Sister Weds Waiter Despite Kin's Plea to 3 Nations

By the Associated Press.

Athens, May 28.—Appeals to officials of three nations failed to nullify today's wedding of a princess to a young hotel waiter.

The bride is Princess Aza, a sister of King Ghazi of Iraq, and reported to have a private income of $2,000 a week; the bridegroom is young Anastase Charalambis, hitherto a waiter.

Desperate efforts to halt the "love match" were made by Princess Rassiha, sister of the bride. Shocked, she tried to get the Turkish and British legations to interfere and then asked the Greek government, under a law of litigation between relatives, to take her sister into preventive arrest. All refused.

Church authorities likewise declined to injerfere. The couple came to Athens recently, and prior to their marriage the princess was received into the Orthodox Church and baptized with the name "Anastassia."

In appealing to police to intervene, Princess Rassina charged her sister with stealing money and jewelry. But again her darts at Cupid were turned aside, for the police said the property was owned jointly by the sisters.

Princess Aza holds the trump card, a diplomatic passport making her immune to preventive arrest. It was understood the honeymooners were planning a flight to Italy.

Princesses Aza and Rassina are the only sisters of young King Ghazi of Iraq, who has no brothers. Ghazi, now, 24, succeeded his father, Feisal, the first King of Iraq, who died in September, 1933. He was married ten days after his father's death to his cousin, the Emira Aliyah, second daughter of King Ali of the Hejaz.

Iraq (Mesopotamia) was freed from the Turks during the World War and was released from a British mandate in 1932 when she entered the League of Nations.

The young King's aunt, Princess Sara, shortly after he came to the throne divorced her commoner husband in London at his command at returned home. She had incurred royal displeasure by wedding the first secretary of the Iraq legation in London, Atta Bey Amin.

The divorce was effected in the fashion of Iraq. Atta Bey Amin, obeying the King's order, took his wife to the doorstep of his home and said three times, in the presence of witnesses, "I divorce you."

Dutch Liner Picks Up Survivor of Disaster

Oslo, May 28 (AP).—The master of the Dutch steamship Westplein reported tonight by wireless he had rescued the captain of the Norwegian steamer Hogstad drifting alone in a lifeboat on a rough sea.

The message said the Westplein was unable to reach a second lifeboat which was though to have contained 12 men before it capsized.

The captain of the Hogstad, the message declared, was too exhausted to tell what had happened to his vessel.

The Hogstad is of but 696 gross tons and is 179 feet long. Built in 1917, her home port is Bergen.

Funeral Is Held For Mrs. Hays, Society Leader

Mrs. Margaret Burford Hays, widow of Representative Edward W. Hays, of Missouri, was buried here yesterday. She was 60.

Mrs. Hays, long prominent in Washington social activities, died Monday at her home in the Mendota Apartments, 2220 Twentieth street northwest.

Funeral services were held at Chamberx. Burial was in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Congressmen and Government officials acted as pallbearers.

Mrs. Hays' husband was in the House of Representatives from 1919 to 1923. He later was attorney for the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Two children survive, Dallas B. Hays and Mrs. Floyd Jennings Baker, both of Washington.

35 Graduated By Georgetown Nursing School

2 Washingtonians in Group Selma Maizels Wins Alumnae Medal.

Thirty-five young women in the Georgetown University Hospital School of Nursing and the School of Dental Hygiene received diplomas at graduation exercises yesterday afternoon at Gaston Hall.

Two Washington residents were among three to receive special honors presented as a feature of the commencement. Selma Frances Maizels was awarded the medal of the Dental Hygienists Alumna Association for highest scholastic average in that school.

Beatrice Regina Duckett, also of Washington and of the dental hygiene school, tied with Marian Joy Mallory, of Los Angeles, Calif., for the James Star Ruby award in English and public speaking.

The Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S.J., president of Georgetown, gave the commencement address, and conferred diplomas. The Rev. David V. McCauley, S.J., of the hospital, presented the graduates of that school, and Dr. W. N. Cogan, D.D.S., presented the seniors of the dental hygiene school.

The graduates follow:

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Pan American Union presents the United States Navy Band (Lieut. Charles Benter, leader) and Gustavo Carrasco, Cuban tenor, in a concert of Latin-American music Thursday night in the Aztec Gardens. Program of compositions by C. A. Silva, Santero Maiquez and A. G. Villoldo (Argentina), Antonio Carlos Gomes (Brazil), Carlos Monroy, P. Morales Pino and Herman Rodrigo Colombia), E Sanchez de Fuentes and Eliseo Grenet (Cuba), Francisco Paredes (Ecuador), Francisco R. Diaz Zelaya (Honduras), Maria Grever and Emilio D. Uranga (Mexico). Carlos Valderrama (Peru) and Carlos Maduro (Venezuela).

Across the esplanade and the Aztec Gardens, usually so balmy on the occasions of the Pan American Union's summer concerts, there blew last evening a breeze so chill that it might almost have come from the slopes of Popocatepetl or Chimborazo. Doubtless for that reason, the audience fell somewhat short of the number that usually is to be found enjoying music al fresco when the union holds open house. Yet there was no lack of warmth in the applause that punctuated the items on the program.

Of primary importance among the compositions offered were the instrumental selections from "Fosca" and an aria from "Salvator Rosa," two operas by the distinguished Brazilian composer, Antonio Carlos Gomes. These excerpts, according to announcement, were presented in observance of the centenary of the composer's birth. If this statement is official, there will have to be a revision of the many works of reference in which the date of Gomes' birth is given as July 11, 1839.

Leaving the matter of chronology aside, the tribute was justified, for the music of Gomes is intrinsically interesting because of its dramatic vitality, melodious fluency and effective instrumentation. If there is an Italianate flavor now and then in the themes, it must be remembered that Gomes studied in Milan and that "Fosca" had its premiere at La Scala in 1873. "Salvator Rosa" was produced the following year.

Attractive in their exoticism were Monroy's paso doble, "Metropolitanos" and Valdarrama's "Calcuchima," an Inca dance based on aboriginal tunes. There was piquant material also in Pino's fantasia on Colombian themes.

Gustavo Carrasco disclosed in his two groups of songs a robust tenor voice that carried clearly and sonorously in the open air. His tone is firm and well rounded, and his phrasing has the smoothness that comes from good breath control.

Hearing Will Be Held On Monroe St. Buses

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday announced it would grant a public hearing to consider rerouting of Capital Transit Co. buses now running along Monroe street northeast.

Tugwell's Power Widened

greatest steps ever taken by the Government."

La Follette said that Tugwell was making "a constructive and sincere effort." He said to abandon the rehabilitation program would be a great mistake.

Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, said he interpreted the bill as preventing further purchase of land by Tugwell, but he said that it may be that the President will allocate additional funds to the Resettlement Administration. Glass said he doubted whether purchase of land for resettlement purposes could be construed as purchase for Government use.

Senator Norris (Republican), of Nebraska, predicted that the question would never get into court because no one would be forced to buy land. Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, suggested that taxpayers whose money was being spent might seek to stop the purchases. La Follette was joined by Senator Frazier (Republican), of North Dakota, and Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, in defending Tugwell.

States Cited.

The debate opened with a speech by Senator Hale (Republican), Maine, asking that relief administration be returned to the States. Senator Glass followed with an objection to the making of relief grants.

"The matter of grants," he said, "has induced States and subdivisions of States to tax their every ingenuity, to trump up useless projects upon which the funds of the taxpayers may be expended, to trump them up under the popular impression that they are getting something for nothing, that they are getting a gift from the Federal Government. They are simple enough not to know that they have to pay back to the Federal Government, in the shape of taxes, every dollar of the loan, every dollar of the grant as well as the loan. After the election is over they will find it out."

Senator Steiwer (Republican), Oregon, said that while he favored Federal participation in relief he questioned the constitutionality of the bill. He pointed to vagueness in the measure in providing the manner in which the money should be spent. He said he objected to "the completely unfettered discretionary power given the President."

The Oregon Senator pointed to high administrative costs and to the fact that much of the resettlement money does not actually go to relief. He said the whole relief setup showed a "total lack of system."

"Cost Increasing."

"The cost of relief," he said, "is increasing and not decreasing, and it will never decrease under the policy we are now following."

Steiwer asked that administration of relief not be taken away from Hopkins.

"We are being asked again," he said, "to write a blank check for the President."

In the course of the debate Senator Byrd (Democrat), Virginia, put a statement into the record in which he said:

"I am astonished to discover, and I think many will share my feeling, that the Administration proposes to spend $600,000,000 more for ordinary expenses and for relief in the fiscal year beginning July 1 next than for the present fiscal year. With improving conditions, I and nearly all other citizens expected a reduction in the colossal spending program."

Byrd accompanied his statement with a letter from Daniel W. Bell, acting director of the budget, in which he estimated the deficit for 1936 at $5,966,000,000, and that for 1937 at $2,675,000,000.

Meanwhile, Paul V. Betters, executive director of the United States Conference of Mayors, issued a statement objecting to cutting PWA grants from 45 per cent to 30 per cent. Betters said this reduction will shut off a great many cities from participating in the PWA building program. He said that in many instances financial arrangements had been made by cities on the basis of 45 per cent grants. He asked that the 45 per cent provision be restored.

Women to Sift Life on Farms In All Aspects

Thousands of women, ranging from mistresses of elaborate estates to wives of dirt farmers, will gather in Washington within the next three days to discuss their common interest—life in the rural districts, and how to make it better.

The discussion, embracing every phase of farm life, will take place at the third triennial conference of the Associated Country Women of the World, which opens Monday noon at Constitution Hall.

Instead of having experts make addresses, the farm women themselves will do most of the talking, telling of their problems or of their successes in improving life in their homes and communities.

Among the 6,500 planning to attend are at least 150 representatives from 22 foreign countries, including Mrs. Alfred Watt, of Vancouver Island, Canada, president, and Marie Michelet, of Oslo, Norway, founder of the League of Northern Housewives.

Every section of the United States will be represented, with Virginia and Maryland expected to send the largest groups. Women are coming from every county in New York, making a total of at least 200 from that State. Among the distinguished members are Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, who belongs to the New York Federation of Home Bureaus.

Large numbers also are coming from Alabama, Ohio, Iowa, Illinois and the Dakotas. Mrs. Robert Bingham, wife of the American Ambassador to the Court of St. James, will be in the delegation from the Kentucky Federation of Homemakers.

Many of the women from small farms have written Miss Grace Frysinger, of the Bureau of Home Economics, that they have been saving their egg money for the last six months to make the trip. Miss Frysinger is conference chairman. One woman wrote from the Middle West that she had only $48 and wondered if she could attend on that amount.

Inexpensive housing arrangements are being made for the majority. The tourist camp in East Potomac Park and tents set up nearby will provide sleeping quarters for hundreds. Many of the women, coming long distances in chartered buses, will camp in tents along the way. Others will find rooms in private homes awaiting them.

Miss Frysinger is being assisted in making convention plans by Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury; Mrs. Charles L. McNary, wife of the Republican Senator from Oregon; Dr. Louise Stanley, chief of the Bureau of Home Economics, Department of Agriculture, and Miss Helen Atwater, editor of the Journal of Home Economics.

Women coming to the conference have been advised they will need only the simplest sort of clothes.

"We don't want anyone to stay away because she can't afford a convention wardrobe," Miss Frysinger said. "I've sent word that a plain summer dress such as would be worn to church or some social occasion at home will be all right for the garden party at the White House and for the banquet at the Willard."

Some of the delegates from foreign countries, however, will bring native costumes.

One of the chief topics to be discussed will be methods of making country life so attractive that young people will want to live on farms instead of in cities. City people, without training or equipment for farm life, who have been driven to the country by the depression, also will form a discussion topic.

In addition to talking of their problems, the women will exchange ideas for making money to add to their meager incomes from eggs and poultry, those stand-bys of rural housewives who try to be self-supporting.

There will be handicraft exhibits from Wales, Sweden, Finland, Ireland, Ceylon, East Africa, South Africa, England, South Australia, Queensland and Canada, and from many sections of the United States. The Virginia exhibit will be one of the most extensive, consisting mainly of hooked and woven rugs, wooden buttons, bird houses and pottery.

Secretary of State Hull and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace will make brief welcoming speeches at the opening Monday. Mrs. Roosevelt will speak in the afternoon, and Secretary Wallace and Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt at the banquet Thursday night.

To Preside

MRS. ALFRED WATT.

Winn Simmons Captures Rose Society's Medal

Washingtonian Is Awarded Most Points in Takoma Club's Exhibit.

Winn T. Simmons, 518 Aspen street northwest, last night won the silver medal presented by the American Rose Society for having the highest number of points in the twentieth annual rose show of the Takoma Horticultural Club. He held 66 points. The show was held at the Takoma Branch of the Public Library, Fifth and Cedar streets.

Two bronze medals were awarded Wilbur H. Youngman, 520 Fern street northwest, one for being the second highest in points and the other for having the best rose in the show. "Madame Joseph Perraud" brought best rose larels to Youngman. Membership in the society was given Col. W. H. England as the third award. Youngman held 51 points, while England had 37.

Pony Show Also Held.

Judges were Dr. J. A. Gamble, president of the Potomac Rose Society; Mrs. Lomax P. Tayloe, of Somerset, Md., and Mrs. Lillian Smith, of Chevy Chase, Md.

The annual peony show was held in the basement of the library in co-operation with the rose exhibit. H. R. Watkins, of Somerset, Md., won in four classes and Mrs. E. F. Lines took second place. Mr. Watkins' "Alice Harding" was judged the best peony.

Dr. E. C. Powell judged the peony exhibit, while judges for the flower arrangements were Mrs. Lillian Smith and Mrs. Lomax Tayloe. C. G. Carr was chairman of the rose display and Mrs. John Quinn was in charge of the peonies.

Jefferson Gentry Fneural Tomorrow

Jefferson Gentry, jr., 82, for ten years a resident of Arlington County, died yesterday in Georgetown University Hospital after a lingering illness.

When he retired from business in Petersburg, Va., ten years ago, Mr. Gentry came to live with his daughter, Mrs. Lawrence W. Douglas, wife of the Commonwealth's Attorney for Arlington County.

A native of Tennessee, Mr. Gentry was the son of an Army colonel. He moved to Kentucky with his family at an early age, and 40 years ago took up his residence in Petersburg, where he became a leader in civic affairs. He was active in the Knights of Pythias and a member of St. George's Episcopal Church of Clarendon.

His daughter is the only survivor. Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. in Old Blandford Cemetery, Petersburg.

A Blunder Corrected.

The decision of the Senate Appropriations Committee to authorize continued use of funds now in the hands of the District Alley Dwelling Authority is a rather hollow victory for that agency. Assuming that the effects of the House bill were rationally considered, the Senate committee could not have done less than it did. The mystery is that, in these days of lavish spending, it should have denied the authority the funds it needs to provide for the natural expansion of its important work.

As the deficiency bill now stands, it merely corrects a blunder committed in the House. That body intended only to strike out the $300,000 appropriation requested for the ADA by the Budget Bureau. In doing so, however, it denied the ADA the right to use, during the next fiscal year, funds that have already been set aside for the reclamation of Washington's miserable inhabited alleys. Of course, the House will welcome an opportunity to correct this stupid error. But that will not dispose of the larger issue.

When Congress reassembles next year one of its first responsibilities will be to consider the needs of the Alley Dwelling Authority. If the organic law requires revision to permit appropriation of sufficient money to clean up disease-infested alleys, there should be no hesitation in making the change. Contrasted with the enormous outlays for various projects of far less importance, the ADA's requests for funds are the essence of modesty. Yet its work is of real importance from the economic as well as the social viewpoint.

Success of this important undertaking can not be assured merely by the correction of a blunder. If narrow political considerations prevent the appropriation of the needed funds through the current deficiency bill, that neglect should be quickly remedied when the new Congress meets.

Thumbscrews On China.

Although Japan has had China in a vise for some time, it has not thus far succeeded in bringing about the complete capitulation of that nation. But it is problematical how much longer China can hold out in view of the intensified pressure now being exerted.

This pressure is taking the form of an attack on the chief source of governmental revenue in China—the receipts from customs. The Chinese government has charged, and with abundant proof, that the Japanese military authorities in North China have made themselves a party to the smuggling of vast quantities of goods from Manchukuo and Japan by way of Yin Ju-keng's autonomous regime in eastern Hopei Province. That regime, like Manchukuo, is an invention of the Japanese militarists and exists only through the protection given to it by Japanese bayonets.

The situation is alarming not only to China but also to various nations that do business with China. While the Nanking government is deprived of revenue to which it is entitled and which it sorely needs, American, British and other exporters find themselves faced by ruinous competition. Japanese goods entering China by way of eastern Hopei pay to the Yin Ju-keng regime only a fourth of the regular duties.

It would obviously be a simple matter for Japan to plug up the hole in the Chinese customs wall. But its only reply to the protests of China and other powers has been to disavow any responsibility for this smuggling in North China and to reinforce its already large military establishment there.

Instead of co-operating with the Chinese authorities, the Japanese military leaders have fought every effort of China to put a stop to the illicit traffic. They have prevented Chinese revenue cutters from interfering with the smugglers and have stood by while vast quantities of cotton goods, sugar, rayon, gasoline and other commodities have poured into China through eastern Hopei. Nor has it made the slightest difference to them that this connivance in an illegal traffic constitutes, on Japan's part, a clear violation of its repeated pledges to observe the open-door policy in China.

In desperation the Nanking government recently issued a decree punishing with death all those convicted of smuggling. This move Japan has protested on the ground that the purpose of the decree is to bring about an anti-Japanese boycott.

The only way the smuggling problem can be solved, China has been informed by spokesmen for the Tokyo government, is through "co-operation" with Japan in the solution of all North China problems. This is a clear warning to China that if it does not want to see its principal source of revenue cut off, it must recognize Manchukuo, adjust its tariffs to suit Japan, cease trying to maintain an independent currency with the aid of Great Britain and the United States, pin the Chinese dollar to the Japanese yen and accept Japan's suzerainty over North China.

That China will voluntarily consent to demands which would make it little more than a satrapy of the island empire is unlikely. But with each turn of the Japanese screw the position of the Chinese government becomes increasingly difficult.

Adding To The Federal Debt.

In a recent address before the National Economy League Raymond Moley stated that British national and local taxes amount to about $94 per capita, contrasted with an estimated $80 per capita paid by Americans in Federal, State and local taxes. However, as Prof. Moley pointed out, the British have a balanced budget, while the United States is running deeper and deeper into debt. In fact, if the Federal Government had undertaken to raise sufficient revenue to cover the current deficit, our per capita taxes would be higher than those of the British.

The Treasury's announcement of its mid-June financing operations, which will add another $1,000,000,000 to the Federal debt, exclusive of the $2,300,000,000 bonus bond issue, emphasizes Prof. Moley's warning that a day of reckoning for taxpayers lies ahead. By the end of June the Federal debt will have mounted to approximately $32,600,000,000, plus such proportion of the bonus bonds as are not redeemed in cash. This figure is in startling contrast to the $16,185,000,000 recorded during the fiscal year 1930, when the debt reached its post-war low level. Its subsequent rapid rise measures roughly the burden that the taxpayers of the country would have been called upon to carry if the budget had been kept in balance during the past six years of deficit financing.

Eventually the American people will have to face the alternatives of drastic reductions in government expenditure or heavy increases in taxes, which, as Prof. Moley says, will have to be paid by the average man with a small income. Meantime, the inevitability of the day of reckoning is not fully realized by the prospective victims because of the ease with which the Treasury has placed new loans. Doubtless, the forthcoming offering will meet with the usual good reception because of the abundance of idle funds held by banks and investment institutions and the limited opportunities for their safe and profitable employment in private fields.

At the beginning of March the member banks of the Federal Reserve System held $12,400,000,000 of direct or fully guaranteed Government issues out of total loans and investments aggregating $30,200,000,000. Mutual savings banks and life insurance companies which control a large proportion of individual savings have also been investing a substantial and increasing percentage of their funds in Government issues bringing very low rates of return. Many financial authorities believe that the period of abnormally low interest rates will last for an indefinite period in view of the huge volume of excess reserves held by the banks and the natural unwillingness of the Treasury to see those reserves deliberately cut down while deficit financing continues. Others, however, predict that the period of cheap money is approaching its end and doubt whether the Treasury can continue much longer to borrow at current low rates.

In any case, the outlook for the future becomes increasingly precarious as the Government's borrowing operations load bank and fiduciary institutions with securities that would decline seriously in value if interest rates were to experience a sudden rise. Furthermore, the dominant role played by the Government in the investment market has absorbed funds which normally would be available for the purchase of new industrial issues. The lack of such offerings is, of course, due in part to the condition of business, but the intervention of the Government has been an important factor in retarding recovery in the market for new issues.

However viewed, therefore, the mounting Federal debt can only be regarded as a national menace—pointing to a day of reckoning ahead for taxpayers and investors alike. And that reckoning will be harder to face the longer its coming is deferred.

Annie Laurie.

Just prior to the turn of the century, a bright-haired girl was writing to her sister about the vicissitudes of hall bedrooms, drafty dressing rooms, and the response of Canadian audiences to "The Wages of Sin." One of these chatty letters found its way into the hands of the Chicago Tribune's managing editor who, like Oliver Twist, immediately asked for more. On such small incidents hang matters of life and death and careers. Finding that she could reach a wider public through her own words than through those of any playwright, she left the stage to become one of this country's most famous newspaper women—Annie Laurie.

Though Annie Laurie, or Winifred Black Bonfils, as she was known in private life, wrote continuously for 39 years, her copy remained as fresh and as human as those personal letters which proved the turning point in her life. She was the first "sob-sister" to come down the journalistic pike, though, hating the term, she always denied it. But one has only to look at her long list of coverages and the good she accomplished to know that her stories were aimed directly at the heart. The first ambulance, the first ward for incurables, the first Christmas tree for San Francisco—these were the brain-children which she conceived. Tears and money flowed from her readers to make them possible.

Not all of Annie Laurie's reforms, however, were accomplished by honeyed words. In cleaning up hospital conditions in San Francisco or exposing the hardships of child labor throughout the South, she wrote with a pen as vitriolic as that of any hard-boiled city reporter. Perhaps she was, as she herself once expressed it, simply a "plain, practical, all-round newspaper woman." Sob-sister or journalist, she will be missed by thousands now that death has written "30" to her long, useful life.

Mr. McCarl's Successor.

One of the most important appointments President Roosevelt will have an opportunity to make is that of a Comptroller General. The term of J. R. McCarl will expire on June 30. Under the law he cannot be reappointed; nor could he continue to serve temporarily after the expiration of his term if the President should delay the nomination of his successor.

In view of the excellent service which he has rendered, there is widespread regret over the impending retirement of Mr. McCarl. His influence has been felt throughout the Government service. With a keen perception of his responsibility, he has required of every official rigid compliance with the law in the expenditure of Government funds. Impetuous spenders have often been annoyed by the painstaking scrutiny which Mr. McCarl has applied to their projects. But he completely won the public confidence. The result of his meticulous checking has been to assure taxpayers that Government funds will be spent only in accord with the law.

Nevertheless, the provision forbidding reappointment of a comptroller is thoroughly sound. The position demands the utmost independence, and that attitude certainly would not be encouraged by permitting the incumbent to seek a second term. The important factor becomes, therefore, the selection of a new comptroller who is capable of following the precedents set by Mr. McCarl.

Our Government has become such an immense organization that it is impossible for department heads, much less the President, to know the details of its administration. These officials have to rely upon the Comptroller General's office to keep the disbursements of their subordinates in strict conformity with the law. It is the business of the comptroller to see that no unauthorized payment is drawn from the Treasury. Vouchers are carefully examined to see if they are in accord with legal contracts. And contracts are scrutinized to make certain that they conform to the law.

Whenever a doubt arises as to the legality of a salary or any other outlay of national funds, the matter is taken over entirely by the Comptroller General. All claims against the Government, except those pertaining to customs and internal revenue, are handled by his office. Moreover, it controls the accounts of all Federal agencies and serves as their financial adviser. Finally, it is charged with the responsibility of recommending to Congress measures to increase efficiency in the expenditure of public funds.

The responsibility of the Comptroller General has been greatly magnified by the New Deal's emergency expenditures, especially by the practice of appropriating lump sums to be used for some general purpose at the President's discretion. It is of foremost importance, therefore, that an expert of independent judgment be chosen to step into Mr. McCarl's job. Appointment of a politician to this post would be little short of a calamity.

Almost equally disconcerting would be the appointment of a novice. This is a highly technical position calling for a knowledge of the laws and regulations of all the Federal departments and independent agencies, as well as impartial judgment, courage and an unusual capacity for work. To fill it properly will require the most careful deliberation and freedom from political considerations.

"The general American scene is becoming much brighter," declares an editor. Yes, but are you sure it isn't because of the increasing number of whitewashed candidates and anemic taxpayers?

The weather we have a lot of the time leaves much to be desired, but just think how much worse conditions would be if it were regulated by the Government.

As long as there's anything worth fighting for, the world will never have peace.

The reason you have so little liberty is because others have taken too much of it.

The Literal Truth.

H. A. De Weerd in the Infantry Journal.

As the army of occupation lined up at Coblenz, Pershing tried to warm up a bit. He had made a tremendous newspaper coup at his landing in Liverpool back in 1917 by singling out a private in the Royal Welsh Fusiliers whose sleeve was covered with wound stripes and asking the soldier where he got them. In a like fashion at Coblenz he picked out a private in the front rank whose sleeve was covered with wound stripes and asked:

"Where did you get these, my man?"

To the consternation of everyone within hearing, the hard-boiled private replied in his best Sunday school manner:

"From the supply department, sir."

If this story is not true, it ought to be!

Playground Expenditures.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of May 16 there appeared a report of the meeting on May 15 of the City-Wide Playground Council. While the report contained several misstatements, I hesitated to protest, appreciating the effort of your young reporter and the interest shown by The Post in giving the meeting so prominent a position on the city page.

One misquotation, however, to the effect that the National Capital Parks expend $2,500,000 annually for maintenance, has been given contradiction by the superintendent of parks, and I am therefore furnishing you with the correct version of what was said to the Playground Council.

In response to a question from the council as to what amount is included in the 1937 budget for the improvement of playgrounds, I reported that no allotment has been made for improvements next year. Discussion followed on how much is needed for the improvement of playground areas, and prefacing my remarks with the statement that I had no immediate knowledge of the amount available to the parks I cited an article to the effect that the present park improvement program will expend $2,500,000. Drawing attention to the figure of $50,000 which has been reported in the local papers as the amount to be expended in Franklin Park, I said it would require at least that amount to put a large playground into good condition, including grading, drainage, fencing, shelter house, wading pool, apparatus, equipment and tennis courts.

The entire discussion was on the question of improvements, and maintenance costs were not mentioned.

Political Shakedown.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We whom economic circumstances choke into silence want to thank you for speaking up about the demands of the Democratic National Committee, by mail and phone, as set forth in a recent issue of your paper.

It would interest the public to know that the RFC pay roll is reported to have been handed over to the Democratic National Committee for the purpose of wringing money out of its employes to retain itself in power. Home telephone numbers, addresses and salary information were given. Even the Democrats here don't like the taste of this sort of thing.

Europe Waits.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Great Britain has played her usual bluff and much to the surprise of everyone has been called. Italy knows this and the world knows it, but England apparently is not going to let the cards be played without a shuffle. She is undertaking a new deal in rearmament, for to twist the lion's tail is to make the lion sit up and take notice. The House of Commons just recently passed a measure to build up the militant security of Great Britain to a quota unparalleled in peace time. There is something inherent in the blood of the Anglo-Saxon people which fires their indignation and pride when offended by an outside source. Their government as well as their social mores and customs are built on tradition and they intend to maintain their imperialistic position at any cost.

The recent removal of Sir Samuel Hoare as foreign secretary, when he and Laval attempted a conciliatory move with Italy is a good example of the temperament of the English people. Italy on the other hand, realizing that Great Britain's empire is none too steady, is willing to inherit any of the child colonies which might be weaned away from the mother. They visualize as Il Duce so expressed, "The glory of old Rome is once more realized."

And so rests the political horizon in Europe, resting until the day when intrigue, dissension, and friction awaken the people to a conflict which might dissolve rather than promote either the British or Italian empires.

Unfortunate Publicity.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Again this morning I opened my paper to find the name Zioncheck emblazoned on the front page. As a subscriber and a citizen I want to protest against this nauseating reiteration of the comportment of a person who is of no public importance whatsoever.

The policy of playing up the mental and moral weaknesses of this very pathetic person, and to stimulate him to further actions of absurdity, is to make your paper a party to the whole disgusting spectacle. I beg you to desist for his own unfortunate sake and for the public good.

Single Tax Criticism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A short time ago, in a letter to The Post by Edmond Fontaine, of Ruxton, Md., wonderment was expressed as to why the Henry George idea of the single tax on land values has failed to make progress in America.

To me there is one plain reason for its failure, namely, that the wealthy man whose money is invested in intangibles, such as stocks or bonds, would largely escape taxation, while the man whose money is mostly invested in a home or farm would bear a disproportionate share of taxation.

Or, to make the matter worse, assume a millionaire renting an apartment and owning no real estate, but all intangibles, and then a man on, say, a $5,000 per year salary paying for a $10,000 residence in which he lives. Under the single-tax plan the former would pay no tax whatever, since he owns no land, whereas the salaried man would have to pay a heavy tax on the $2,000 lot on which his home stands. It would be even worse with the farmer, whose capital is mostly in land.

One of my single-tax friends was never able to explain away this discrepancy to my satisfaction. The average man can see this discrepancy so easily that he simply refuses to take hold of a doctrine that might do him injustice and favor the wealthy. Perhaps Mr. Fontaine can show a better-balanced situation under its principles; I am open-minded.

Little Liars?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As one who has loved English and her various uses both in youth and of latter days, I should like to protest at the butchering of our language at the spelling contest held May 25 in the National Museum and broadcast on the radio. These gifted children were brought here to participate in a "spelling match," so called. The match consisted, it seems to this dispassionate listener, not so much in spelling the words called out by the wiseacres as to discover in a fog of mispronunciations, garbled diction and uncertain definitions what words were meant.

"Mauso'leum," "teta'nus" — my word! I am not a professional speller, but after 40 years of existence, even I have run up against those dismal terms and never till now have heard them so pronounced. And since when has a "calaboose" been the rear coach of a freight train? As for "predilection" having anything to do with the future, well, my second-rate little Standard doesn't even define Nemesis as "fate." So we must perhaps conclude that it was all the fault of those "big dictionaries" which the frantic judges were forced to resort to. Little home dictionaries are all liars, you know.

Urges Joining League.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir The League of Nations has not gotten very far as yet, but that may be due to the absence of American skill and craftsmanship. If by any means we can save the situation by getting on board safely, we surely ought to do so.

Let us, here in America, not deceive ourselves with delusions as to the "splendidness" of isolation from Old World imbroglios. In a world so closely woven together by radio and aeronautics, isolation is no guarantee of immunity from the social ills which afflict the rest of the world. Mr. Wilson was re-elected because "he kept us out of war," but the tide overwhelmed us, and in we went. And we would have to do it again! We could no more isolate ourselves from a new World War than we could escape a world-wide depression. The part of wisdom for us is to take our rightful seat in the only international council chamber that the world can offer today, and do our part toward implementing the desire of the great masses of the world that right and justice shall prevail.

The Conflict In Palestine.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Palestine situation calls for careful thinking and writing. The much-heralded prosperity of the country, due to Jewish immigration, is grossly exaggerated. The Jordan has not as yet been harnessed for electricity; the Dead Sea has not as yet yielded any of its supposed wealth; the country at large has not been made over. A few scattered Jewish villages, the land around which has been purchased by Jewish organizations outside Palestine, stand much as they did when first built. None of the hillside land, long washed, until now with little but protruding rocks, has been touched. The Jordan Valley, where irrigation would turn a desert into a paradise, is barren and uncultivated.

Tiberias, the only city on Lake Galilee, and largely now a Jewish center, is flood-washed and not repaired. Haifa and Tel Aviv—the latter an all-Jewish city, claiming 150,000 people—are places of some prosperity. The Vale of Sharon has long been vale of orange groves, and is even more so now. But one sees no evidence of labor shortage, nor does one see any signs of obvious prosperity save as the British have constructed roads, policed the country and done here what they did in Egypt, viz., lifted the horror of insanitary conditions by modern means.

The present Arab revolt is but an outbreak of long-standing antagonisms and plans. The Balfour Declaration, which was a door which swung both ways, gave the Arab as much reason to oppose Jewish immigration as it gave the Jews an opportunity to send their poor to Palestine. The British under that so-called "declaration" cannot force the Arab to sell his land to Jews, nor can the Jew under the declaration elbow the Arab out of the country.

With free Arab states or sections, lately made so by the British and the French—giving the Arab authority in lands surrounding Palestine; and with Egypt, in deepest sympathy with their Arab neighbors in Palestine—the situation is critical in the extreme. The British cannot alienate millions of Arab subjects and Arab-friendly provinces; on the other hand, they cannot do less than the best possible for the Jews, whom they have stood to defend within the limits of the Balfour Declaration, and the mandate from the League of Nations.

To insinuate that Mussolini is back of agitation in Palestine and that Arabs are jealous of Jewish prosperity are both mere assumptions. Palestine presents only such problems as any other country would face where two antogonistic peoples claim rights based, as they each think, on British promises and on international equity.

Tuning-In On Tuna.

Post Office, Friday.

WHERE'S the best tuna-fishing? We've had Block Island and Southern California waters for answers. Now here's Alfred Elden saying: "Maine."

He writes:

"The Maine tuna-fish run much larger."

We can well believe him. We don't know Block Island or Southern California, but we have seen Mose Wallace, off Sebasco, Me., on Casco Bay, haul in a tuna that he said weighed 1,500 pounds and that we thought weighed 2,000. Mose is such a conservative!

And once we ourselves assisted, with expert advice, Mose's nephews, Everett and Carl——

But modesty is our chief characteristic. If you want to know just what a tuna-fisher we are, ask any of the Cushman family.

Oh, yes, we are aware of tales non-Maine tuna fishers tell:

Seven or eight years ago, Zane Grey started fishing for the tuna off Nova Scotia. With a rod and line—not to say with patient strength and skill—he hooked, tired and finally killed a trio—one of 758 pounds, one of 736 and one of 648.

We like Mr. Grey's fish stories almost as much as we dislike his Western stories. Therefore we are willing to accept his word that this is a record so far as rod-fishing is concerned.

Nevertheless, if you go out with Nathan Cushman or the Wallaces, you'll learn to use the harpoon. Then is when you get the really large fellows.

What's more, number and size are both increasing up there in Maine.

Just telephone to Walter Rich, of the Federal Bureau of Fisheries, and ask him if he has completed his Maine tuna-fish records for 1935. Those for 1928 showed that 176 tuna were landed at Portland during the year, totaling 90,000 pounds, while the figure for 1934 was 423—221,566 pounds. In the former 12 months the biggest catch was an 858-pounder; in 1935 the leader weighed 913.

* * *

Mr. Elden admits that the Maine area for the giant tuna is somewhat restricted. "The schools," he says, "begin off York Harbor at the southwest border of Maine and here they are most plentiful; off Ogunquit Bay they fairly swarm, outside Biddleford Pool and all around the outer edge of Casco Bay and across the Boothbay region they are taken in goodly number." When, however, you get to Penobscot Bay, the giant tuna is getting out to sea—and the season runs only from June to October.

But look what you get when you get one—or even when it gets you!

In 1932, Jay Holmes came up to Portland in his Diesel yacht "Ajax," bringing with him that famous Florida sportsman, Capt. Charles H. Thompson. They went out in a little launch and became entangled with a 1,000-pound tuna just about sunset. That fish towed them all night, 50 miles on a straight course for the French coast—then, with a flick of its tail, cut their line.

If you're their kind of sportsman, the kind that prefers a rod to a harpoon, we advise—and so does Mr. Cushman—a method worked out by George Weare, of Ogunquit, and artist Henry Strater, of New York and Kentucky, and several other places. They use 11-ounce and 16-ounce hickory tipped rods and 21-thread, 36-thread and 39-thread lines. Bait: a quarter or half-pound mackerel—"skittered" 30 or 40 feet astern of a motor-boat doing between four and five miles an hour. And don't fail to have a short-shanked hook, size 11 or 12, of the Pflueger-Sobey pattern.

We've seen a tuna go 10 feet in the air when he got that!

Mr. Elden tells us that some of the fishermen around Ogunquit use a Japanese feather lure for tuna. Up at Sebasco we stick to mackerel, but we don't object to a wooden "teaser" trolled along half way between boat and bait: it helps to find the fish.

Indeed, this columnist finds himself in accord with Mr. Elden on most points and differs from him radically upon only one: we don't call the tuna "tuna." All the fishermen at Sebasco call the tuna by its historic name—and that name is "horse-mackerel."

Still, as Mr. Elden insists, "they are absolutely the true tuna fish in giant size" and run "from 200 to 1,500 pounds—the majority from 400 to 700 pounds. Smaller tuna of the same species—the bluefin—also frequent Maine waters in the summer when it is warmer than usual, as it has been in recent summers."

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

On Goofiness.

The honorable Marion (Dizzy) Zioncheck, the Congressman from the State of Washington, may be a true nut, but it is well to reserve judgement a little while. If the Congressman is really as goofy as he pretends to be he will go along doing goofy things, even when the public has grown tired of him. If he is only a publicity nut he will stop clowning as soon as the laughs quit coming.

There are two distinct types of goofiness—the genuine and the imitation.

The late Rube Waddell, the left-handed pitcher, was a nut at heart and ate animal crackers in bed in the dark, proving that he was goofy, on or off.

Battling Siki, the Senegalese prize fighter, also erstwhile, was even goofier than Waddell and once caused a riot by giving away $20 bills—a prank which the Hon. Dizzy Zioncheck is not likely to imitate.

I believe Chief Chewaki, the Indian wrestler from Poland, whose correct name is Czewalski, also can be classed as a true nut.

Chief Chewaki is the one who hit upon the idea of dusting his wrestling tights with sneeze powder and clamping his mighty thighs over the head of his opponent, who would then succumb in a spasm of sneezes. He also had a trick of hiding a loop of baling wire, like a dog-catcher's snare, in his corner and reaching for it in critical moments to strangle his adversary.

* * * *

Chief Chewaki, or Czewalski, was ejected from various rings by indignant referees, menaced by angry crowds and fined by prize fight commissions on numerous occasions for soiling the fair escutcheon of sport, but I never heard of his turning square.

Art Shires, on the other hand, was strictly a publicity nut who ceased his pranking and became a serious athlete under discipline. Mr. Shires began his career in goofiness by reporting for spring training with the White Sox wearing spats and swinging a little bamboo walking stick. He also affected a monocle at times and wrote poetry about love.

The White Sox were a dull, dumb, serious ball club, and the management wanted Shires to be dull, dumb and serious, too. For a time he held out, and he licked "Lena" Blackburn, the manager, on two occasions before he surrendered to authority, but in the end he settled down, broke his leg and disappeared.

Dizzy Dean's goofiness was about the same as that of Mr. Shires'. He knew he was a good pitcher, but he reckoned that a little showmanship would attract customers and increase his pay. But the management refused to pay for his showmanship, and after many quarrels with his superiors he determined to punish them by conducting himself in the dull, dumb manner of the ordinary ball player. He refused to make street corner speeches, argue with the customers in the stands or issue further boastful announcements in the papers.

The truth is that both Mr. Shires and Mr. Dean are intelligent, handsome youths, who are goofy only by conscious effort, and this seems to be the case with Max Baer, too, although I would not exaggerate his intelligence.

WHEN Mr. Baer was coming up he took singing lessons from an Italian maestro in New York and terrified the birds and beasts around Goofycrest, Gus Wilson's training resort in the foothills of the Catskills, by howling "do-re-mi-fa-sols" in the light of the moon. He also had a distinctive habit of banging his head against the steam pipes in his dressing room at the Garden to toughen it, and it semed that if he was not naturally goofy he would be goofy soon as a result of this practice.

But when Mr. Baer entered the ring against Joe Louis he did no clowning. Then he was so frightened that he hug on the ropes in his corner to hold himself up as he waited for the starting bell, and the merry antics which had made his work a job to beholders in fights with lesser men were absent from his routine that night.

I do not say that Mr. Dizzy Zioncheck, of Washington State, is an imitation nut, clowning just for laughs. He may be quite as goofy as Manuel Herrick, the Congressman who was sent up from Oklahoma by accident when Mr. Harding swept the country.

Mr. Herrick was the town nut back in his home district, and for proof of that had been running for Congress as a Republican for many years. There came a time when his Democratic opponent died, and Emanuel Herrick was elected by default, so to speak. He signalized his arrival in Washington by starting a beauty contest for ladies, offering himself in holy wedlock as first prize for the lucky winner.

In time he sued a young woman for breach of promise, studied aviation and graduated from a detective school with a diploma, a badge and a complete set of disguises. Washington last heard of him when he was sente. ed to jail in Maryland for tending a moonshine still for a salary of $15 a week.

* * * *

His equal has not been seen since, unless Congressman Zioncheck holds up under pressure. Mr. Herrick didn't care whether he had an audience or not. He was goofy in private as well as in public.

The Hon. Francis Henry Shoemaker, of Minnesota, who served in 1933 and 1934, was goofy only when he had a crowd. His specialty was to bump the automobile ahead with his own car in traffic jams and then punch the driver of the car in front. But finally a judge was going to send him to jail, so he ran away from Washington and didn't come back.

The imitation goofies are like babies in that they will make faces and perform foolish falls only as long as people laugh at them. To the real dizzy ones the world goes 'round and 'round all the time.

Still Hell Bent

By James P. Warburg

Author of "Hell Bent for Election," Formerly One of President Roosevelt's Financial Advisers.

Chapter Six.

"—And, If Elected, Will Go On Trying."

In the preceding article I have made the statement, which I shall now try to substantiate, that:

"Leaving aside past performance, the purposes which Mr. Roosevelt avows now, in 1936—and for which he will presumably 'go on trying,' if re-elected—seem to me quite clearly purposes which are not consistent with the best interests of the country. Particularly, it seems to me, they are not consistent with that very objective which is the most sympathetic thing about Mr. Roosevelt—the objective of helping the less fortunate elements of our population."

Any orderly approach to the problems confronting the American Government in 1933 or in 1936 would require a clear segregation into the three major categories of relief, recovery and reform.

In Mr. Roosevelt's New Deal there has never been any orderly segregation.

There has been relief mixed with reform, and there has been recovery mixed with reform.

In fact, I think it fair to say that, with the exception of the repeal of the eighteenth amendment and the securities legislation, there has not been a single real measure of reform.

Reform Disguised As Relief or Recovery.

There has been a strong admixture of reform in many measures undertaken to promote recovery, such as the banking acts, and there has been a great diversion of funds intended for relief of the distressed into channels of New Deal socialistic experimentation.

But, when you come to think of it, there has been very little reform which did not come disguised as belonging either in the category of relief or the category of recovery measures.

This observation is made because Mr. Roosevelt is so fond of pretending that any one who does not agree with his methods of reform is opposed to all reform.

What most of us are opposed to is not the idea of reform as such, but the idea of having reform sneak up on us in the guise of a relief or recovery measure, before we have had a chance to study it and make up our minds whether it is good or not.

And beyond that, what most of us are opposed to is having measures of far-reaching reform secretly drafted by the Executive and rushed through Congress as "must bills" without opportunity for debate or study.

Quite apart from the constitutionality of such procedure, there is no need for it—and there never has been any need for it.

Half-Baked Measures Sound Recovery Gears.

It results—and has resulted—in the enactment of half-baked and unworkable measures which throw sand in the wheels and retard recovery. Beyond that, it prevents the enactment of reform which is really needed, because it discredits all reform and prevents the careful and deliberate sutdy of such things as the banking and currency system, which cry out to be studied and remodeled.

This, in a sense, is a digression; but it is a necessary digression in order to explain the method I have chosen to deal with the important subject under discussion.

Since it is impossible to discuss separately—as one ought to do—the relief, recovery and reform aspects of what Mr. Roosevelt will "go on trying" to do if he is re-elected—and since these articles do not in any case pretend to be a comprehensive analysis or appraisal, but only attempt to deal with certain specific contentions—I shall confine myself to a discussion of this last contention in the light of what seem to me the three things which most directly concern the greatest number of people.

These are:

1. Unemployment as a relief problem.
2. Unemployment as a recovery problem.
3. The relation of both of these problems to Government expenditure and taxation.

That is not by any means the whole story, but it is, I think, that part of the story upon which the American people are most likely to vote for or against Mr. Roosevelt next November.

Allison Of Iowa

By William Lyon Phelps.

An Influential Senator.

Senator Allison, of Iowa (born 1829, died 1908) was for many years one of the most influential men at Washington. Accordingly, when Mark Twain's Notebooks were published last autumn, I read with especial interest the following portrait of him made in 1868 by our great humorist:

"Allison of Iowa—sack coat, light-blue pants—looks like a village law student—plays for handsome looks—30—hands in pockets—excessively ordinary-looking man—large flat foot—light, handsome brown hair—youngest-looking member — essentially ornamental—stands around where women can see him."

Knowing that the Hon. James R. Sheffield was many years ago Allison's secretary, I sent the Mark Twain paragraph to him and received the following interesting letter:

The extract you inclose by Mark Twain is entertaining, but not a true picture of Senator Allison as I knew him. He was not an "excessively ordinary looking man." He was an unusually handsome man with beautiful brown eyes, a strong frame and great dignity.

He entered the House of Representatives in 1863 and took his seat adjoining that of Blaine and Garfield. They remained lifelong friends. He had high ideals, great tact and personal charm. He was a great reader, loved his library and was a devoted student of government. His house was always my home in Washington, and I once lived with him continuously for five months, acting as his private secretary and also as assistant clerk of the Appropriations Committee of which he was chairman, and of the Finance Committee on which he stood second, Senator Aldrich being chairman.

Garfield, Harrison and McKinley each offered him the Secretaryship of the Treasury, and McKinley offered him his choice of the State Department or the Treasury. He accepted the post under Garfield, but felt compelled to decline on March 4 owing to Mrs. Allison's health.

He was exceptionally clean-minded and, in spite of his long political life, he had a very simple nature. I left college the 1st of June, 1885, to go abroad as his guest, and those three and one-half months plus my five months at his home certainly gave me a good opportunity to see the man both at work and at play.

Blaine, Conklin, Allison, Aldrich, Harrison, Evarts, Fry and Hale of Maine; Edmunds and Morrill, of Vermont; Ingalls, of Kansas; Hoar, of Massachusetts; Platt, of Connecticut, and others of their type, were outstanding men.

So with all this and much more in memory you will understand why I do not agree with Mark Twain. But, then, he wrote it in 1868.

Rockefeller, 'In Trim,' To Leave for East Soon

Ormond Beach, Fla., May 28 (AP).—John D. Rockefeller, sr., active and in good health, will leave his winter estate here Tuesday for one of his summer homes in the East, informed sources said today.

There was no announcement of plans at the Casements, where the 96-year-old millionaire has rested in absolute retirement since October 11. City officials and reliable sources said, however, the aged philanthropist would leave Tuesday.

A year ago Mr. Rockefeller left here June 13 and went to his estate at Lakewood, N. J., where he quietly celebrated his birthday July 8. He has another summer home near Tarrytown, N. Y.

Booklet Pushes Nice As G.O.P. Candidate

Baltimore, May 28 (AP).—Maryland's Republican National Convention delegation will go to Cleveland armed with a booklet presenting "Harry W. Nice, its Governor and favorite son, as a candidate for President of the United States."

The booklet and a pamphlet—"Some Facts About Harry W. Nice, Governor of Maryland"—appeared today on the desks of Republican leaders of the State. The booklet was addressed to "the ladies and gentlemen of the Republican National Convention of 1936."

which will relieve the citizen of his personal problems," he added.

"If we are not prepared as a party to strike down monopoly and price-fixing, and all monopolistic practices, to take this action in order that men may enjoy economic freedom, that purchasing power may be restored to the masses—the answer to the farmer hunting for a market and labor hunting for a job—if we are not prepared to deal with this issue, which means bread and clothing and opportunity to millions, we will get nowhere with the discussion of political liberty, or of constitutional government as a campaign issue."

He declared that if one-quarter of 1 per cent of the corporations continue to control one-half of all corporate wealth "concentration of governmental power to meet the situation will inevitably follow."

"Will we long, as a people," he asked, "be able to maintain a situation under a Constitution which declares you may not fix prices on the farm or in the home because of State lines, but private corporate interest may fix prices throughout the entire country regardless of States lines?

Urges Definite Program.

"When we take our constitutional problems to the voters we must be prepared to tell them how we propose to deal with the conditions, and the only conditions which really imperil constitutional government."

Borah quoted a letter which he had received saying:

"The Standard Oil Co. and four other companies are out to secure the monopoly of the world's oil production. They have it now in the United States. We who are known as independents are permitted now to follow the oil business with the grace of the Standard Oil Co. and its associates."

Oil Firms Cited.

"These oil companies, or some of them, have been extremely active in this pre-convention campaign. Their representatives will sit in the convention. Some of us shall be interested to know where they throw their influence. If the Republican party can find no way to control the economic power which these companies exert upon every person in the land, regardless of State lines, shall we hope to make effective with the voters our argument that State rights under the Constitution must be maintained? These oil companies are now, as private corporations, exerting a power over the private citizen in the respective States which the Constitution has declared the Government does not possess.

"There are no State lines and no State rights and no private rights, apparently, as against the practices and exploitation of combines and monopolies. But we can not long maintain a Government with 48 States for purposes of government and an empire for purposes of exploitation."

The Idaho Senator said the question of whether the preconvention primaries had determined the strength of the respective candidates was a secondary proposition. He declared that the primaries had revealed beyond doubt "that millions of men and women who had heretofore believed in, and supported, the party have registered their votes elsewhere, and at this time propose to cast them elsewhere."

He said these voters feel "that they no longer accept, nor believe in, the political views of economic theories of the dominating influences of the party."

"Won't Go Back."

"Talk to the farmer, to the independent businessman, to labor and to the people generally and they will tell you, 'We are not satisfied with this or that, but we are not going back.' You may speak of a balanced budget and they will approve. You may speak of waste, of taxes and debts, and the manner in which relief is being administered, and to all these things they may seriously object, but they will tell you, 'We are not going back.'

"Why is this fight being made by Mr. Hilles, Mr. Roraback, Mr. Schorr and Mr. Brown, and the powerful financial and corporate interests behind them, except for the very purpose of going back?"

Borah demanded to know if there was a single principle or tenet in the political creed of these leaders on whom the average man or woman could pin his or her faith.

He said so far as he was personally concerned there was nothing the convention could do "which will leave its impress on me one hour after it shall have finally closed its doors."

"I have watched the growth of monopoly and called attention to its effect for many, many years," he said. "The evidence is now all about us. We cannot be uninformed as to the situation. What the party does under present conditions, therefore, I must regard as final."

Immigration Inspector Slain; Assailant Is Shot

Seattle, May 28 (AP).—Director H. P. Bonham of the Immigration Service here said John Albert Arthur Fraser, 40, a Canadian of Vancouver, B. C., shot and killed Charles M. Flachs, 44, Blaine immigration inspector, today.

Fraser, he said, armed with two automatic revolvers, opened fire on Inspectors L. J. Pine and Flachs, and then was dangerously wounded in the head during the scuffle.

An immigration board, dissatisfied with Fraser's statements, told him he would have to be searched. He shouted no one would search him and then started shooting, Bonham reported.

Daily Oil Output Dips.

New York, May 28 (AP).—Daily average gross crude oil production in the United States decreased 900 barrels in the week ended May 23, totaling 3,007,150 barrels, the American Petroleum Institute's weekly summary indicates. Daily average production east of California increased 4,800 barrels to 2,433,050 barrels.

Final Campaign Speech of Senator Borah

The radio speech last night by Senator Borah, of Idaho, candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination, follows, in part:

No extensive contact with the voters of this country is necessary to convince one that the bitter experience through which the American electorate has passed in recent years has left its deep impress upon their hearts and minds. One reaches this conclusion even from a limited opportunity to see them and to hear them and from the deluge of mail coming to one's desk. I feel that this is one contest in which that which the voter thinks he will record by his ballot.

There are always some who will be controlled by mere partisan feelings, some by the sinister influence of political machines, but when jobs and homes and farms and families are in the balance, we may anticipate with what sincerity of purpose this high duty of the citizen will be discharged. The people are not always right, but it is a comforting fact to those who pin their faith to constitutional government after debate and time for reflection, as American history amply proves, that, in their final judgment they are seldom wrong.

They have heard much debate. They will hear more. They have had many sad years in which to reflect on all matters pertaining to their interests—to them this election is something more than a mere party contest, and they constitute a tribunal from which there is no appeal. There are some whose conception of party loyalty will probably cause them to doubt my sincerity when I say: I want to see the cause of the Republican Party placed before this tribunal in a way best calculated to win its approval.

Party Has Reached Crisis.

I may be in error as to the best way, but I hope to give ample proof that I believe in that way. No one familiar with the situation, as indicated by the poll books in the different States, can doubt that the party has reached a crisis in its history where "flattery and falsehood can no longer deceive and simplicity itself can no longer mislead."

It is not my view that its position can be determined, or even fully defined, by the platform alone. In this campaign, extraordinary as it undoubtedly will be in all its phases, the candidates will be the platforms. We shall find, in my opinion, the people will accept no other. It is undoubtedly right and proper and according to old custom to make platforms. But these platforms have no high standing at present in the minds of the people. After all is said and done, the position of the party and the possibilities of success will be determined by the candidates. As seldom before, this campaign will be a campaign of candidates and the attitude of the party on public questions can only be fully known when both platform and candidates are fully known and understood.

Owing to the situation in Europe, I feel justified in saying something about our foreign policy. This country needs peace. Without peace, we can not hope to adjust our domestic affairs. The nearest approach to a practical guarantee of peace for the people of this country is to remain wholly aloof from any and all foreign controversies or political comments.

The Republican Party has trifled a long time with the question of surrendering our traditional foreign policy and all to its utter discredit. It has had neither the courage to wholly reject nor to wholly defend this policy—invaluable to the welfare of the American people and indispensable to the perpetuity of American institutions.

It is to be hoped that the position of the party will no longer be left in doubt and that all schemes, with whatever plausible pretense presented, designed to draw us into foreign controversies and foreign wars, will be put at rest. We want no part in any foreign wars. We want to devote the energy and patriotism of our people to our own problems at home.

Would Shy Clear of League.

I am particular to stress this matter since we are advised that the League is to be remodeled with a view of including the United States to become a member. No League, no legal department of the League—euphoniously called the Court—no subtle, shadowy deception under the name of peace, calculated to involve us in foreign matters, can be anything but detrimental and even dangerous to the American people.

Undoubtedly, important questions relating to government and the integrity of our Constitution will be debated before the voters during the coming campaign. There are those who seem to feel that these questions will be a determining factor in the coming election. I hope that anything I may say upon this subject will not leave an impression with you that I do not fully appreciate the importance of all questions which relate to the preservation of constitutional government in all its integrity.

We ought not to forget, indeed, we will not be permitted to forget, in this campaign that to the destitute sharecropper of the South, to the jobless millions in the North, to all who still live by help of the Government, to the farmer wrestling with his debts and taxes in the shadow of a threatened diminished market, to independent business everywhere, to men and women all over the land, in business or in the professions, anxious to know how long they can carry the ever-increasing burdens of government, city, State and National—to all these: debates over constitutional government and the integrity of the courts may seem strangely remote from their personal problems.

These social and economic problems are bound up, not only in the open field of endeavor but also in the hearts and minds of the people with the questions of Government. It is so elsewhere. It is no different under our own flag.

We have witnessed in our own generation the effect of social unrest and economic distress upon government to an extent that we ought not to be different to the effect of these things at home. The swift incredible change in Russia culminating in the Soviet regime; the Fascist coup in Italy, establishing a plutocratic government; the successive revolutions in Germany, a most conservative people, leading at last to Nazi Hitlerism full of unsolved political riddles; these things can not be wholly ignored when we are discussing the relation of social questions to government. I am neither prophesying nor defending revolution. I am saying that in the modern world social and economic problems are associated in the popular mind with wisdom and efficiency of any form of government—the republican or autocratic.

If one-quarter of one per cent of all the corporations in the United States, as they have and do, control one-half of all corporate wealth and fix prices on many of the most essential things in our daily living, then, as to the most vital things in life, the means and standard of living, concentration of economic power is already established and, if continued, concentration of governmental power to meet the situation will inevitably follow.

Will we long, as a people, be able to maintain a situation under a Constitution which declares you may not fix prices on the farm or in the home because of Etate lines, but private corporate interests may fix prices throughout the entire country regardless of State lines? I mention these things, not to carry forward a discussion which might be supported by a multitude of facts equally applicable, but to indicate my belief that underlying any and all questions touching the preservation of constitutional democracy are the economic problems now undermining democracy.

When the national recovery act, now held unconstitutional, was proposed, it was supported almost by the entire Nation, by 90 per cent of the press, by an overwhelming majority of Congress, by the Executive. It is believed now that, had this law become permanent, it would have wrought fundamental changes in our form of government.

Only five men stood in the way of its permanent adoption. Behind this measure at the time—and which alone made it possible—was business chaos, hunger and threatened starvation. Something had to be done. How near we were to a most fundamental change in our whole constitutional structure! And why were we so near? Because of economic and financial conditions that had become intolerable. What brought about these conditions? It was an economic and financial set-up that reduced one-half of our people to the ragged edge of want. Ten years had gone by since the war. Our national income was over $80,000,000,000. Neither drought nor famine had visited our people.

Something Basically Wrong.

Yet something was basically wrong. Monopolistic greed had robbed millions of a decent living or even an opportunity to make a decent living. All of this reacted upon the most fundamental principles of constitutional government and with practical approval of the entire Nation. No government can indefinitely withstand the attrition of the enternal urge of hunger or economic distress.

When we take our constitutional problems to the voters, we must be prepared to tell them how we propose to deal with the conditions, and the only conditions, which really imperil constitutional government. With anything like economic justice in this country this Government and the great principles upon which it rests are not in the slightest danger of fundamental change.

On my desk is a letter from an Independent oil company which says: "The Standard Oil and four other companies are out to secure the monopoly of the world's oil production. They have it now in the United States. We, who are known as independents, are permitted now to follow the oil business with the grace of the Standard Oil Co. and its associates." These oil companies, or some of them, have been extremely active in this pre-convention campaign. Their representatives will sit in the convention. Some of us shall be interested to know where they throw their influence!

If the Republican Party can find no way to control the economic power which these companies exert upon every person in the land, regardless of State lines, shall we hope to make effective with the voters our argument that State rights under the Constitution must be maintained? These oil companies are now, as private corporations, exerting a power over the private citizen in the respective States which the Constitution has declared the Government does not possess.

The Supreme Court has declared the Federal Government has no power to control production nor any way to affect farm prices on the farm. That, it is declared, is a matter with which the States alone may deal. But five corporations, in no wise hindered by State lines, may, and do, control production and affect farm prices by fixing prices on the implements without which production can not go forward. What the Government may not do affirmatively, or negatively—may not do for want of power—private corporations are permitted to do regardless of State lines or State rights.

There are no State lines and no State rights and no private rights apparently as against the practices and exploitation of combines and monopolies. As to them, this is one vast consolidated empire, the richest prey that human greed ever seized upon. They sweep across State lines, defy State sovereignty, and undermine and destroy the prosperity of the citizen upon which the whole State rests.

They shut the door of opportunity to millions and fix the prices that every housewife in the State must pay to maintain the family. The Federal Government can not send an agent within the State to interfere, either for weal or woe, with the daily affairs of the people, and upon such principle alone can a Federal Union endure.

But we cannot long maintain a government with 48 States for purposes of Government and an empire for purposes of exploitation. If we are to repossess the confidence of the people of this country, we must advise them, in no uncertain terms, what we are going to do about it, and do it. This Government was made for, and can be adapted only to, free men and free women, men and women with equal opportunities in life, with freedom to choose an avocation, or profession, and pursue it under general, just and equal laws. And regimentation, private or public, means inevitably a change in the whole structure of government. Our Government will not work under either scheme.

Millions Deserting Party.

The pre-convention Republican campaign may, or may not, have determined the strength of the respective candidates for the Presidency. So far as I am individually concerned, that is, and has been at all times, a secondary proposition. But it has revealed beyond doubt that millions of men and women who have heretofore believed in, and supported, the party have registered their votes elsewhere and, at this time, propose to cast them elsewhere. The combined vote, or showing, of all the candidates discloses but a remnant of that strength, which the party has in previous campaigns displayed.

The voters will tell you, and they do tell you, wherever you go throughout the country, to an extent as depressing as it is alarming, that they no longer accept, or believe in, the political views or the economic theories of the dominating influences of the party. The registration books, even in hitherto Republican strongholds, confirm these private statements. The supreme question is: How to repossess their confidence and to secure their support?

An effort is being made to convince the people that to vote for the Republican Party does not mean we are going back. But that depends! If the men who have dominated the party in recent years and who are seeking to dominate it still continue to control the party, it is a challenge to the common sense of the voters of the country to tell them we are not going back in case we are given power. We will go back. They do not know anywhere else to go.

Why is this fight being made by Mr. Hilles, Mr. Roraback, Mr. Schorr, and Mr. Brown, and the powerful financial and corporate interests behind them except for the very purpose of going back? That is their great objective.

Has anyone a right to assume that they have changed their political views or policies? On the contrary, we know that they have not. And if they have not, is there a single principle, or tenet, to be found in their whole political order to which the average man or woman can pin his or her faith or rest a single hope for the future? The Republican Party has met more than one crisis in its history. It has held more than one convention of tremendous moment. But it has never met a crisis nor held a convention of greater moment than the one which will convene in a few days at Cleveland.

In conclusion, I venture to say that there is a political creed lying about in the hearts and minds of the American people which some political party will yet gather up and adopt. And when it does, it will sweep the country. It is the creed of simple, sincere, loyal Americanism—the Americanism which covets the friendship of all nations, eager for advancement and progress in all things, capable of grasping and applying the highest conceptions of the human mind, and gathering the richest fruits of civilizatoin, but always acting upon and within true and sound American principles.

Saddened and tormented by a was which was none of their own, disheartened and impoverished by years of economic distress through no fault of theirs, baffled and confused by the constant narrowing of their rights and privileges, resentful as they see the opportunities of life more and more controlled by great economic power, there is, in my opinion, a rekindling of the old-fashioned faith in American principles and an increasing belief in the American way and in the whole scheme of American life.

80-Passenger Planes Of Future Described

Spokane, Wash., May 28 (AP).—Eighty-passenger transport airplanes, with engines double the horsepower of the largest ships produced today and instruments accurate as a jeweled watch, were described to the Northwest Aviation Council today as developments of the near future.

"I know of three manufacturers who have plans on their engineers' boards for planes twice the size of the 40-passenger job we now have in the experimental stage."

New Deal Hurts Business, Steel Leaders Charge

By the United Press.

New York, May 28.—Speakers at the forty-fifth general meeting of the United States Iron and Steel Institute tonight denounced the New Deal as an attempt to destroy the rights of States and individual citizens and to extend political control to many major phases of the economic and personal life of the Nation.

The speakers included Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation; Hugh Morrow, president of Sloss-Sheffield Steel & Iron Co., and Dr. Neil Carothers, dean of the College of business administration, Lehigh University.

Morrow said the New Deal is an effort to change the social, civic and political order of the Nation.

"Weird and fantastic theorists," he said, "propose to level off every head that rises above the average."

He saw the United States as a battleground between reason and hysteria in a desperate conflict between public opinion and public emotion.

Defends Individualism.

He defended the doctrine of rugged individualism and the Supreme Court, which, he said, "has recently stopped some of the cracks in the dam which were inviting a flood."

"If I were called upon to name the most important right vested in the people of this country," Morrow said, "I would unhestitatingly say that it is the right of every man to say what he thinks at any time and on any occasion (and this includes telegrams). If the people of Russia had possessed and exercised that right, there would have been no Stalin. There would have been no Hitler in Germany, no Mussolini in Italy."

Dr. Carothers saw the New Deal as a "Government by slogans instead of a Government by economic principles."

He denounced the assertion that the depression was caused by a failure of the American economic system. "It was due to a world war that ate the heart out of the world's capital, destroyed the world's trade and demoralized the world's currency," he said.

Praises U. S. System.

The American system has done more in the past 50 years to solve the world problem of poverty and insecurity than any other system ever conceived, the economist said.

"You cannot hurry this economic system," the speaker said, "it cannot be greatly improved by legislation * * *. Artificial interference may seriously damage it. You cannot materially increase production or wages by act of Congress. You cannot end depression by act of Congress. But you can materially decrease production and you can materially prolong depression by act of Congress."

Efforts to improve economic conditions, such as those in Russia, invariably have failed, the speaker said.

Government regulation of industry, he believed, must be limited and it must be fair and impartial and based on sound economics.

Taylor emphasized that the steel makers are "in the position of trustees for those who have saved their money and put it into our industry, for the public by whose purchases we live and for the employes who make possible the creation of the wealth which we pass on to the community in return for other forms of wealth."

Foresees Recovery.

If "we continue to emerge from the depression in the definite and substantial way that we have risen from its lowest stages * * * we shall find ourselves free from the difficulties which have so long beset us," he said.

Earlier in the day Eugene G. Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation and president of the institute—who was re-elected for another one-year term—said attempts to extend political control over economic and personal life constituted the most serious problem before the American people.

He attacked the Wagner labor act, and added that whatever progress industry is able to make toward lower costs and prices is being offset by larger taxes."

E. T. Weir, chairman of the National Steel Corporation, told the steel men that the keystone of the modern industrial system must be "not only high wages, but the highest possible wages."

How a Baby Grows

By Dr. Arnold Gesell, M. D.

Standing Part One

THE BABY STANDS—The ability to stand comes by slow degrees. The pictures below show the baby at the age of 24 weeks. He likes to be held in a standing position at this age and, with assistance, will step forward and backward, will bounce up and down. He will not be able to support his entire weight until he is 32 weeks old. Then, unable to balance himself, he will cling to objects for support. TOMORROW: Standing, Part Two.

Powhatan Roof Grand Opening Set for Tonight

Pete Macias and Orchestra Returning; Shoreham Premiere Monday.

By Chanticleer.

Prospects for a delightful summer around the home precincts are certainly on the up and up today. Word comes that the Shoreham Terrace will formally open Monday. And for the moment (and who doesn't favor the moment!) we have the grand opening of the Powhatan Roof this very night.

Pete Macias will be back from a vacation following the seasonal closing of the Macias Club Heigh-Ho a few weeks ago.

Both dinner and supper will be served for the gala opening tonight. Ol' Massa Pete will be in charge in a very personal way, with Ramon greeting the patrons as of yore—and Jimmy Nichols and Marty Rubin all set with a flock of new songs.

They say a lot of changes have been made this year, with emphasis on a brand new wood dance floor.

* * * *

The Shoreham Terrace, by word from Gardner Moore, hotel manager, will receive its first summer guests Monday night. And probably no gayer evening will be spent by anyone amid the umbrella-topped tables with Barnee back from Chicago.

For the opening, Moore has arranged a special entertainment, including the vaudeville novelty of Jay and Lou Seiler, who may ski or ride horseback right into the middle of your premiere revelry; the Jack Randoll Company, adagio wonders, and the music of Barnee for dancing.

If you can't wait until Monday to visit the Shoreham, remember the ballroom is open through the week-end, with Lester Cole and his Midshipmen as the attraction.

* * * *

Guess what? Josephine, chimpansee mascot at Maryland Club Gardens, has a new accomplishment. Josephine already knows how to tie her own shoe laces and mix a smart cocktail. Now she makes cigarettes.

They are saying that Henry Daugherty and his band will leave La Paree for a long summer tour because his swing music is so torrid that it won't do indoors in the summertime.

* * * *

It seems safe to predict that the planning and affort that went into transforming a huge storage room into the Cocoanut Grove, one of the most pretentiously done of the local nighteries, will pay dividends. The new Grove is suge and is one spot where the dance floor is built on a scale to accommodate dancing feet. The floor show is of a sepia complexion. Phil Scott is staging this week's opening revue, aided by the hard-working Barrington Guy, barytone. Charles Pettis, dancer; Mae Larkin, songstress, and others. And the usual dark-hued and exceedingly nimble chorus. Backing it all up is Pete Moss and his band. No likker yet, but that will be along in a day or two. Try the Cocoanut Grove.

* * * *

The floor shows at the Dude Ranch are going, going, gone. Host Barrett put his ear to the ground and decided to give floor entertainment a summer vacation and give the people what they want most right now—the Carolina Club Orchestra.

The records went to smithereens at Chevy Chase Lake last Saturday night for the opening—and now Boss Bill Keyeser is adding 20 additional tables.

Little Kitty Simons has abandoned those mannish tailored costumes in her appearances at the Ambassador's Hi-Hat Room, and has gone feminine.

If you want to take to the water for Memorial Day take note of the river cruise to Quantico. The S. S. Potomac offers two trips—one Saturday and one Sunday. The Melody Aces will provide the music. Moonlight cruises in the evenings to the times of Bernie Jurboe's Night Hawks.

* * * *

Matt Windsor's new Russian Roof may be the spot for youse guys and gals who stay in the village over the vacation week-end. Floor show of dancing, singing and comic stars, with Windsor himself, an accomplished accordionist, as master of ceremonies.

Pete Macias and his boys spent an evening at the Hamilton's Rainbow Room with Moe Baer and his orchestra. Barnee was there, too. Just a postman's holiday.

After Dark the Trend Is to the Outdoors

On the Air Today

This is the time of year when the gentlemen charged with providing publicity for stars of radio write sympathetic and understanding letters to newspaper radio writers about vacations. Each of the publicity gentlemen wishes to take over a share of the work of preparing a daily column while the proprietor of said column is off fishing, motoring or otherwise disporting himself in vacation fashion.

Getting down to cases, the publicity gentlemen have at hand generous quantities of "guest columns" prepared by the stars they represent. The idea is perfect. The radio writer locks up his desk the night before his vacation (if any) and Gracie Allen, Ben Bernie, Walter O'Keefe or any one of 50 or 60 other radio celebrities carry on in his absence, providing a column a day.

If you would like to see what kind of a column any one or more of them would prepare, just drop me a note and we'll see if the material can't be had for your perusal before the summer is over.

Features today:

Joan Marsh: Has been signed as featured songstress of "Red Horse Tavern," with Walter Woolf King, WJSV, at 7. (Same Joan Marsh of the films.)

Track Meet: Interscholastic competition from Central High Stadium, with Arch McDonald, Larry Elliott, Hugh Conover and Bryson Rash manning the mikes, WJSV, at 4. Winners will be interviewed.

"Our Nation's Capital:" Last of series, featuring Dr. Herbert Putnam, on books of interest to children, WMAL, at 10:30 a. m. Also Dr. Henry B. Wilkins, describing stringed instruments. From Library of Congress.

Jessica Dragonette: Guests with Richard Himber and Champions, WRC, at 9. Sings "I Dream Too Much" and "I'll Follow My Secret Heart."

Celebration: NBC pays tribute to Arkansas Centennial, with Lum and Abner, Russ Morgan's orchestra, Dick Powell, Bob Burns and others. Short addresses by Harvey Couch and Senators Robinson and Caraway.

Raymond Moley: On "The Road to Reaction," WJSV, at 9:45.

* * * *

Oddly enough Dick Powell, whose big show has been "Hollywood Hotel," will not be heard tonight in his familiar role as singing master of ceremonies, but his voice will be heard in connection with the Arkansas Centennial program. No promises have been made, however, that he will sing. No doubt, were he able to sing, he would be at his old spot before the "Hollywood Hotel" mike. He will talk, however, in the Arkansas program. Powell will be heard for the first time on the airways tonight in many a long day. He retired temporarily several weeks ago from radio work when a throat affliction made a vacation necessary. By doctor's orders. Since, a wide variety of stories have reached this desk ranging from his permanent retirement to mysterious concoctions that suggest the very grave. J. H. H.

14 Fellowships Are Awarded By Brookings

Universities Co-operate in Providing for Research Work Here.

Award of 14 fellowships by the Brookings Institution for advanced study in the social sciences during the academic year 1936-37 was announced yesterday by Leverett S. Lyon, executive vice president. Seven of the fellowships were given in co-operation with leading universities.

Recipients of fellowships will reside at the Institution. They will do research work of their own choosing, guided by the Institution's staff.

Subjects to be studied include labor disputes, the Federal relief policy, export trade, farm legislation and the Federal control of motor carriers.

Universities co-operating in fellowship arrangements with the Institution include, Yale, Cornell, Virginia, Kentucky, Pennsylvania, Brown, Michigan, Chicago, Wisconsin, Radcliffe, Ohio State and the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy.

The successful applicants and their research subjects are:

Philip S. Brown, Harrisburg, Pa. Graduate of Harvard and now a graduate student there. "Components of the Demand for and the Supply of Gold."

Donald R. Church, Ann Arbor, Mich. Graduate student of the University of Michigan. "Federal Control of Motor Carriers." Degrees from the University of Nevada and the University of California. Has also done graduate work at Columbia University. Michigan-Brookings co-operative fellowship.

Ernst Doolin, London, England. Engaged in private research. "The Safeguarding of American Foreign Investments." Holder of the degree of doctor of economics from the Berlin School of Economics, Germany.

Josef Dunner, Philadelphia. Engaged in research at the University of Pennsylvania. "Labor Disputes, with Special References to Business Cycles." Has done graduate work at Frankfurt-au-Main, the University of Berlin, and the University of Basel, Switzerland, receiving the degree of doctor of economics at Basel.

Joseph C. Ellett, Pocahontas, Va. Graduate of the University of Richmond and now a graduate student at the University of Virginia. "The Expenditures and Policies of the Federal Government for Relief During the Depression." Virginia-Brookings co-operative fellowship.

Herbert R. Ferleger, Philadelphia. Graduate of Temple University and now a graduate student at Columbia University. "Export Trade in Oil and the International Rivalry for Markets."

Betti C. Goldwasser, New York. Graduate of Bryn Mawr College and now a graduate student at Radcliffe College. "The Relation of Savings to Investment in Industrial Equipment During the Post-War Period." Radcliffe-Brookings co-operative fellowship.

Kingsley W. Hamilton, Wooster, Ohio. Graduate of the College of Wooster and now a graduate student at Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy. "Commercial Treaties." Fletcher School-Brookings co-operative fellowship.

Louise W. Holborn, Hamden, Conn. Graduate of the school of politics, Berlin, Germany, and now a graduate student at Radcliffe College. "The League of Nations and the Refugees in the Postwar Period." Radcliffe-Brookings cooperative fellowship.

Guy A. Lee, Graduate of Wabash College and now a graduate student at Harvard University. "The History of the Economic Relationship Between East and West as Shown by the Financing of the Grain Trade."

William H. Moore, Chicago. Graduate of the University of Iowa and now a graduate student at the University of Chicago. "Railroad Stockholders and the Regulation of Railroad Finances" or "Investment Qualities of Bank Stock Profits and Losses of Commercial Banks."

Richard H. Roberts, Iowa Falls, Iowa. Graduate of the University of Iowa and now a research assistant there. "The Administration of New Deal Farm Legislation." Has also done graduate work at the University of Iowa.

Robert L. Smith, East Orwell, Ohio. Graduate of Oberlin College and now an instructor and graduate student at Cornell University. "Corporate Surplus Accounts and Revaluation of Assets." Cornell-Brookings cooperative fellowship.

Henry J. Tasca, Philadelphia. Graduate of Temple University and now a graduate student at the University of Pennsylvania. "The Return to Reciprocity." Pennsylvania-Brookings cooperative fellowship.

U. S., England Urged to Keep Friendly Views

Sir Ian Fraser Speaks at Anniversary of Battle of Cantigny.

Sir Ian Fraser, British war veteran and member of Parliament, last night asked for the continuance of Anglo-American friendship.

Sir Ian was speaking at a dinner of the District branch of the First Division Society, held last night to celebrate the eighteenth anniversary of the battle of Cantigny.

Prophesying that the next two or three years would be years of great tension for his country, the speaker said Great Britain needed friends in the Mediterranean, in France and in the United States.

Another speaker, Maj. Hanson E. Eley, reviewed the battle of Cantigny and the part played by the Twenty-eighth Infantry, of the First Division, which he commanded.

General Ely said the action at Cantingy w asthe first time Americans demonstrated that, as a unit, they were equal to the seasoned fighting men of the other allied powers.

The sword awarded annually by the First Division Society to the Washington High Scholo cadet attaining highest honors in military science went this year to Cadet Colonel Edwin A. Halsey, jr., son of Col. Edwin A. Halsey, Secretary of the Senate. The presentation was made by Maj. Clarence R. Heubner, president of the society.

Maj. Heubner also announced the society had awarded three scholarships to the Citadel, a college at Charleston, S. C. The Washington winner is John A. McLaughlin, a graduate this year of Eastern High School. McLaughlin has been major of the cadet corps and a leader in scholo activities.

New Studio Arc Saves Crawford Eyes From Hurt

Improved Lighting Device Relieved Strain and Cured 'Squint.'

By the United Press.

Hollywood, May 28.—A newly developed sputterless sun arc lamp saved Joan Crawford for the great "Outdoors."

Long work under bright lights overtaxed small muscles controlling the Crawford eyes, and in dazzling southern California sunlight she developed a pronounced squint, which went none too well with regal carriage and tragic features.

The actress was about to give up sunny exterior scenes entirely when along came the new lights and enabled technicians to move the great "Outdoors" inside.

Old-style open arcs were the only lights previously capable of impersonating the sun, but they were useless in talking pictures because their sputtering and crackling could not be kept out of microphones.

Incandescent lights which came in with the talkies have been used on outdoor scenes shot inside, but results always appeared artificial, because the lamps were not powerful enough to cast proper light and shadow contrasts in competition with other lights on the set.

Sputterless arcs first appeared in studios about six months ago, but are still emerging from the experimental stage.

They were first used extensively in "Romeo and Juliet," and are now shining on Crawford in "The Gorgeous Hussy," a largely outdoor picture which will never see real sunlight.

Shirley Also Skates.

Shirley Temple took at once to Sonja Henie, world's champion woman skater, but apparently doesn't think much of her skill on skates. Sonja visited Shirley's dressing room, collected her autograph and invited her to "come and see me skate some time."

"Sure," replied the youngster. "You must come and see me skate some time too." Shirley meant roller-skating. It's the only kind she savvies.

Tall, jutting-jawed Fred MacMurray appears to be cutting in on George Raft of the slick hair and high trousers. When Raft walked out on "The Princess Comes Across," MacMurray stepped into the part opposite Carole Lombard. Now MacMurray is cast with Gladys Swarthout in "Champagne Waltz," a role originally designed for Raft.

Nelson B. Bell

About The Showshops

THE Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of Will Shakespeare's classic tragedy of "Romeo and Juliet" is being regarded by its sponsors as the test of whether the public and various national groups crusading for "better motion pictures" really are in earnest in their jeremiads or merely chattering to hear themselves talk. This, at least, is one of the definite impressions created yesterday by Barrett C. Kiesling, studio representative, who addressed a representative group of pen women, educational leaders, civic workers, Shakespearean students and members of the press at an elaborate luncheon spread in the cabinet room of the Willard Hotel.

NELSON B. BELL.

Mr. Kiesling has made several important discoveries with regard to public taste and the psychological approach to the screen of certain preview groups scattered about the country. Since Washington is the twenty-fifth city visited on his present swing around the circle—which will continue until the middle of July, by the way—he has had ample opportunity to make widespread observations and reach very specific conclusions. One of the latter is that certain active groups, ostensibly safeguarding the welfare of the rising generation by protecting them against a salacious cinema, have their attention more securely riveted upon the bad films than upon the good.

This is evidenced by cold statistics proving that when the best of the fine films produced during the last 18 months have reached their communities, public response at the box office has been from 20 to 25 per cent under the average of other communities where the welfare units have actively campaigned for support of a picture worthy of their interest and indorsement.

Mr. Kiesling, of course, is primarily concerned with the reception that will be accorded "Romeo and Juliet" when it is released for national exhibition some four months from now. The cost of a picture of this character mounts into the millions of dollars. If the public does not care for such entertainment as is afforded by films of this magnitude, the surest and most effective way to kill them off is to ignore them when they come to town. It is to prevent this, insofar as may be, that this earnest and widely informed young man—with more than 20 years of studio and motion picture experience behind him—is making his present tour.

There can be no question of the seriousness with which M-G-M has approached the task of converting "Romeo and Juliet" into artistic and compelling celluloid. The finished picture represents a preliminary effort involving some two years of intensive research work, including the actual presence of a studio staff of artists and artisans in Verona, measuring streets, public squares and the like, in order that the film may be authentic as well as an artistic treat to the eye and ear.

The cast that has been assembled is one to conjure with—Leslie Howard and Norma Shearer in the name parts, John Barrymore, Basil Rathbone, Edna May Oliver, as the Nurse, and scores more of the first rank on both stage and screen.

It is interesting to note that Mr. Barrymore, the Mercutio of the picture, is distinguished for the excellence of his Hamlet and that Basil Rathbone, the Thybalt, was the first of Katharine Cornell's Romeos in her recent revival of the play.

Perhaps Mr. Kiesling is correct in his pronouncement regarding the test of public taste. If the general public does not care for such works as "Romeo and Juliet," which Irvin S. Cobb has classified as "a fine Kentucky feud story," then we might as well go directly back to the horse opera and have it over with!

• • • •

It is difficult for one who has not viewed her performance in the part to imagine Edna May Oliver quite so perfect a selection for the role of the Nurse as might have been made out of all the gifted character women in Hollywood. Perhaps Miss Oliver will find it quite within the range of her generous endowments to lend the role of Juliet's helpful mentor the touch of tenderness it requires. It has never occurred to me, however, that the Nurse is a comic creation, per se, as Mr. Kiesling implied in the course of his remarks yesterday, although there are lines in her speeches which, of course, reveal a subtle and deep-seated wit and substantial grasp of life's complexities. Some of the more pungent of these lines I am informed, have been deleted from the picture script. They were retained in the Cornell acting version. It will be interesting to observe so acidulous a comedienne as Edna May Oliver in a role that seems more within the temperamental gifts of a May Robson or a Jessie Ralph.

• • • •

From the Willard Hotel one trudged a sunny block to the east to meet Rex Ingram, "De Lawd" of Warner Brothers' picturization of Marc Connelly's "The Green Pastures," in the Warner clubrooms in the Earle Theater Building.

The towering actor who succeeded on the screen to the role made famous by the late Richard B. Harrison, on the stage, finds himself in a bit of a quandary. Immediately prior to his engagement for the role of the Jehovah in "Pastures," Ingram had been playing the role of Satan in "Blow, Gabriel, Blow." Having leaped with rare agility from one pole to the other, he wonders where he goes from here!

There is a definite responsibility connected with the playing of the part of "De Lawd." It is increased rather than diminished by the likelihood that the film version will be seen by vastly more people than ever viewed the stage play, widely as that memorable work was toured. Something of the aura of the role communicates itself to the player undertaking it. Rex Ingram is vividly conscious of this fact and hesitates to make the attempt of following "The Green Pastures" with any other stage engagement—at least for the time being. At the moment, it seems likely that he will return to the practice of medicine, in which he was graduated from Northwestern University. More of him and Mr. Connelly's "Pastures" later.

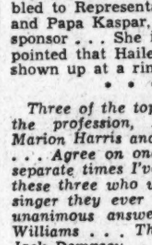
Gorgeous Huskies.

Bouncing checks are common enough on Broadway . . . But there is a bouncing Czech on the Calloused Canyon now who really has money in the bank . . . The reference is to Francicha Jellineck, the platinum-blonde from St. Paul, Minn., who clicked locally under her stage tag of Frances Williams . . . At the moment, Miss Williams is standing on the same springboard from which Benny Fields vaulted to heavy dough, the flooring of the Hollywood . . . Thus a bad year comes to a happy ending for the former Miss Jellineck, because thieves cracked into her New York apartment and cleaned her out . . . She was recovering from this foul blow at White Sulphur when thieves broke into her hotel room and again grabbed all the jewels and money in sight . . . To top it all, she went to work in a Philly night club, worked two weeks and didn't get a dime . . . The gorgeous hussy was about ready to lean on a shovel for the WPA when Joe Moss engaged her.



WILLIAMS.

• • • •

The St. Paul platinum plush peach really adds to the decorativeness of the Stem, for there have been only two women performers with her chic . . . One was Irene Castle, the other was Blossom Seeley . . . On the stage, Frances Williams has occupied the same position Mrs. Harrison Williams occupies in socity . . . They are stylish kids . . . But there is little or no doubt that Frances sings the swingier tune, and attracts equally interesting people. Two nights running, she has warbled to Representative Zioncheck and Papa Kaspar, the quadruplet sponsor . . . She is mildly disappointed that Haile Selassie hasn't shown up at a ringside table yet.

• • • •

Three of the top girl singers of the profession, Helen Morgan, Marion Harris and Helen Morgan . . . Agree on one thing . . . At separate times I've asked each of these three who was the greatest singer they ever heard . . . The unanimous answer was Hannah Williams . . . The present Mrs. Jack Dempsey . . . They say that she was the only "originator" to come to Tin Pan Alley in the past decade, and that her style of rhythm singing was seven years ahead of her time . . . Broadway said the same thing about Sophie Tucker, Belle Baker, Ruth Etting and Ethel Merman on their arrivals.

• • • •

Of all the femme choir, my favorite was Marion Harris . . . First time I ever heard her was at the old Palace, and I was sitting with Arthur Willi, now the head talen scout for RKO . . . The annunciator signs at each side of the stage failed to light up, so I didn't know who she was . . . Her singing was as cool and exciting as a mountain brook, and at the end of [illegible] new stanzas, she'd transpose the song to a higher key until it seemed that her voice would soar right out of the theater . . . "That girl will make a lot of money," I raved to Willi, enthusiastically . . . "She has—for the past ten years," was his squelch . . . It seems that I was ten years late in "discovering" her . . . She has been ill for the past two years, but I'd walk a mile to hear her sing again, and so would the customers.

• • • •

Kate Smith may not qualify as a gorgeous hussy, but you can't leave her out of any discussion of singers . . . It is no accident that she is still in the top flight of radio orioles after years of headlining . . . It is to be doubted that any girl singer ever hit notes on "the button" as she hits them . . . I've never heard her even a tiny fraction away from the key, and the integrity of her tone has a vocal authority that few of her rivals possess . . . Washington writers engage occasionally in heated arguments as to which one of them actually "discovered" her . . . But there is no argument as to her talent . . . She's got what it takes.

• • • •

If she has turned to charity work, this has been the natural reaction to her own loneliness . . . Miss Smith is extremely sensitive about her size, and is resigned to the fact that she never drove men to drink or to poetry . . . That and her nearsightedness have made her a veritable recluse . . . So all this stored-up affection manifests itself in her various charities, and she is very sincere about them . . . Her present plan, I understand, is to build a hospital for children.

• • • •

Of the foreign singing stars of feminine gender, Irene Bordoni was tops . . . She fitted every American conception of a Parisian singer, just as Anna Held captivated the town when Flo Ziegfeld imported her . . . There was a sauciness to La Bordoni that penetrated even to the back rows . . . Jeanne Aubert had more chic, but less talent . . . Lili Damita had it on both of them for sheer appeal, but a tiny voice that did not match her gorgeousness . . . Lyda Roberti, foreign at least in dialect, was the most stimulating bundle of smiles and personality . . . When she cracked into the local amphitheater with Lou Holtz, that other gorgeous hussy, Roberti set the town on its ear, but drifted off to the cinema too soon.

• • • •

Best young songster around town now is a lass from Scotland, Ella Logan . . . Next to her, but in another division, rank Josephine Huston, who has everything, including the very vital matter of S. A. . . . Complete your list with the Frazee Sisters, Joan Abbott and Patti Chapin, of the Ziegfeld program . . . All of them easy to look at, delightful on the ear—gorgeous hussies of the Queerialto.

The Cinema Presents Its Juliet

The smiling young Veronese pictured above is the Juliet that will be seen in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the Shakespeare tragedy of "Romeo and Juliet," when that classic tale is released for the screens of the world some four months hence. She is, of course, Norma Shearer, whose memorable performances in "Smilin' Thru" and "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" seem to augur another superb characterization when this stellar work is made public. Leslie Howard and John Barrymore will appear in the male leads as Romeo and Mercutio, respectively.

Commons Told U.S. Navy Leads Britain's in Air

By the Associated Press.

London, May 28.—The United States Naval air forces are 100 per cent ahead of Great Britain, Admiral Sir Roger Keyes told the House of Commons today.

The reason, Sir Roger said, is that the American Navy has divorced itself from outside control in the development of its aviation.

His assertion came during a frank, critical review of the British naval position disclosing they intend to resume battleship construction as soon as the 1930 London Naval Treaty is dead and are seriously concerned over Japan's cruiser strength.

The name of the American Admiral, William H. Standley, figured in the exchange of opinions between British naval leaders.

"My old friend Admiral Standley was absolutely amazed when he learned the British navy was perfectly satisfied with the existing state of affairs," Sir Roger declared.

"Standley and every officer in the American Navy knows of the unhappy experience, the tribulations and the difficulties through which we are passing," he said.

Lord Stanley, financial secretary of the admiralty, announced the British have no intention of invoking the "escape" clause of the naval treaty in respect to cruisers.

Such a policy, he said, would save five small, old cruisers from the scrap heap, but would automatically entitle Japan to retain more numerous serviceable cruisers.

"It would surely be a high price to pay for those five ships whose course is almost run," he asserted.

Winston Churchill, veteran statesman, told members British taxpayers resented the absurdity of sinking five cruisers when Great Britain had only 53 and would immediately embark on a goal of 70 as soon as freed from the treaty which expires December 31.

Geoffrey Mander, the sole civilian to mix in the parliamentary debate, remarked sarcastically it appeared the sole accomplishment of the naval concentration in the Mediterranean was to escort Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia from Djibouti, French Somaliland.

The House, at the conclusion of the debate, rejected a Labor amendment to reduce the supplementary naval estimate and confirmed the figure 182 to 85.

Directors Have Devised Unique Casting Method

In Recruiting Chorus Girls Connolly and Berkeley Always Play Safe.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, May 28.—Bobby Connolly and Busby Berkley, dance directors, boast they can select a chorus of cuties with never a hair-pulling match for the girls nor a poke in the eye for themselves.

To do it they have an organization that would turn a Tammany boss green with envy, what with its "post card call," "delayed notice," and "secret choice."

Suppose a chorus of 100 girls is to be selected. Two relays of 600 each are summoned by postcard on two separate days. Response is usually 100 per cent, and no dancing tests are necessary because names are drawn from qualified central casting bureau lists.

Each girl presents her card at the studio, is given carfare home, and is not informed whether she got a job until two or three days later.

The Platoon System.

Chorines are herded together on a big sound stage, clad in bathing or sun suits, and the director and his assistants look them over.

First the group is divided in two, then subdivided and re-subdivided until each unit contains approximately the number to be retained. Girls are then sent home, and none knows which was the chosen group until registered letters are sent the successful dancers.

About 160 are retained from the two-day winnowing of 1,200 girls, and camera and dancing tests weed that number further until 120 remain. One hundred girls are chosen as "regulars," and 20 benched as "pinch-hitters."

Their "battle-proof" system is no mean achievement, say Berkeley and Connolly, for disappointed girls have been known not only to stage hysterical scenes among themselves, but also to swing an occasional punch at a director.

Handsome Cary Grant is dodging a self-styled "Cinderella Girl" who wants him to escort her round the bright spots one night only "to make my friends jealous."

Cinderella describes herself as a tall, graceful legal secretary who is "pleasing to look upon." After the single date, she wrote, she would "trouble him no more," and to clinch the case added that "I promise to go home at 11 o'clock."

Broken dolls are the only stimuli capable of drawing tears from little Sybil Jason. Sybil had to sob for a scene in "Way for a Pirate," but couldn't weep a drop. An inspired prop man dived into his bag of tricks, produced a large china doll, and ran across the stage saying: "Look, Sybil. This is for you."

Midway he purposely stumbled and smashed the puppet. Sybil dissolved in tears and the scene was shot, but the propster had to hunt all over the studio for a duplicate before the youngster could turn it off.

Dropping Mickey Mouse, Ann Ronell, young composer-lyricist, has signed with Paramount to score "Champagne Waltz." Ronell's best-known songs were written for Walt Disney ("Three Little Pigs" and the "Big, Bad Wolf") but she is also responsible for "Willow Weep For Me," and "Rain on the Roof."

Cutting Room Scraps.

Owen Davis, jr., and Virginia Field will announce their engagement shortly.

Phyllis Claire, London actress who once learned a dance step from Edward VIII, then Prince of Wales, in exchange for teaching him a song, signed by M-G-M.

Charles Butterworth will vacation in Norway and Sweden after finishing "We Went to College," he hopes. But he has been trying to make the trip for four years.

Robert Bruce is back from Honolulu with two new technicolor shorts named after the songs "Tahitian Skies" and "Song of the Islands."

Maneuvers of Navy Reviewed by Hitler

Kiel, Germany, May 28 (AP).—Reichsfuehrer Hitler reviewed Germany's sea power today. Aboard their "pocket battleship" Admiral Graf Spee, he watched maneuvers of the navy.

This was the first of three days which will celebrate the anniversary of the battle of Jutland in 1916. (Both Great Britain and Germany claim victory in that World War engagement.)

Those Who Are 'Under Two Flags'

Here we have Sergt. Victor, Cigarette and Maj. Doyle, the three principal characters in the new Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of Ouida's enduring story of the Legionnaires and the African desert, "Under Two Flags." They are, reading in the customary direction, Ronald Colman, Claudette Colbert and Victor McLaglen, stars of the first rank all, by every measure of Academy and other popular awards. In addition to these notables the cast of the picture opening today on the Palace screen includes Rosalind Russell, C. Henry Gordon and many others.

Libby Holman Sees Estate Executors

Baltimore, May 28 (AP).—Libby Holman Reynolds, former blues singer and widow of Smith Reynolds, conferred with officials of the Safe Deposit & Trust Co., executors of the $28,000,000 estate of Reynolds.

She also saw Benet Polikoff, one of her attorneys who was instrumental in getting $7,000,000 of the estate allotted to her son. Mrs. Reynolds declined to say where her son is now or to talk about the purpose of her visit.

She did say that she might return to the stage briefly during the summer at one of the New England playhouses. She wore a gray checked suit, a white blouse and a black velvet hat.

Jury Selected to Try Convict in Loeb Killing

Joliet, Ill., May 28 (AP).—A jury was completed late today to try James E. Day, Joliet Prison inmate, for the razor-slaying of "thrill killer" Richard Loeb last January in a penitentiary bathroom.

The last four jurors needed to fill the box were selected late this afternoon. Four days had been spent by attorneys for prosecution and defense in picking the 12.

Opening arguments will start tomorrow.

Baltimore Radio Man Wins Navy Recognition

Special Dispatch to The Post.

William A. Edmondson, of Baltimore, was commended yesterday by the Secretary of the Navy for his part in the rescue of an injured Army aviator from a wrecked plane at the Panama National Airport, Republic of Panama, on February 2.

Edmondson, a radioman, first class, attached to the Naval Radio Station, was one of the two enlisted men who saw a plane piloted by Lieut. I. W. Ott, of the Army Air Corps, crash. Disregarding the danger of an explosion and fire, Edmondson released Ott's safety belt and dragged the injured, unconscious flyer from the plane.

Hollywood

Movie Boners.

Hollywood May 28.

There is a big movie boner in the flicker "Under Two Flags," insists Joe Shields, who writes: "They made it a movie of the French Foreign Legion. It wasn't about the Foreign Legion at all, although most people believe so. The characters were in the Chasseurs d'Afrique, a cavalry outfit. There wasn't any Foreign Legion cavalry until after the World War. Incidentally, the story took place in the 1800's, not at the turn of the century.

EVELYN KNAPP.

"Even if it were the Foreign Legions', there's another boner," continues Shields. "There wouldn't be any foreign Maj. Doyle, the character portrayed by Victor McLaglen. In the legion the highest rank a foreigner can hold is that of a captain.

"In regard to the initial paragraph, the Foreign Legion isn't mentioned in the book 'Under Two Flags.' I read it to find out."

When, in the flicker "Laughing Irish Eyes," Evelyn Knapp calls Ray Walker on the telephone from midocean, the editor answers the phone and then tells Walker it is for him. The editor hands the phone to Walker with the receiver off the hook. Yet, says Clair Krupnick, when Ray Walker starts talking, he first takes the receiver off the hook.

Probably Ray Walker just wanted a piece of business so he could steal the scene and manage to gain your attention—which he did.

• • • •

"George Barbier is a fine actor," writes Jim Calcagno, "but I never knew he had the capabilities of a quick-change artist. In the flicker 'The Milky Way' there is a scene in the library of Marjorie Gateson. Barbier is first seen wearing white tie and tails. The scene shifts, and Barbier has on a black bow and tuxedo. The boner is repeated about four times in the scene." The wanted to make certain you'd see it.

In the flicker "Speed," R. Thomas claims a movie boner. "In the racing scene at Indianapolis, near the beginning, the announcer says that Car 41 is going into a spin. Then James Stewart is trying to avoid Car 41. The next flash, however, shows a car going around behind No. 41, but instead of being a white car, the one Stewart has been driving, it is a dark car. More movie tricks, eh?"

When technicolor is definitely established directors will have to be more careful.

• • • •

Josephine Hutchinson, in the flicker "I Married a Doctor," is seen walking with Ross Alexander on the railroad tracks, writes Harvey Rasin. Ross Alexander is seen without a hat. Then Pat O'Brien comes along with his car and invites them both in. They get in and Ross is still minus his hat. A second later Ross Alexander is seen wearing a hat.

In "Show Boat" Charles Winninger reads a letter to Helen Westley from Irene Dunne, who writes from Chicago that she and her husband, Allan Jones, are going to move from the Palmer House. However, says Arthur Murray, when Winninger and Westley visit Chicago much later, to see Irene Dunne, they look for her at the Palmer House.

Society Feted At Tea Given By O'Days

Daughter Assists Mother in Entertaining at Sulgrave Club.

Hostess Gowned in Black Chiffon; Admiral, Mrs Bristol Attend.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Representative Caroline O'Day, of New York, entertained yesterday afternoon, from 4:30 to 7, at a tea at the Sulgrave Club. She received her guests informally as they arrived, directing them to the dining room, where tea was served. Assisting her was her daughter, Miss Elia O'Day, who is returning Saturday to their home in Rye, N. Y., after having spent the season in Washington with her mother.

Mrs. O'Day wore a gown of black chiffon with wide ecru lace on the flowing sleeves and at the neck. Her hat was black and she had over her arm a fox scarf. Miss O'Day was in a brown and white print, with which she wore a baku hat with a band of brown ribbon. Late in the afternoon both the hostess and her daughter added to their costumes corsages of gardenias which came as the gift of Representative and Mrs. Edward A. McKenney, of New Jersey, who were among the guests.

Many who attended the tea were in dark dresses, black or navy blue, abandoning their summer clothes because of the cool weather. Among them was Mme. Wadsted, wife of the Minister of Denmark, who was in black. Mrs. William Barry, the bride of Representative Barry, of New York, who joined the Congressional delegation from that State in January, was one of those who refused to retreat from summer attire despite the temperature. She wore a large white straw hat and a white dress with a crisp jacket of red organdy which had a pencil plaid of blue.

The Director of the Mint, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, wore a gown of black satin, a fox scarf and a broad-brimmed Milan hat with a crown of satin. At her shoulder was a corsage of orchids, and a small bouquet of orchids also trimmed her hat.

Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol, whose friends always welcome seeing them at functions in the Capital, were among the guests who arrived during the latter part of the afternoon. They were in a group in which also was Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, who wore a tailored suit of navy blue with hat to match and a pink rose on her lapel.

To Leave in July.

Admiral and Mrs. Bristol expect to leave in July for a motor trip to Maine, taking with them their two little Pekinese dogs, Kne Cha and Pei Kiang.

Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, wife of the Attorney General, was another guest who always had an interested group around her. She was dressed in a black and white polka dot with green trimming, green accessories and a little silver donkey pin.

Mrs. Bagley Wallace, of Rye, a friend of Mrs. O'Day's, who has been spending some time in the Capital, also was there, wearing a black dress trimmed in green and a black hat with a trimming of green flowers. Her daughter, Miss Esther Wallace, who is to be a bridesmaid at the wedding of Miss Nanita Yulee Miles and Mr. Allyn Richmond Wight, June 6, also was among the guests.

Among others who were there late in the afternoon were Representative and Mrs. Walter Disney, Representative and Mrs. Henry C. Luckey and Representative and Mrs. J. Buell Snyder.

The tea table was decorated with a large, low bouquet of snapdragons, yellow daisies and blue delphinium and two smaller vases of the same flowers, and was lighted with three white tapers in silver candelabra at either end. The same flowers were used in large bouquets elsewhere in the room.

Committees to Aid Mrs. Joyce at Show

Mrs. Nash, Mrs. Thayer and Mrs. Benson Chairmen.

Mrs. Kenyon Joyce, wife of Col. Joyce, commanding officer at Fort Myer, will have several committees assisting her in serving luncheon on the grounds prior to the annual Army Relief Horse Show tomorrow. Heading the food committee is Mrs. John Nash, wife of Maj. Nash, commanding officer of the First Battalion, Sixteenth Field Artillery. Mrs. Arthur P. Thayer, wife of Maj. Thayer, commanding officer of the Second Squadron, Third Cavalry, will be in charge of the soft drinks committee, and Mrs. C. C. Benson, wife of Lieut. Col. Benson, is chairman of the cigaret committee.

Proceeds of the show, which starts at 1:30 p. m. near the Virginia entrance to the Memorial Bridge, will go to the fund for the welfare and relief of the widows and children of Army men.

Daughters of Navy Families to Act as Sponsors

MISS EVELYN STANDLEY,
daughter of Admiral William H. Standley, Acting Secretary of the Navy, and Mrs. Standley, who has been named by the President as sponsor of the U. S. S. Pickerel, submarine, which will be launched at New London, Conn., July 7.

Harris & Ewing.

MISS FRANCES W. ANDREWS, daughter of Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews, chief of the Bureau of Navigation, and Mrs. Andrews, who will sponsor the U. S. S. Lamson, destroyer, which will be launched at Bath, Me., June 27.

NOTES OF SOCIETY

Official and Resident

Mrs. Roosevelt will be guest of honor at a tea to be given this afternoon in New York by Mrs. Grover A. Whalen, Mrs. George Backer, Mrs. William H. Good, Mrs. Henry Goddard Leach, and the general committee of the National Fact Finders. This is an organization of New York women interested in finding for themselves and presenting to the public, facts and figures concerning the achievements of the Government during the depression years.

Justice and Mrs. Owen J. Roberts will leave today with their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Roberts, for their farm in Pennsylvania, to be gone until the fall.

The Minister of Finland and Mme. Jarnefelt left Washington yesterday for New York and will sail today aboard the Gripsholm for Europe, where they will spend the summer.

The Minister of Finland to Japan and Mme. Valvanne and their daughter Marja, who spent several days in the Capital at the legation of Finland, will also sail today aboard the Gripsholm for a vacation.

The Counselor of the Swedish Legation and Mme. Wennerberg have taken the house at Bluemoht, Va., occupied last season by the Counselor of the Netherlands legation and Baroness van Breugel Douglas, and will spend the summer there.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman have as their guest Mme. Paul Ritter of Switzerland, who arrived yesterday for a week's visit.

Mme. Ritter made her home in Washington when Mr. Ritter was Minister of Switzerland to the United States before the World War.

Mrs. Alexander Will Close Home.

Mrs. Edward R. Alexander will shortly close her home on New Hampshire avenue and go to Cleveland and open her home there for the summer.

Her two younger children, Miss Sylvia Alexander and Mr. John Alexander, will sail for Europe after their school closes and will spend the summer in France, residing with a French family.

Mrs. Alexander has as her guest for some time her brother, Mr. Piquette Mitchell.

Sunderlands Honor Joseph C. Fegans At Farewell Party

Col. and Mrs. Joseph C. Fegan, who are leaving Washington June 5 for the Naval War College at Newport, were guests of honor at a dinner given last night by Mr. and Mrs. L. Edwin Sunderland at the Shoreham.

Among others present were Senora de Pastoriza, wife of the Minister of the Dominican Republic; Representative Andrew Edmiston, Representative James G. Scrugham, Representative Dow W. Harter, Col. and Mrs. Clayton B. Vogel, Commander and Mrs. H. A. Seiller, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Shearer, Senora de Espaillat, Mme. Sanchez Latour, Mrs. Roger Bound, Miss Reba Doughton, Maj. Kemp Slaughter and Mr. Harris Willingham.

Mrs. Thomas H. C. Reed will close her apartment at 2101 Connecticut avenue on June 8 and will go to Cleveland to attend the Republican convention.

Following the convention she will go to Hawaii for a visit with friends and will then continue on to the Orient, where she will visit friends in Japan and China.

Mrs. David L. Frank Visiting in Capital.

Mrs. David L. Frank, formerly of Washington, is visiting Mrs. Helen Goldenberg at the Broadmoor.

Mr. and Mrs. Bertram V. Lobred have as their house guests for the week Mrs. Joseph Kuhn, Mrs. Harry Kohlman and Mrs. Louis Cohn, of Louisville, Ky.

Mrs. Lewis Emery, jr., left Washington last evening for her home in Bradford, Pa., where she will spend the summer.

40 Will Attend Annual Parley

Miss Florence Padgett, national president, will lead the delegation of 40 young women from Washington and vicinity who will attend the thirteenth annual convention of the Beta Gamma Phj Sorority tomorrow and Sunday at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, Atlantic City.

The Washington delegation will comprise about half the attendance. Other cities represented among the ten chapters of the sorority include Baltimore, New York and Brooklyn.

Following registration at noon, a group luncheon will open the program. A cocktail party later, the annual banquet and entertainment at night, meetings Sunday morning and a dinner in the evening will complete the week-end's events.

Among those from Washington and nearby planning to attend are Miss Norine Malgannon, Miss Dorothy Davis, Clarendon; Mrs. Howard McCloskey Miss Joy Deavers, Mrs. Jeannette Collinge, Mrs. Eloise Gould, Miss Martha Connelly, Mrs. James E. Nuttycombe Miss Mary C. Moore, Clarendon; Mrs. T. P. O'Keefe, Miss Dorothy C. Ryder, Miss Laura Senge, Miss Dorothy Hoffman, Mrs. Mildred Ornick, Mrs. Jeannette Struck, Miss Louise Metrailer.

Miss Catherine Toulotte, Clarendon, national treasurer; Miss Lucille Carr, Miss Evelyn Farr, Mrs. Helen Van Dercook, Miss Edna Frayser, Miss Ruth Koons, Miss Frances Nagel, Mrs. Ethel Martin, Miss Helen Phillip, Miss Ruth Hartung, Miss Isabella Leahy, Mrs. Lydia Gatti, Mrs. Naomi Geraci, Miss Agnes Geraci, Mrs. Gladys Ackney.

Dr. and Mrs. Oscar D. Albertini entertained at dinner at the Shoreham ballroom last evening for Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Walker, of Honolulu, and Mr. Herman Phlegler, of San Francisco.

Others present included Mrs. E. J. Menseses, Miss Margarita Montero and Mr. Jose Maria Lasa.

Lieut. and Mrs. Herbert George Sparrow are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son, Herbert George Sparrow 3d, born at Fort Bragg, N. C., on Tuesday, May 26. Lieut. Sparrow is attached to the Eighty-third Field Artillery.

Mrs. Frank H. Simonds, of Washington, is spending several days in New York at the Weylin Hotel.

Albertinis Honor Alexander Walkers.

The annual dance for the benefit of foreign missions sponsored by the Inter-Veteran units of the Catholic Students Mission Crusade will be held at the Congressional Country Club tonight starting at 10 o'clock.

Mr. Kenneth Holland, associate director of the American Youth Commission of the American Council on Education, will speak this morning before the National Conference of Social Workers at Atlantic City. His subject will be "The Educational Program of the CCC Camps."

Last week he gave two addresses, one on Monday and the other on Wednesday, at the Hotel Astor, before the American Association for Adult Education. Sunday he spoke at the Park School, in Baltimore, before the faculty and friends of the school.

Mrs. Dudley Scholten, daughter of Mr. Charles Hubert Johnson, is in New York, where she will remain until the end of the week.

Dumbarton Oaks Estate Open for Benefit of Incurables Home.

The gardens of Dumbarton Oaks, which were open yesterday afternoon for the benefit of the Washington Home of Incurables, were beyond discription for one formal garden led to another, covering acres of land in the heart of Georgetown. The hundreds of persons who wandered through the gardens seemed few in number due to the tremendous size of the estate.

Many of those who attended yesterday stopped and rested after their walk up and down the hills on the terrace surrounding the beautiful swimming pool, where tables with bright colored umbrellas and comfortable chairs were placed.

Some of the guests returned to the famous rose garden before leaving for a final look at the many varieties of roses for which Dumbarton is so well known.

Mrs. Robert Chew was in charge of arrangements and Mrs. Elizabeth Nolting was chairman of the garden committee, assisted by a group of girls.

Mrs. Hugh Campbell Wallace, president, and members of the board of the home, were at the gardens during the afternoon.

Republican Women Plan Garden Party

Event to Be Given Wednesday at Mrs. Davis' Home.

Nearly 400 guests are expected to attend the garden party the League of Republican Women will give on Wednesday at the home of Mrs. James J. Davis, 3012 Massachusetts avenue.

Young girls assisting Mrs Davis in serving refreshments will include her three daughters, the Misses Jane, Joan and Jewel Davis, the Misses Ruth Kelley, Mary Jane Kelley, Katherine Rich and Julia Rich.

Others who have made reservations include Mrs. Merle Thorpe, Mrs. William C. Gilbert, Mrs. Samuel J. Prescott, Miss Mona Gill, Miss Georgia M. Nevins, Mrs. Robert E. Healy, Deaconess Yeo, Mrs. E. St. John Greble, Mrs. Edgar C. Seckner, Mrs. Lincoln Hough, Miss Mary J. Davenport, Mrs. Susan E. Adams, Mrs. E. C. Alvord, Mrs. Harry E. Claflin, Mrs. Robert W. Howard, Mrs. Harrison E. Howe, Mrs. Mary D. Phillips, Mrs. Arthur J. Seaton, Mrs. Pembroke Pitt, Miss Emma T. Hahm and Mrs. Louis D. Wight.

Daughter Born.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Mantzouris are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter Wednesday at the Columbia Hospital.

Miss Foster Is Wed To Dr. W. G. Smith

Couple Off to N. Y. to Sail for Bermuda.

Miss Mildred Evelyn Foster, daughter of Mrs. Frank D. Foster and the late Mr. Foster, was married to Dr. William George Smith, of Washington, on Wednesday. The ceremony was performed at Trinity Methodist Church in Baltimore by the Rev. Dr. Clifton K. Ray. After the wedding, the couple left for New York to sail aboard the Carinthia for a cruise to Bermuda and Nassau.

The bride is formerly of Kansas City. Dr. Smith, son of Lieut. and Mrs. William George Smith, U. S. N., of Chevy Chase, is a graduate of Georgetown University Dental School, and is a member of Psi Omega fraternity.

After June 15, Dr. and Mrs. Smith will be at home at 6511 Summit avenue, Chevy Chase.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

"'Tis Better When All's Said and Done to Be a Friend Than to Have One," Says Correspondent

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The appeals for companionship in your column bring out a phase of city life more evident in Washington than in some other cities, namely: the difficulty experienced by newcomers in getting acquainted. Although a real difficulty, this is not so much due to lack of friendliness on the part of residents as to the fact that so many of the residents here are themselves newcomers who do not expect to remain long and hence do not send down roots into the soil, as it were.

* * * *

Take my own case: I expected to stay here six months. At the end of that time another six months' work was assigned to me and so on. After a couple of years I had less than a dozen friends; but it never occurred to me to blame others for this lack. I am reticent, a "poor mixer" and make friends slowly. Some persons, however, grew to like me after sufficient acquaintanceship. I had a hobby, fortunately, and I began to give free lessons in this subject so interesting to me. Though some perhaps were bored, others became interested and helped to widen the circle which, before long, included nearly 100 persons, a goodly proportion of whom are now my friends. friends.

* * * *

A man who would have friends must show himself friendly. If lonely do something for somebody else. Take an interest in some cause. It need not be a popular one.

And if true friends prove hard to find
Then let this thought run in your mind:
"Since so much greater than supply
Is the demand—suppose I try
Myself the kind of friend to be
That I'd have others be to me!"
'Tis better when all's said and done
To be a friend than to have one. H. B. H.

* * * *

DEAR H. B. H.: Thank you for an interesting letter and as quotable a bit of verse as I have ever read on the subject of making friends. Every lonely person who reads your contribution should commit those eight lines to memory and make the philosophy contained therein an integral part of his thought-vocabulary. M. H.

* * * *

Finds Column Amusing.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I often read your column and find it very amusing. What strikes me particularly is the number of intelligent, attractive and charming (according to their own description) persons in Washington. It surely is a privilege to live in a city where there are so many and where they themselves are so well aware of it and so freely admit it. I, alas, have many faults and handicaps and imperfections. Therefore, I suppose, I shall have to content myself with merely looking on while these superior beings meet and love and marry and live happily ever after. Unless you can suggest something, Miss Haworth.

* * * *

The only qualifications I insist on a man's having are these: that he be truthful, considerate of the rights of others and morally straight. These qualities, with mutual love, of course, could make me happy. Yours very sincerely, MISS IMPERFECT.

* * * *

DEAR MISS IMPERFECT: Don't despair. It is axiomatic that like attracts like, and since the world is so full of persons with delightful little faults and handicaps and imperfections, I am sure you should have no difficulty in meeting kindred spirits. The best suggestion I can give you is to deal very, very gently with the sensitive egos of other people. Don't laugh at them too much, nor mock their little struttings. Lacking the saving irony which you bring to this business of living, they keep their chins up by assuring themselves and others of their essential desirability. Don't you understand that when a person pays compliments to himself it is because he is hungering for the same token from others? All of us must have our psychic income of social approval, and if society doesn't yield said income in sufficient measure we simply have to go down into our own pockets and dig up the deficit. M. H.

Women of New Zealand Waking Up to Politics

Country Women's Delegate, Visiting Here, Tells of Life 'Down Under.'

By Hope Ridings Miller.

A GLIMPSE of women's ways and women's work in far-away New Zealand was given yesterday by dainty, dignified Lillie Large, one of the first delegates to arrive in Washington to attend the third triennial meeting of the Associated Country Women of the World which opens Sunday.

"We are not very much in public life," said this native of Napier, New Zealand, who won fame as a concert singer both in London and in her own land. "We don't take a very active part in politics. In fact, it seems that, although we had the first vote for women in the world, we've made the least of it. But now we are beginning to wake up. We have had one woman in Parliament, and we shall have more. In time I think we shall fill an important role in public affairs."

Heads Women's Group.

For the past few years Miss Large's chief concern has been one of the largest women's movements in her country—the Women's Institute, which began in 1921 and now has between 800 and 900 branches in New Zealand.

This movement was first started in Canada, later spread to England and eventually became established in British possessions. Its purpose is to bring rural women together and to furnish them a medium whereby each can benefit by the experiences of other members. "Every month there is a meeting," she said, "and if you could know some of the hardships women undergo to attend, you would understand how helpful these are. I know of one woman who walked many miles and crossed a river ten times to attend one meeting. I know of scores who have never missed an assembly.

Practical hints on homemaking that will simplify the rural woman's daily routine prove particularly beneficial to members, she said. "I know that, from my own experience," she went on, "for at a meeting I learned something that changed one of my unpleasant tasks to an easy one. When I go to the country to visit my sister, the wife of a sheep-raiser, it is my job to clean the candlesticks. I had always done this the hardest way (by scraping, scrubbing and scouring), until I learned at the Women's Institute that I would have no difficulty removing the tallow drippings if, after cleaning the sticks, I rubbed a thin coat of grease over them. That, of course, is a little thing; but if you could realize how much time the average New Zealand country women spend cleaning her candlesticks, you would know how many precious moments she could save this way."

Rug making, from both carded and spun wool, is commonly done by New Zealand women, according to Miss Large. She added, also, that knitting, weaving and embroidery take up much of their spare time.

Miss Large's own interest in the Women's Institute dates back to the beginning of the movement in her country. As a delegate from this organization to the first conference in Vienna of the Associated Country Women of the World, she was made a member of the executive board of the latter and has retained that position since. She explained that the Women's Institute is affiliated with the ACWW. The latter, she feels, is "one of the greatest peace movements ever conceived because it establishes understanding and promotes sympathy between women of many countries."

After the conference of the ACWW, she and the other delegates from New Zealand (who will arrive tomorrow) will go to Stoney Creek, Canada, where the first woman's institute was begun before the World War. Later they will return to the West Coast through Canada on their way back to New Zealand.

MISS LILLIE LARGE, native of New Zealand and one of the first delegates to arrive in Washington to attend the third triennial meeting of the Associated Countrywomen of the World.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

Here's a Perfume to Give One Assurance.

By Mignon.

(The Mignon who writes this column does not sell, indorse or manufacture any cosmetics.)

THERE isn't anything about which a woman should be more careful than the perfume she selects. A product doesn't necessarily have to be new to intrigue you, but certainly it must be good. By good I mean a fragrance that doesn't assault your nostrils, one that doesn't make the people next to you try to get another seat in the theater and one that doesn't make you as conspicuous as a cerise dress, blue shoes and a purple hat. "A lady wants assurances" and there is nothing that makes her feel so "assured" as the fact that people want to be where she is.

Whether or not women wear perfume to please men or whether they wear it to make women envy them hasn't been definitely decided, but you probably could cast your own vote on this subject.

Choose a perfume that is delicate, lasting, that grows more fascinating as it grows fainter and you really can't make a mistake. You should not be able to scent theperfume yourself after you have worn it for a half hour. If you can ,either the perfume is too strong or you have used too much of it.

The one I have for you today is what is technically known as "tops." The bottle will get you if the perfume doesn't. It looks like a Fiji islander sittting in a rose-lined silk box. The hair is bushy and of soft silk, and the way to perfume your room is to put some of the essence on the hair of the Fiji. This perfume comes in bulk. When you go downtown again please take a little sniff of it because you will not be able to resist it, I know.

If you want to know where you can purchase any article mentioned in this column phone The Washington Post, NAtional 4200, Branch 323. Please do not write unless you live outside the city, in which case inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Posed by Irene Dunne.

Drama Is Seen In Education

Some colleges count their academic blessings according to the number of "Ph. D.'s" on their faculties, says President Walter A. Jessup in the annual report of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching. But he says, no place is provided for the teacher who is really an artist.

The unrolling of a college year resembles a great drama rather than the operation of a factory, in his opinion. To support his ideas Jessup quotes the eminent philosopher, George Santayana, who said that teaching is an art like acting, where the performance, often rehearsed, must be adapted to an audience hearing it only once.

Bridegroom Takes Jewelry Spotlight

The bridegroom takes the spotlight for jewelry at the wedding this season. He will wear a beautiful pearl tie pin, and if the bride gives him a handsome present, nothing could be more elegant, effective or appreciated than a black pearl. Of course, a white pearl is imperative.

The cuff buttons are important and also the platinum chain for his platinum watch. He will use pearls, or some precious stone studs for his evening clothes; and his daytime wear will look old-fashioned and unimportant unless he wears a smart signet ring bearing his crest. Gold cuff buttons with his crest in enamel in two or three colors will give distinction and a bright note to his sleeves.

Men prefer Underwood portraits for their skillful portrayal of character and dignity—and, too, men appreciate our prices which range as low as $15 the dozen.

For Love or Money

By ROB EDEN

Brenda Fayre, 22, has become involved in a world of lies because of her loyalty to her invalid sister, Lally, who cannot walk. Brenda, broke and at her wits' end, has accepted a job of which she is ashamed—"siren" for Walter Jason, salesman of worthless gold mine stock. Her job is to entertain Jason's prospective victims.

Brenda has been able more easily to deceive Lally about her work because Lally has fallen in love with Val Sargent, brilliant young writer who lives in the apartment above theirs. Brenda has guessed her sister's secret love and knows it is because of Val that Lally is determined on an operation which may enable her to walk. And Brenda knows, too, that Val does not love her sister, but herself. To her, her own feelings in the matter are of no moment. She is solely concerned in protecting Lally. To avoid Jason, who is infatuated with her, though both know that Jason's "partner" and the brains of his business, Ethel Rush, disapproves. Ethel, eight years older than Jason, loves him and is jealous of him.

So, when Jason urges Brenda to accept from him a diamond ring, she sees a way to save Lally from heartbreak. She accepts the ring and wears it on her third finger at home. She tells Lally she is engaged to Jason and Lally—as Brenda knew she would—tells Val.

Chapter Twenty.

MAIZIE was no comfort but work, and more work. Pounding on the typewriter keys as loudly as he could, hearing them click under his fingers, sitting, stabbing them until his back ached and his head spun around and the wall in front of him whirled before his eyes, and his hands went lame to his elbows. Hating to stop then, because if he stopped to rest, it meant that he would think of her, and he didn't want to think of her.

At first he had thought of chuckling the whole thing, and then, he decided to finish it, get it out of the way. Forget it, when it was finished. Go back to work. It wasn't Maizie egging him on who had made up his mind. It was himself, for Maizie had said nothing. Finish up the story as fast as he could, get back to work. He said that to himself constantly when he had to get up from his typewriter during the day or during the night, ready to drop with sheer fatigue.

The Windup.

There were no pauses to stop and think, no walks so that he could figure out in his mind exactly how he was going to phrase a certain passage. The passages came to him, from his brain to the tips of his fast moving fingers, and the fingers transferred the smooth passages to the white paper. They were good.

From somewhere in his brain the windup of the story came—where he didn't know, but it must have been there all the time.

The whole ending was changed, and he could see that the new ending was far better than the one he had outlined. It fitted into the story like a glove, it rounded it perfectly. The old finish would have been impossible.

Sees Brenda Once.

Mrs. Moffit came and complained on behalf of the sixth floor tenants, and Val put her off as kindly as he could. He would be through with his story and out of the Corwin as soon as he could. If the tenants could stand his pounding a little longer . . .

Brenda he saw only twice in the week that followed the news of her engagement. Once in the lobby downstairs, when she was coming in from work. She took the elevator, after smiling at him, and he took the stairs. The other time was when he had taken Lally out for a walk, and they had come home to find Brenda there.

He saw her ring that time. He couldn't help seeing it.

"God, how I hate diamond rings," he swore to himself as he ran up the stairs later, and with his door hardly closed behind him started at the typewriter.

When he was with Lally, he had to hear about Brenda, for Lally was full of talk about her. Once he had listened eagerly, because he wanted to hear about her. Now he listened impatiently, and the ring came before his eyes, and he didn't know how he could stand it. And he kept praying that Lally would stop, so he wouldn't be tortured any more. But he couldn't tell her to stop, because Brenda was Lally's life, and she wouldn't understand.

Sometimes he tried to tell himself that he hated Brenda, then in the next breath he would find himself whispering that he loved her—loved her more than ever. He didn't wish her happiness, he couldn't do that, although he had lied to Lally and told Lally to tell Brenda that. What he wanted to tell Lally was that he didn't wish Brenda any happiness at all, that he hoped some day she would suffer all the agony he was suffering.

Work Helped.

That was why work helped so much, and yet even when he was working at top speed one-half of his mind was on Brenda, wondering about her. When he wasn't working, the whole of his mind was on her, which was bad.

He had moods that were vicious toward her, moods when he wanted to weep because he had lost her, and did weep. After one of the tenderer moods, if he was in bed, he would get up and write until he was exhausted, because he didn't want to be tender and forgiving.

He tried to be the same to Lally, but the games he invented when he did go down to see her, the conversation about the progress of Maizie fell flat, he thought. In the first place he didn't want to talk about Maizie, and his work any more, and Lally reminded him so much of Brenda .They were bound up so much, one with the other, and when he saw Lally he thought of Brenda. Even when he passed the balcony porch five stories from the sidewalk and saw Lally alone waving to him, he saw Brenda up there beside her sister. And the morning glories that had wandered up to his balcony from Lally's vines, he could hardly bear to look at. Indeed, he seldom went out on the balcony these days.

Thursday morning at 2 a. m. he finished the story of Maizie. Wrote finis on the last page, which was page 510. At the left of the "finis" he typed the date, and under the date, Corwin Apartments, M——. Next, almost dropping from fatigue, he fixed the title page, "The Story of Maizie," by Val Sargent. Then he bundled all his pages together in a big laundry box, tied them up and went to bed. When he woke up at 4 the following afternoon, he saw the box sitting on the dresser, where he had left it, and it seemed queer that Maizie should be boxed up in a paper carton with string tied around her. A week ago, no ten days ago to be exact—the day before he had known of Brenda's engagement, he had given himself a month more to get through with Maizie. The month's work had been crammed into nine days.

He knew that he should read her over, make more corrections here and there, smooth out doubtful passages, go over the ending which he had not even looked over, but he didn't intend to.

Old Job.

At 4:30 he was going out of the flat dressed for the street, the laundry bag under his arm. He wasn't even carrying it carefully. At 5 he was downtown putting his bundle on the desk of a public stenographer and giving her orders to copy what was in the box. Her price of $75 didn't even startle him. He heard it without the flicker of an eyelash, although he knew he didn't have that much money left in his bank.

From the office of the public stenographer, he went up to the Marlin building where the Acme Advertising Agency was located and reported to the manager that although his leave of absence was not entirely up, he was ready to come back to work.

Gresham, the manager, said he could return Monday if he wished. Val would have liked to start the following day, but he said nothing. The office as he looked around seemed very dreary to him, grayer than he remembered it. Even the faces of the men and girls were gray—with that end of the day grayness that comes in a high-pressure office.

"We've missed you," Gresham said as they shook hands when Val was leaving.

Val tried to smile, and perhaps the smile seemed sincere to Gresham. He hadn't missed them, Gresham and the rest, and he wished to God he didn't have to go back, but the dreams he had dreamed about the success of Maizie and his freedom from work, office work, seemed ery far away at present. They weren't rosy as they had been, they were gray like the office.

Pumpkin Dish Brings Crown To Ranch Wife

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 28.—A quiet little California ranch wife who knows how to cook "pumpkin goody" held the title today of "1936 National Cooking Champion of America."

It's a dish made of the pumpkin left over from pumpkin pie, and was served after old-fashioned pot roast and string beans in the meal that won first place and a $500 prize for Mr. Alberta Moore, 29, of Santa Rosa, Calif., at the Women's National Exposition of Arts and Industries.

"A fine, simple American meal," said the judges of the dinner that brought Mrs. Moore—a self-taught cook—victory over five other regional competitors.

Here's Her Recipe.

1 cup hot pumpkin
3 tablespoons shortening
¼ cup sugar
½ cup molasses
1 egg
¼ cup sifted flour
¾ teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon cinnamon
Nutmeg
Ginger
¼ teaspoon salt

Cream shortening and sugar, add egg and beat well. Add molasses, then dry ingredients, sifted together, and, last, fold in the hot pumpkin until mixture is smooth. Bake in a shallow 9 by 12 pan in a moderate oven 40 minutes. Cut into pieces, serving each person two, with lemon sauce between them, and a glass of cold milk on the side.

Mrs. Moore said her main rule for good cookery was, "Go ahead and cook."

Judges Were the Heroes!

Among the more elaborate dishes prepared by other contestants were "fruit compote in rum sirup with ice cream," "paradise parfait," "maple fluff," "fruited ham," "chicken symphony" and "sunshine surprise."

The heroes of the contest were the judges who ate all these dishes—six full meals—in half a day.

Washington Woman Wins Prize With Rum Compote.

Mrs. Frances Maurine Irwin, a Treasury Department employe, of Washington, who represented the fifth district in the "cook-off," was awarded the third prize of $100. Many of her recipes were original, and the following excited special interest among the judges:

Fruit Compote in Rum Sirup With Vanilla Ice Cream.

No. 2 can special extra fresh prunes
No. 2 can ripened desert figs
No. 2 can special extra peeled apricots
No. 2½ can Bartlett pears
No. 2½ can special extra pineapple
No. 2½ can special extra peaches

Take equal portions of vari-colored canned fruits from above list (enough to abundantly serve six) and place unused friut in refrigerator where it will keep in perfect condition for future fruit cups, salads, tarts, pies, etc.

Drain off three cups of fruit juices and add juice from No. 2 can grapefruit. Add two cups of sugar and boil until heavy sirup is formed. Remove from flame and cool. Add four tablespoons of Jamaica rum. Place desired amount of fruit into rum sirup and set aside in next-to-freezing temperature for 24 hours. This can be passed in chilled glass or silver to guests to be poured over individual servings of vanilla ice cream.

Tasty Avocado Recipe.

A half avocado with seed cavity filled with diced cucumber, to which a bit of finely chopped green onion has been added, is invigorating for the late evening or for luncheon entree salad.

Cool Two-Piecer in Stockinette Easy to Knit and Smart in Style

Pattern 5601.

BEGIN at once on this flatteringly cool two-piecer. Done mainly in stockinette stitch, the sunburst yoke is in a lacy stitch and every bit as easy as it looks. It's ever so smart in nubby cotton yarn, Shetland floss or rayon and wool. The matching skirt makes it a smart two-piecer.

In Pattern 5601 you will find instructions for making the blouse and skirt in sizes 16-18 and 38-40; an illustration of the blouse and of all stitches used; material requirements.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Dept., 259 West Fourteenth street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name address and pattern number.

Daily Health Talk

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Most of the organs of the body are reasonably well supplied with supports so that they cannot wander about. If the heart, for example, enlarges, it can crowd other structures out of the way. The stomach can drop in the abdomen and occasionally does so. But the kidneys, particularly if the body is deprived of retaining pads of fat, may change position and "float," as is the common expression.

About 60 years ago there was a great wave of surgical enthusiasm over anchoring kidneys that were inclined to travel downward in the abdomen, and the procedure was hailed as a panacea for all aches and pains arising in that area. A few years later Glenard, a French physician, described what he called dropping or falling of the stomach, so-called, was observed chiefly in women who were thin and stoop-shouldered. Students of the digestive tract then proved that a dropped stomach or a misplaced colon was not as serious a matter as had been taught. At the same time the whole question of floating kidneys was minimized.

Recently, however, a reinvestigation of the subject from a practical point of view has shown that the effect on health of a movable kidney has, perhaps, been underestimated. It is quite understandable that function may be interfered with and that a ureter (the tube that conveys urine from the kidneys to the bladder) may become twisted or even kinked, in which event undue pressure may be created withia the kidney itself.

Severe Blow.

It probably requires a pretty severe blow or injury to dislodge a kidney unless starvation or some wasting disease has completely eliminated its bed of fat. Nevertheless, it is entirely possible that a fall or severe jolt may cause dislodgement. Some cases have been reported that occurred apparently from long-continued riding in trucks or automobiles over rough roads, or from excessive straining accompanying a chronic cough.

A dull, dragging pain in the region of the affected kidney, which increases in severity the longer the patient remains in an erect posture, is one of the first indications. Sometimes there is a sharp, lightning-like pain due to the kinking of the ureter. Others will complain chiefly of digestive upsets, nausea and vomiting. This supplies a forceful hint that in any obscure disease of the gastro-intestinal tract the position of the kidney should be investigated.

Urinary symptoms may be absent in some cases, but prominent in others. These include obstruction to the outflow of urine, profuse secretion at times followed by very little at others and finally infection which is invited whenever there is a stagnation of urine anywhere in the body.

Diagnosis Easy.

The diagnosis is not difficult. In fact, there need be no doubt whatever of the exact position of the kidneys and the ureters. By means of nonirritating and nontoxic dyes the location of these organs may be accurately disclosed on an X-ray plate. Or, in doubtful cases, a catheter may be passed upward along the entire length of each ureter and radiographed in position.

Let us assume that it is desirable to hold the kidneys in a somewhat higher position, provided they have become loosened. This may be effected, in many instances, by wearing a snugly fitting abdominal binder that presses inward and upward on the tissues underlying the kidneys. This should be adjusted when lying down and should be worn at all times.

Another plan, which is often satisfactory, is to remain in bed for a period of two or three months, with the foot of the bed elevated and nutrition maintained at a high level. Many sufferers are markedly undernourished, with flabby, lax abdominal walls, and simple exercises, even when reclining, may be prescribed with benefit.

If none of these methods proves helpful surgical intervention may be required, followed by a three weeks' period of rest in bed to insure firm fixation and healing.

Coconut Dishes to Be Theme of Post Prize Recipe Contest

Product of Tropics, Fresh or Canned, Adds Distinctive Flavor; It Is Not Limited to Use in Desserts; Five Prizes Offered.

COCONUT, fresh or canned, adds a distinctive flavor and a special eye appeal to many dishes. Cakes and pies are the usual desserts which call for this delicate confection, but the ingenious cook knows that there are any number of other desserts that may be enhanced by a mere sprinkling of coconut. Many recipes with a foreign flavor also include coconut as an important ingredient.

Next week the recipe contest sponsored by The Post will have coconut dishes as its theme. Cash awards will be offered for the five best coconut recipes entered. The first prize is $5; the second, $3, and the three remaining prizes, $1 each.

Though most of the dishes which require coconut are served as dessert, the contest is not limited to dessert recipes alone. If you have another type of coconut dish, so much the better.

To enter the contest merely write out your favorite coconut recipe and send it to Dorothea Duncan, in care of The Washington Post. All recipes should be mailed in time to reach this office not later than Saturday, June 7.

Dark Sunburn Not Considered Good Taste Now

Delicate Beige Tan Aim of Those Now Seeking Suntan.

It is no longer fashionable to tan yourself to a dark mahogany brown, says Dorothy Cocks, beauty editor of Pictorial Review. A deep sunburn is definitely aging, emphasizing every wrinkle and making new lines around your eyes. Strive instead for the delicate biege-tan complexions, which really smart women affect.

Your choice of the amount of tan you want should be guided by your type of skin and the kind of climate you will be facing on your summer trip, she advises. In seashore places, where the heat quickly evaporates spray and showers, in desert country and in high mountain air, it is the drying effect of sunburn that is serious. In that kind of summer place, keeping your skin lubricated and replenished with oils is a necessary part of a sunshine treatment. It is a good idea to use cold cream or cleansing cream generously before or after sunning.

Then there are the sunburn oils as well as the protective preparation creams and liquids. Whichever you use, be sure to pamper your face with lots of cold cream or cleansing cream at other times during the day.

Little Pigs Rout Stomach Aches

Nutritionists have found that the digestive systems of babies and pigs are very similar, and this discovery led them to make studies of the values of various grades of milk in infant feeding by using pigs for testing purposes. J. A. Newlander and C. H. Jones, of the agricultural experiment station at the University of Vermont, began their studies on the pigs when the animals were but 2 days old.

The relative values of cow's milk, evaporated milk, two brands of powdered whole milk and remade milk for infant feeding were demonstrated by the tests. Comparisons based on animal vigor, total grain, and amount and economy of dry matter gain on the body composition showed that the normal milk ration is the most efficient.

Frozen Coffee, Sugar Sirups Add to Drink

Fresh Coffee in Freezing Cubes Advised; Liquid Sweetening Recipe.

By Dorothea Duncan.

ICED COFFEE WILL be more popular than ever this summer, especially if housewives take up the very timely discovery of serving the beverage with frozen coffee cubes instead of over the ususal cracked or crushed ice. Previous to this discovery, iced coffee has never been able to find favor with every coffee lover, for many hot coffee drinkers complained that the ice diluted the beverage to an extent that much of its refreshing flavor was lost.

So frozen coffee cubes will be served with America's favorite beverage this season with the result that everyone will enjoy this universal drink in its iced form. The frozen coffee cubes will add a decorative touch to your coffee service, too.

When coffee ice cubes are used iced coffee can be prepared in the approved manner; that is, it should be prepared in the same way as when the beverage is served hot. Whether your favorite method for preparing coffee calls for the drip-pot, percolator or boiled method, remember if the beverage is to be satisfactory—clear, delightfully aromatic and full-flavored—both the coffee and the water must be fresh. The coffee must be freshly made, too, for the iced as well as the hot version. To serve, it is simply poured over a glass filled with coffee ice cubes

Use Fresh Coffee.

Fresh coffee should be used for the frozen cubes as well as for the beverage. For the frozen cubes the coffee is prepared regular strength. Cool the coffee before placing it in the trays of the automatic refrigerator. Then fill one or two trays, according to the number of cubes needed, and allow to freeze.

The same trick that makes iced coffee a greater success may be applied to iced tea. Here, too, the tea must be freshly made for the frozen cubes as well as the beverage.

Otherwise a bit of bitterness may creep into the beverage to spoil its flavor. Frozen lemonade cubes may be served with tea as well as frozen tea cubes. These may be decorated with a small wedge of pineapple or a red cherry if you like fruity iced tea. Mint leaves also give a decorative effect to the lemonade cubes.

Sugar Sirup Used.

Sugar sirup may be served with iced coffee or tea in preference to powdered or granulated sugar. It will dissolve more readily, and therefore reduces the amount of sugar needed because it mixes thoroughly with the drink and does not settle to the bottom of the glass.

If, however, you prefer to add your own sugar by heaping spoonfuls just so you can see it filter from the top to bottom of the glass like a gust of snow, granulated or powdered sugar will be your choice. Confectioner's sugar is not suggested for iced beverages because it contains some cornstarch and may give the beverage a cloudy effect.

The recipe and method for preparing a simple sugar sirup which may be used in iced beverages—coffee, tea, or fruit punches—follows:

Sugar Sirup.

4 cups sugar
4 cups water

Boil sugar and water together for 10 minutes. Pour into clean hot jars and seal. This sirup may be kept on hand in the refrigerator and used as needed.

Cheese-Nut Sandwich.

Roquefort and pecans are the latest cheese-nut sandwich combination. Whole-wheat bread has been chosen as the backbone for this attractive sandwich filling.

To prepare: Spread one slice of bread with butter and the other with Roquefort. Place over the first a slice of crisp lettuce and a little mayonnaise. On top of it sprinkle mixed pecans. Put the slice spread with Roquefort face down over the first slice. Press lightly together. This sandwich served with sliced tomatoes makes an interesting luncheon dish.

Serve Iced Coffee With Frozen Coffe Cubes

The flavor of iced coffee, one of the most popular of the summer beverages, is further improved if frozen coffee cubes are used in place of ordinary ice cubes or chipped ice. It prevents diluting of the coffee flavor.

Dainties From Your Oven

NANCY'S so proud of her cream puffs! Now she knows her party this afternoon will be a success!

Clever girl, she makes all sorts of fillings for her puffs, the soft gooey creamy kind, but differently flavored with chocolate, maple, coffee, strawberry, pineapple, and variously frosted on top.

Sometimes she uses whipped cream, of course, and then again she puts a scoop of ice-cream inside an opened puff and serves it with chocolate, coffee or butterscotch sauces.

Thus one baking job turns out goodies of many flavors. Nancy has what she calls a "sure-pop" recipe for the puffs themselves, and never once have they spread out like pancakes instead of puffing up like diplomats.

She combines one cup boiling water, ½ teaspoon salt, and 1-3 cup butter, brings them to boiling point, stirs in 1½ cups sifted cake flour, and cooks until mixture leaves side of pan clean. When cooled beat in 4 eggs thoroughly, and only one at a time. Drop by small tablespoons some distance apart on greased baking tins, bake half-hour in moderate oven, 350 to 375 degrees.

This recipe, and grand ones for the fillings, are in our 40-page booklet, Cakes and Cookies. Also luscious layer cakes, sponges, meringues, cookies crisp or chewy. All the little knick-knacks you thought were hard to make are perfectly simple with those tried recipes. Novelties and "stand-bys," too. A treasure for beginner or experienced cook.

Strawberries And Avocados Blend in Salad

Gelatin Background Adds to Toothsomeness of This Spring Dainty.

With strawberries appearing again on the horizon of our menus and avocados still with us, there is once more opportunity for their union in such effective gelatin background as avocado strawberry salad. The contrast of pink and green layers is very appealing to spring appetites.

Your assurance of a quite soft avocado for sieving will be facilitated if you test for yourself the condition of the fruit. Take an avocado in the palms of both hands before cutting into it for serving and apply gentle pressure. If it yields easily without a springy or spongy resistance, it is soft enough for eating. The resistance you may feel if the fruit is not yet sufficiently soft is the stage which precedes softness, and means a postponement in serving of one to four days.

Many prefer the springlike appearance of the half-shell avocado to any other form of service, but for the exceptional color and contrast in the ribbon layers, you'll like avocado strawberry salad.

Avocado Strawberry Salad.

1 package strawberry flavored gelatin
1½ cups boiling water
1½ cups crushed strawberries
1 cup sieved avocado
2 3-ounce packages cream cheese
1 tablespoon granulated gelatin
2 tablespoons cold water for gelatin
½ teaspoon celery salt
2 tablespoons cream
Lettuce
Dressing (if desired)

Pour boiling water over strawberry gelatin and stir until gelatin is dissolved; cool. Add strawberries and let stand until it starts to set. To prepare avocados cut into halves, remove seed, peel, and put through sieve. Combine with cheese and stir until smooth. Moisten granulated gelatin in cold water and dissolve over hot water; add slowly to avocado mixtere, stirring continuously to prevent lumping. Add celery, salt and cream and blend thoroughly. Spread in layer over bottom of mold and pour thickened strawberries over top. Set in cool place until firm. To serve, unmold, slice and arrange on lettuce garnished salad plates. Use dressing if desired. Serves 12.

Junior College Graduates 26 In Forest Glen

Virginia Educator Speaks at National Seminary Commencement.

The classic architecture of the famous Odeon at the National Park Seminary, Forest Glen, Md., provided an impressive setting yesterday for the graduation exercises of the 1936 class of the junior college and preparatory school.

Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction for Virginia, gave the commencement address, in which he reminded the graduating class that "knowledge is power." Diplomas were presented by Dr. James E. Ament, president of the seminary.

The invocation was given by the Rev. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House of Representatives, who also gave the benediction. The program was completed with selections by Marian Ruth McCormick, soprano, and the school choir, accompanied by Anastasia Henderson.

Twenty-six graduates from more than a dozen States received diplomas for completing the two-year junior college course. The graduates were:

Shirley Jane Hoper, Mary Senate Howes, Elsie Marion Kasten, Helen Katherine Kirr, Helen Marion Kinsel, Ruth Patricia Kuhell, Mary Jane MacKillop, Donna Jean Moore.

In addition a certificate in recognition of a one-year program was presented to Mary Belle Evans.

Honor students in the academic course were Miss Kasten, first; Miss Watson, second, and Miss Giles third. In the arts course honor students were Miss Dewey, first; Miss Grant, second, and Miss Ogden third.

Miss Luria and Miss McArthur tied for first place as honor students, with Miss Chandler second and Miss Pace third.

Mississippi Figures As Bond Defaulter

London, May 28 (AP).—The State of Mississippi figured in the list of total defaulters of bonds held in Great Britain, made public tonight in the sixty-second annual report of the council of foreign bondholders.

Others included the Argentine province of Corrientes, Ecuador, Mexico, Paraguay, Peru and Russia.

The report detailed the position of 50 governments and provinces which raised loans in Great Britain in 1935, and showed £400,000,000 (about $2,000,000,000) owing for capital value alone. Non-defaulters included the Argentine province of Buenos Aires, Costa Rica, Guatemala, Nicaragua, Honduras and Germany.

Potatoes on Coast Reach 10-Year High

Seattle, May 28 (AP).—Potato prices reached the highest point here in ten years today when new crop supplies sold for $5 and $5.25 on produce row. It was an advance of 75 cents to $1 per hundredweight over yesterday's wholesale quotations.

By Morgan Baker.

"I'm retiring, but I'm never going to settle down," said Mrs. Phoebe E. Haight, at a luncheon given her by fellow employes of the Insolvent Bank Division of the Comptroller of the Currency at the Madrillon Restaurant yesterday in honor of her retirement.

BAKER.

For the last 17 years Mrs. Haight has been in the Insolvent Bank Division. During this time she saw the division, "a depression industry," rise from a few members to the present staff of 400.

"I've always felt a very strong loyalty for all my co-workers," Mrs. Haight said. "They have been very kind to me, and helpful me."

Mrs. Haight found it hard to say what she was going to do now that she was no longer working for the Government. She is not going to settle down, she said—of that she is sure—but how to be "useful," as she desires, is a different question.

Harry J. Hall, assistant supervisor of the division, presided at the luncheon, which was attended by more than 80 members of the division staff. Her fellow clerks also are presenting her with a purse as an extra token of their friendship and esteem.

Mrs. Haight is the first clerk to be retired from the division. Two of her sons, Joseph S. and Harvey L. Haight, were among those who gathered to pay her tribute yesterday.

Harry L. Craig, examiner in Division 24, was honored by his fellow workers at Patent Office at a testimonial dinner at the Highlands this week, marking his resignation. Mr. Craig plans to live in California.

Mrs. Lillian Barnes, Employment Service, Labor, will leave today on a month's tour of the Pacific Coast and Canadian Northwest. She will visit her sister in Los Angeles.

There will be a party today at the Veterans' Administration, where Mrs. Lizzie F. Clark has worked for many years. The party is to honor her as she retires from service today. There will be speeches and flowers and attendance of all her fellow workers.

After Midnight Fete.

Catch up on sleep beforehand or prepare to lose—those who accept the invitation of the AAA Lodge 116, A. F. G. E., for a four-hour moonlight boat ride at the witching hour on Saturday, June 6. The boat sails promptly at midnight and all Government employes and their friends are invited for a good time with entertainment galore. There will be a Spanish dancer, a Mexican one; a male quartet, two radio singers and a professional stage entertainer and tickets are available in the Old Postoffice Building, or at the cigar stands in the leading hotels.

On the committee on general arrangement are Grace Heilig, Thelma Larrivee, George W. Moriarty and Joseph Landow, while the entertainment committee members are Alma A. Roscoe, John Mealy and Morris A. Larson.

Five Groups of Tests.

Five groups of examinations for positions with salaries ranging from $2,000 to $5,600 a year are announced by Civil Service Commission, as follows:

Assistant geologist (stratigraphy), $2,600 a year, Geological Survey, Department of the Interior. Closing date, June 15.

Junior park archeologist, $2,000 a year, junior park historian, $2,000 a year, National Park Service, Department of the Interior. Closing date, June 15.

Park historians, various grades, $2,600 to $3,800 a year, National Park Service, Department of the Interior. Closing date, June 22.

Senior insect pathologist, $4,600 a year; associate entomologist (taxonomy), $3,200 a year; assistant entomologist (taxonomy), $2,600 a year, Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine, Department of Agriculture. Closing date, June 22.

Additional information about these, or other examinations, may be obtained from Civil Service Commission, Seventh and F streets northwest.

Diary Guest Tickets.

If F, P or C follows your name in this column call in person on the Federal Diary editor today only between 3:30 and 5 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F, Loew's Fox (stage, Benny Meroff and his Orchestra and other acts; screen, Herbert Marshall in "Till We Meet Again"); or to P, Loew's Palace (Ronald Colman and Claudette Colbert in "Under Two Flags"); or to C, Loew's Columbia (Paul Cavanaugh in "Champagne Charlie").

The Stenog's Kick.

Said the pretty stenog as she tapped her key,
"It's doggone tough if you're asking me,
Why a bunch of uglies should loll by the sea
While I toil here as hard as can be."
And she sighed for the drench of the ocean spray
And the tang of the air where the big waves play.
Then the pale, wan face of a loved one at home
Smiled back at her from out the foam,
"Well, maybe 'tain't so tough—but Hully Gee"—
So she just went on—tapping her key.

MRS. JANE L. O'CONNELL (F), Register's Office, Treasury.

Bureau of Public Roads.

Miss Helen V. Pallo (C), Stenographic Division.

Ray Edwin Genson and Philip Rubin, messengers.

J. Norman Heil, Highway Transport Division, assistant highway engineer economist.

Miss Hyneman to Sail.

Miss Rebecca Hyneman, (P), who is retired from the Construction Service of the Veterans' Administration but well known to hundereds of former fellow workers, plans a summer in Europe this year, sailing on June 4 on the S. S. Washington. She will visit England, France, Germany, Scandanavia, and her ambition is to make a lot more acquaintances and see some strange parts of the world. The talk of war nd upset political conditions abroad just add interest for her to the trip. Last summer she took her car and poked in out-of-the-way spots in America. For 13 years she was a familiar figure around Veterans' Administration offices, and before that was in the Public Health Department for two years following two years in the War Department.

3 Patent Appointees Named by Roosevelt

Justin W. Macklin, of Ohio, as first assistant commissioner of patents; Henry Van Arsdale, of New York, as assistant commissioner, and Floyd J. Porter, of New York, as xaminer in chief.

TO THAT CELEBRATED AMERICAN
"TOM COLLINS"

You won't find his name in American history books, but every summer thousands of Americans perpetuate his memory

THE legend of "the Tom Collins" is veiled in the mystery of the past. There are many stories of its origin. All of them differ . . .

Whoever Tom Collins was, whether or not he ever existed—the fact remains that "the Tom Collins" today has become an American institution—and our most popular summer gin drink.

Fleischmann's is the original American gin. Distilled from American grain especially for the distinctive American taste, it enhances the subtle flavor of the fruit . . . never overpowers it.

Fleischmann's Gin is distilled in one continuous process . . . the time-honored American way. It is always uniform, for Fleischmann controls every step in its manufacture, from the purchase of the grain to the finished bottle.

If the mythical "Tom Collins" were alive today, the chances are he would insist upon this smooth-mixing American gin in the drink that bears his name.

BEST UNDER THE SUN

Sarthe and Sarthe-St.Croix

Best when lying in charred oak casks on the sunny shores of the sleepy Caribbean—best under our own summer suns in a tall glass with clinking cubes of ice.

Get under the sun with Rhum Sarthe in a cool, clinking Collins.

You will marvel at the mellowness and richness Rhum Sarthe attains under the sun. Rhum Sarthe makes a stimulating highball, too—in an old-fashioned it is like bonded whiskey—so versatile and useful, in fact, it has won the distinction of being known as "The One Bottle Bar."

For a Daiquiri or the famous Virgin Islands cocktail insist upon Sarthe-St. Croix. It, too, has that under-the-sun distinctive flavor found only in rums from the Caribbean.

Rum that has never been aged and mellowed under the blistering suns of the tropics lacks the punch and character that discriminating drinkers look for.

Sarthe is pronounced. (S-A-R-T-H—no "E")

SARTHE-ST.CROIX

RHUM SARTHE

City Prepares For Tribute To War Dead

Parade Up Pennsylvania Avenue to Be Feature of Memorial Day.

Roosevelt Will Attend Services at Arlington; Pershing to Speak.

Washington will pay tribute tomorrow to its war dead.

Tomorrow is Memorial Day.

Flags will fly on the sidewalks and from public buildings. Civilians will hoist the colors at home.

There will be a parade. Military units will march up Pennsylvania avenue tomorrow morning.

There will be services at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Invitations have been extended to President Roosevelt and high ranking Government officials to review the parade from the stand at Sixteenth street and Constitution avenue.

Military units will form on Pennsylvania avenue between Seventh and Ninth streets northwest, at 9:30 a. m. for the parade. They will march up the avenue to Fifteenth street, to Constitution avenue and Seventeenth street, where they will disband.

Gen. Pershing to Speak.

Services at Arlington will follow at 1 p. m. Gen. John J. Pershing will be chief speaker.

Georgetown University will hold services for 30 of its law school students who lost their lives in France. Exercises will begin at 10 a. m.

Only special delivery letters will be delivered from the postoffice.

Early tomorrow, Lieut. Col. E. Lombard, military attache to the French Embassy here, will go to Arlington to lay a wreath on the Unknown Soldier's Tomb.

President Roosevelt has accepted an invitation to participate in the Arlington services. He will be present when a wreath is laid on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Roper to Make Address.

Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper will deliver a brief address at the Arlington services.

Graves of soldiers in Arlington will be strewn with fresh-cut flowers by the G. A. R. Memorial Day Corporation.

Alexandria's citizens also will honor their war dead tomorrow. Brief exercises will be held at City Hall at 2 p. m. for 16 firemen and policemen killed in action.

Across the Atlantic, Americans will honor those who died in the World War, Maj. Clifford Church, who practiced law in Washington from 1907 to 1917, will be chairman of Memorial Day ceremonies to be held in Meuse-Argonne Cemetery in France. Throughout France, graves of American soldiers will be decorated.

Memorial ceremonies for deceased members of the Fleet Reserve Association will be held at 11 o'clock at the Water Gate at Memorial Bridge. Upon conclusion of the exercises, a floral anchor will be cast adrift upon the waters of the Potomac.

Two Services Today.

There are two services set for today:

At 8 p. m. Frederick J. Libby, executive secretary of the National Council for Prevention of War, will speak at the third annual memorial services for peace-time heroes at the Titanic Monument. Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, will read the honor roll of policemen who died in the line of duty during the last year, and Battalion Chief S. T. Porter, of the Fire Department, will read the names of firemen who lost their lives.

Tonight at 8 o'clock services will be held under the joint auspices of the Washington Hebrew Congregation and Jewish War Veterans at the Eighth Street Temple. Dr. Abram Simon will preach.

Driver Fails to Stop Runaway Vehicle; Falls Beneath Wheels.

George A. Schaefer, 50, of 200 Q street northwest, yesterday was crushed beneath a truck on Fifty-ninth street northeast, between Dix and Foote streets. It was Washington's thirty-seventh traffic fatality, the third in as many days.

Schaefer, a driver for the District government, was standing beside the truck while it was being loaded with concrete at a street-paving job. The truck began to move down the hill and Schaefer jumped on the side in an effort to stop it.

Before he was able to bring the truck to a stop, a bump in the road caused him to lose his balance and fall beneath the wheels. He was pronounced dead by a doctor in the neighborhood. He leaves his wife and nine children.

The truck, continuing down the hill, struck head-on into a tree a few feet from a yard where three children were playing.

Lucy Davenport, Negro, 53, of 4443 Lowell street northwest, was seriously injured yesterday when she was knocked down by an automobile while crossing the street near her home.

Karl M. Russell, jr., 4, of 315 Kennedy street northwest, was treated at Sibley Hospital for cuts to his face, head and body when struck by a truck while playing in the alley in the rear of his home.

The truck was operated by Frank E. Dibbs, 18, of 800 Ingraham street northwest. Diggs was not held by police.

Meanwhile, a coroner's jury exonerated Herman Bane, 35, of Halifax, Va., of blame in the traffic death of Harry A. Walsh, 30, of Oxon Hill, Md., who was killed may 25 at Third street northwest in the Mall.

Died in Hospital.

Witnesses testified that Walsh staggered into the street in front of Bane's car. The coroner's autopsy report showed that Walsh had been drinking.

Walsh died in Casualty Hospital of a skull fracture a few hours after he was struck.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said yesterday that an inquest will be held Wednesday in the death of 3-year-old William Walter Brookhart, grandson of former Senator Smith W. Brookhart, who was killed by an automobile in the 3200 block of Highland place northwest.

The inquest date has not been set, Dr. MacDonald said, and will be held up until Mrs. Dorothy W. Ralph, driver of the car that struck the child, is released from the hospital. Mrs. Ralph, an expectant mother, was reported slightly improved yesterday in Georgetown Hospital.

The revocations board revoked four driving permits and suspended 21 others for periods of from 15 to 45 days yesterday when action was taken on the cases of 25 motorists convicted of speeding.

Thirty-day suspensions went to Henry L. Aikins, 1223 Twelfth street northwest, 42 miles; LeRoy R. Henry, 1003 E street southeast, 45 miles; George W. Heaert, Marine Barracks, 40 miles; Albert T. Jones, 344 Elm street northwest, 45 miles; William L. Langlois, 1210 St. Mathews court northwest, 45 miles; Carl W. Linker, 2307 Connecticut avenue northwest, 40 miles; Thomas E. Marshall, 1400 M street northwest, 40 miles; Robert H. Maupin, 605 Sixth street southwest, 40 miles; Joseph Tinoco, 310 O street northwest, 42 miles; Henry A. VanHouten, jr., 3530 Quesada street northwest, 44 miles; Thomas J. Waters, 4428 Q street northwest, 48 miles.

Suspensions of 15 days went to Joseph A. Baslin, Clarendon, Va., 26 miles; John H. Green, 57 N street southeast, 37 miles; Richard A. Harrell, 1818 Potomac avenue southeast, 35 miles; Taylor E. Hillyard, 1506 East Capitol street, 38 miles; Walter C. Hughes, 4523 Ninth street northwest, 36 miles; Ted Jewell, Alexandria, Va., 36 miles; Edward R. Kennedy, 2001 O street northwest, 36 miles; Bernard A. Kino, 4619 Quarles street northeast, 36 miles.

Kindergarten Has Own Circus; Spectators All 'Crash Gate'

The black mustachioed ringmaster with his cracking whip was there, as were the tumbling clowns, swinging trapeze performers, tightrope walkers, roaring animals, galloping cowboys and leopard-skin-garbed strong men lifting the 100-pound weights.

The "strong men" were two 5-year-olds and their 100-pound weights were empty boxes painted black, but make-believe made the circus no less realistic to the children and their two dozen parents on hand for the show.

In teh center of the floor was a sawdust ring, and high overhead was the big top, gaily decorated with toy balloons and crayon drawings of clowns and animals. At the entrance of the circus was a sign, "Admission one box of pins" but so eager were the children to do their stunts that all comers were permitted to crash the gate.

The first act was a team of four prancing ponies—each of them a little girl appropriately costumed—that kicked up the sawdust while the ringmaster cracked his whip, twirled his mustachios and balanced the silk top hat on his head. The clowns walked on their hands in wheel-barrow formation, the cowboys galloped about with wooden ponies, nad daring young men flew through the air on the trapeze.

Three girls with parasols walked the "tightrope"—a narrow strip of wood stretched across the room—and the muscles of the strong men rippled beneath their leopard-skin costmues as they lifted the weights, clearly marked 100 pounds, high in the air.

The grand finale of the show was the animal act, with each child imitating some resident of the menagerie. While lions roared and elephants trumpeted, several strange unidentifiable "animals" made noises that even Barnum never heard.

Locusts

Are Blessing, After All; Will Be Fed to Fish.

At first they were a sort of plague—a legion of insects to be feared by many. But now the 17-year locusts are a blessing—to the fish.

The Bureau of Fisheries came through yesterday with the idea of feeding the cicadas to the fish. They said locusts were an economical food and contained vitamins which are good for fish.

Memorial Service Held by Kiwanians

Washington Kiwanians at a memorial service yesterday noon in the Mayflower Hotel paid tribute to the 35 men who have died since the club was formed 1 years ago.

Ministers of three churches, representing Catholic and Protestant denominations, took part in the rites. The Rev. Oscar F. Blackwelder, of the Reformation; the Re. Edward Roach, of St. Matthew's Catholic Church, and the Re. S. B. Daugherty, of the Memorial United Brethren Church, eulogized the club's deceased members.

Eight charter members of the club hae died. Last year there were two deaths: Charles M. Marsh, who died January 1, 1935, and Stephen H. Talkes, whose death occurred last October 22.

Byrns Cool To Citizens' Rider Appeal

Dismisses a Delegation Asking Consideration of Sisson Bill.

Statement of Speaker Is Denied by Author of Repealer.

A delegation of labor and civic spokesmen yesterday received a cold reception from Speaker Byrns when it appeared with a plan for action on the Sisson bill to repeal the "red rider" before Congress adjourns.

At the same time Representative Sisson (Democrat), of New York, charged the Speaker with "misrepresenting the facts" in regard to the reasons for a delay in House action.

After listening a few minutes to the delegation, Byrns dismissed the visitors with the suggestion that he was too busy and that they had better turn their attention to the House District Committee.

Exhibits Byrns Letter.

Sisson exhibited a copy of a letter Byrns wrote to R. C. Keenan president of the Illinois State Teachers Association in which the Speaker stated that the District Committee had several hours on May 11 to call up the Sisson bill but "for some reason" failed to do so.

The New Yorker replied that the Speaker had told both Chairman Norton, of the House District Committee, and Representative Kennedy (Democrat), Maryland, that the District day would be canceled because of the priority of the Frazier-Lemke bill. At the last minute he allowed Mrs. Norton to use the latter part of the afternoon, but he discouraged the calling up of the Sisson bill because of its controversial nature.

The delegation also called upon Chairman O'Connor, of the House Rules Committee, who confirmed Sisson's statement that the failure to call up the bill on May 11 was due to an agreement of House leaders.

Appeal for Special Rule.

The Rules Committee chairman said he had "done everything possible" to help the Sisson bill.

Miss Selma Borchardt, of the Teachers Union, left with him a copy of a letter from Frank J. Coleman, secretary of the Central Labor Union, appealing for a special rule on the measure.

The delegation, in making calls at the Senate, was assured that Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, will report the Wheeler bill to repeal the "red rider" very soon, probably today.

A letter, signed by Mrs. Nellie S. Lorenz, of the League of Women Voters, and addressed to Senator King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, was disclosed by the group.

The letter pointed out that some of the organizations which have been represented as speaking for a large number of Washingtonians actually constitute a very small minority.

"The Public School Association (headed by Brig. Gen. Amos A. Fries), whose officers support the 'red rider,' is a case in point," the letter stated. "As I remember, this association was said to represent about 60 organizations. * * * I think I may safely say that at present not more than a half-dozen inconspicuous school organizations belong, out of more than 100 parent-teacher and home and school associations in Washington."

Hideout

Children Under Stage Are Blamed for Theater Fire.

Discovery by children of the neighborhood that they could hide under the stage of the Wardman Park Hotel Theater without being seen probably led to the $1,000 fire there Tuesday night, Calvin C. Lauber, fire marshal, said yesterday.

An aperture in the concrete wall surrounding the stage had been left by the builder, who had boarded it up with the idea that it would supply a means of getting under the stage, it was said.

Children apparently had found the boards across the aperture, taken them off had made the understage territory their secret hideout. Search for the boys is going on, Lauber said, so their parents can be warned.

Southwest Boys Club Marks First Year; 3,000 Attend Event

Boxing Matches Are Staged by Youngsters; Capt. Sullivan Master of Ceremonies; Hoover Aid Among Speakers.

Three thousand persons crowded into I street southwest to hear music and speeches an dto watch the boys box in a ring which had been set up in the street. A thousand chairs were occupied and at least 2,000 men, women and children stood up.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, was the chief speaker. He is leader in the Boys Club movement. He said he was happy to be present for the anniversary celebration and said he thought the club was doing fine work among youth of Washington.

J. Edgar Hoover, of the Department of Justice was scheduled to be present but was unable to attend. Instead, he sent his first assistant, C. E. Tamm, who made a brief talk.

Capt. J. A. Sullivan was master of ceremonies. He recounted the difference between boys of his day and 1936.

Feature of the night were bouts by boys. They tangled up in several matches. A chill wind blew down the street. Some of the boys came out, dresse din trunks and their father's coats.

Jack Schaffer, president of Southwest Citizens Association, opened the night's program by intrducing Capt. Sullivan as master of ceremonies.

John A. Remon, chairman of the Board of Managers of the Boys' Clubs of Washington, and general manager of the Chesapeake & potomac Co., spoke of the value of boys' work in the city.

Mrs. John Allen Dougherty, vice chairman of the drive for funds for Boys Clubs, spoke. Others on the night's program were George W. Offutt, chairman of the Alcoholic Control Board and chairman of the Traffic Advisory Board of the American Automobile Association, and Judge Robert A. Mattingly, of Washington Municipal Court.

Players Serve An Ultimatum On Symphony

Musicians of the National Symphony Orchestra yesterday asked the orchestra association either to go ahead with its projected summer concerts at the water gate or relinquish the site to them.

This brought a new angle into the association's difficulties. The association has made several unsuccessful efforts to reach an agreement with the musicians union on the importation of musicians and reinstatement of George Gaul, personnel director of the orchestra.

This new slant came in a statement to Walter Bruce Howe, secretary of the orchestra association, from a committee, which styled itself the "Orchestra Members Committee." Its authority was not known at the Symphony headquarters.

The statement said:

"We, the National Symphony Orchestra, have been informed through the public press that your association is in a position to assume responsibility for a series of summer concerts in 1936, and further, that you have secured the Watergate as a site We, the orchestra, are ready and willing to play these concerts. There exists then, the site, the orchestra and your published intent to undertake them.

"We must ask that your association either take immediate steps to make use of this site, which could only have been secured for the orchestra itself by your association, acting as our representatives, or, being unwilling to make use of our services, to relinquish that site either to the orchestra or to a responsible sponsor in order that we, the National Symphony Orchestra, may have the opportunity of supplying these summer concerts to the people of Washington."

Capital Asked To Take Over Transit Lines

PUC Has Failed to Gain Public Advantages, Citizen Declares.

Purchase of 30 Second-Hand Trolleys Announced by Firm.

The Public Utilities Commission of Washington has failed to obtain any transportation advantages for the public, and Government ownership of all District transit lines is the only solution to the problem, William K. Clayton, chairman of the PUC committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations, told the Trinidad Citizens Association last night.

"All the advantage has gone to the corporations," he declared, "and the public has gained little or nothing."

Earlier in the day the Capital Transit Co. had announced purchase of 30 second-hand front entrance street cars from the United Electric Railways of Providence, R. I., and William A. Roberts, people's counsel, had volunteered to lead opposition terming them dangerous and slower than two-man cars.

The 30 cars will be placed in service immediately after they have been reconditioned and repainted, the comapny said.

The pronouncement of Robrts was regarded as a declaration of war on the proposal of the company to buy 20 additional second-hand cars from Providence for conversion to one-man operation.

The company's management is on record in favor of general extension of the one-man operation throughou tthe system.

Twelve citizens' associations were put on record as opposed to the one-man cars at the hearing before the commission last December. These and other organizations were circularized by Roberts yesterday in a notice of the forthcoming hearing and an offer to represent their views before the commission.

Among individuals and on record as opposed to the extension of one-man car operations are:

S. D. Ashford, Bureau of Safety, Interstate Commerce Commission; Mrs. Jessie N. Barber, 3000 Connecticut avenue; John W. Beckwith, 1007 South Carolina avenue southeast; F. L. Blake, jr., 1512 R street northwest; Nathaniel B. Chase, 4704 Connecticut avenue northwest; James A. Dellett, 5515 Nevada avenue; M. E. Dougla , 1407 Third street, northwest; Arthur Smith, 2869 Twenty-eighth street northwest; W. I. Swanton, 1464 Belmont street; Bloomingdale Civic Association, president, Mrs. J. A. Cuney; Central Northwest Citizens' Association, Columbia Heights Citizens' Association, Conduit Road Citizens' Association, Friendship Citizens' Association, Kenilworth Citizens' Association, Logan-Thomas Citizens' Association, North Cleveland Park Citizens' Association, Northeast Women's Club, Rhode Island Avenue Citizens' Association, Southeast Washington Citizens' Association and Stanton Park Citizens' Association.

DeShong Blanks A's, 5-0, After Nats Drop First Game, 4-3

Athletics Get 5 Hits Off Hurler

By Shirley Povich.

Sports Editor of The Post.

The Nats spent four profitless hours at Griffith Stadium yesterday with a treadmill performance against the Athletics. After losing a galling 4-3 gam in the head end of the double bill, they averted complete disaster for the day with a 5-0 victory over the A's in the more satisfactory second engagement.

Jimmy DeShong ushered 'em into victory in that second game with a five-hit performance against the Athletics, but the 5,000 customers left the park at the finish still muttering at the loss of that first game which required ten innings to lose.

Nats' Rally Ties Score.

His sixth pitching victory which has eluded him now for nigh onto two weeks, again escaped Buck Newson in the opening battle when the A's rose up and smote him for three runs in the eighth inning to take a 3-1 lead.

Wally Moses had apparently broken up the ball game with his double against the leftfield fence that scored two runs and paved the way for the third, but the Nats put the game together again with a run in the ninth that tied the score.

But Moses appeared on the scene again in the tenth, with Jack Russell now doing the Washington pitching and after Warstler walked with two out, he larruped a triple to deep right centerfield that won the game for keeps.

With the aged Harry Kelley, who had a tryout with Washington nine years ago, serving up an assortment of slow stuff, the Nats were making no great progress in that first game, but they did manage to get a 1-0 lead for Newsom in the first seven innings.

Nats Muff Chance in Ninth.

And then Buck encountered a wild streak. He opened the eighth by walking Pinch Hitter Mailho, but was in no serious trouble apparently when Kelley was out for bunting a third strike foul in an attempt to sacrifice. Newsom's troubles were disappearing rapidly when Finney flied out, but the the troubles began when Warstler drew his third straight pass at that point.

Then it was that Moses connected for his double that put the A's in a 2-1 lead. It was 3-1 after Pucci-nelli singled to right.

Washington got a run back and made it 3-2 when Kress singled to left, took second on Johnson's error on the ball and was wild-pitched to third with none out. He scored on Bolton's infield out.

But it was in the ninth that the Nats muffed a glowing chance to put an end to the game. Lewis singled to right and Myer beat out a hit in front of the plate to put the winning run on base. When Stone bunted and Kelley's throw to third to catch Lewis was late, the Nats had three on with none out.

But the best they could get out

Indians Down Browns; Gain In Race

Win, 6-5, Rank Third in Standings; Rally Near Finish.

Cleveland, May 28 (AP). — The Cleveland Indians vaulted into third place today by a 6 to 5 victory over St. Louis as the Chicago White Sox defeated the Tigers by the same score at Detroit.

Two days ago the Indians were fifth.

Trailing 4 to 2 at the end of the sixth inning, the Tribe went out in front in the seventh when Odel Hale smacked a home run with the bases loaded, after Vosmik and Hughes had been retired.

Dodgers Get Six Runs In Ninth, Beat Phils

Philadelphia, May 28 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers sank the Phillies back into the National League cellar again today with a six-run rally in the ninth, after the Phils had gone out in front by scoring five in the seventh. Johnny Moore hit his ninth homer of the season for the Phils.

The score was 13 to 10.

East Sure to Win I.C.4-A Track Title; West Won't Enter

By the United Press.

Philadelphia, May 28.—An Eastern college will win the sixtieth annual I. C. A. A. A. A. track and field championships at Franklin Field Friday and Saturday. The East can't lose because the far West won't compete.

Those nimble-footed and strong-limbed California athletes who have put the Eastern forces to rout in 14 out of the last 15 meets and won the championship for the last 11 years, are staying home to compete in their own conference meet. It will be the first time since 1919 that a California school hasn't competed in the I. C. A. A. A. A.

Chisox Pound Sorrell; Beat Tigers, 6-5

Detroit, May 28 (AP).—The Chicago White Sox knocked Vic Sorrell out of the box in the ninth inning today and then pounded two other Detroit pitchers to win a 6-to-5 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

The Tigers had pulled up from behind when Goose Goslin hit a homer over the rightfield wall in the eighth inning with the bases loaded, but when Hayes opened the ninth for the Sox with a home run Sorrell, who had given nine bases on balls, was replaced by Kimsey.

Upsets Feature Kenwood Golf Tourney

By Dave Herman.

Old man upset cast about for victims yesterday, and fished out plenty of 'em in the Kenwood Golf and Country Club invitation tournament.

One of the first to be hooked was Martin F. McCarthy, Beaver Dam's "Iron Man," whose sensational 69 tied the course mark and won him the medal Wednesday.

In the most amazing defeat of the day, McCarthy bowed to Buddy Tew, of the host club, a patent attorney, who just kept his head down, and triumphed, 3 and 2 with golf that was really nothing to rave about.

The tornado of upsets did not strike again until the unlucky thirteenth match of the first round when gangling Harvey Johnson, of Columbia, put away Ralph Quinter, of Chevy Chase, 1 up. Then followed Bill Pendergast's 1-up victory over Luther Steward, jr., of Columbia, and two more upsets that were stunning.

Barr Wins.

Little Bobby Brownell, of Manor, who played well in the qualifying round, went down before L. S. Barr, of Columbia, 5 and 4, and Ted Rutley, of Kenwood, who fired a 71 Wednesday, had his ears trimmed off by blond Bob Leapley, a public links golfer, 7 and 6.

The afternoon rounds didn't furnish any great amount of surprises, although Johnson's 1-up victory over Pendergast had tongues in the locker room wagging.

A terrific upset in the second round was averted by husky Tommy Webb, of Washington Golf and Country Club, who was forced to make one of those Sarazen bunker shots on the twentieth hole before subduing Ray Willett, lanky Kenwood caddie.

Followed by some 35 caddies, four brothers, a couple of cousins, and two dozen friends, Willett caught the fancy of the day's largest gallery in his battle with Webb. While his caddy pals had their fingers crossed all the way, Willett evened the match at the eighteenth with a great approach that gave him a par 4. On the nineteenth he missed a short putt for a 4 that would have meant victory, and on the twentieth he overshot the green

Yankees Top Sox, Add To Lead

Win 10-6 Victory With Late Batting Attack; De Maggio Stars.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, May 28.—The New York Yankees piled nine runs across the plate in two wild innings today to turn back the Red Sox's assault on their American League lead with a 10-to-6 victory.

With the flashy rookie, Joe DiMaggio, leading the batting parade, and the veteran Pat Malone managing to stay the distance, although hit freely, the Yanks stretched their first-place edge to 2½ games by the win, which gave them a 2-1 edge for the three-game series.

A six-run splurge in the seventh started the Yanks on their way to victory, after they had been on the short end of the count from the opening inning. The Sox sent three pitchers to the mound in the seventh, but each one performed his duties dizzier than his predecessor.

Chicago, May 28 (AP). — With the proceedings enlivened by two fist fights at home plate which resulted in the banishment of Shortstop Woody English and Coach Roy Johnson of the Cubs and Pitcher Lee Stine and Coach George Kelly, of the Reds, Chicago hammered out an 11 to 5 victory over Cincinnati today.

Pirates Defeat Cardinals, 7 to 2

St. Louis, May 28 (AP).—The St. Louis Cardinals lost their second game in a row to the Pittsburgh Pirates today, 7 to 2, but regained undisputed possession of the National League lead. The defeat, tying up the series with the Pirates, left the Cardinals a half game ahead of the New York Giants, who dropped both halves of a double-header to Boston.

City Net Tourney Starts Tomorrow

Entries for the City of Washington tennis tournament will close tonight at 6 o'clock at the Tennis Shop, 1019 Fifteenth street northwest. Preliminary and first-round matches are slated to get under way tomorrow at 2 p.m. at the Edgemoor Country Club and the Rock Creek courts.

Sponsored by the Evening Star, the City of Washington tournament annually attracts the cream of local netmen. Barney Welsh, local and national public parks champion, will be striving to wrest the title from Dooly Mitchell, former District champion.

Other outstanding performers already entered include Hugh Lynch, Bud Markey, Nate Ritzenberg and Allie Ritzenberg.

500-Mile Auto Classic Has Fastest Field Ever

By the Associated Press.

Indianapolis, May 28.—The fastest field in history will start the 500-mile automobile race here Saturday morning.

That was assured today with completion of qualifying trials when the thirty-third and last position in the classic was won by Emil Andres, of Chicago, at an average speed of 111.455 miles per hour.

Bowers Also Gives But 3 Safeties

By John R. Vosburgh.

The only thing rough about the Roosevelt High Rough Riders yesterday was their ruffled dignity when Young Mr. Arnold Heft, of the Central High pitching staff, set them back with a 2-0 defeat in Central stadium. The left-handed Mr. Heft allowed just three hits as he southpawed Central into a tie for first place in the inter-high series.

Western, which shares the series lead with the Mount Pleasanters, will meet Central in a play-off for the championship next week, possibly Monday at Griffith Stadium. Thanks to the crafty slants of the 16-year-old Central pitcher, Western's team, included among the spectators, now has a chance to earn the title instead of sliding into it merely on a Roosevelt victory.

The Rough Riders, incidentally, shared the honor with Central of turning in the best ball game of the series. The only reason Howard Bowers, Roosevelt pitcher, is not the hero this morning is because Heft was so good. Bowers also allowed but three hits.

Askin Hits Homier.

One of them, however, happened to be a resounding home run to left centerfield by Bernie Askin, Central's hefty catcher, his second four-base clout of the series. The swarthy receiver, who has the peculiar faculty of being able to face the pitcher as he bats—something like Heinie Groh—stepped into the first ball pitched him by the right-handed Bowers and away it went.

The other Central run came in the sixth frame when Don Fones led off with a Texas Leaguer over second. Central's second hit of the game. Nick Mallus drew a walk which set the stage for Joe Moran, the All-High center fielder to drive in Shortstop Fones with a ringing liner between second and short. In every other inning but the third and sixth, Central went out in 1-2-3 order.

Heurich Loses 1st Tilt, Bows To Coffey

The Heurich Brewers finally lost their first game of the season yesterday and it was the youthful Coffey Sales Co. Club which turned the trick, winning a 7-3 decision in an Industrial League game of The Post Sandlot Association. It was the first defeat in four league starts for the Brewers, who also are undefeated in the National City Sunday League.

Coffey got off to a fast start and eventually knocked Lefty Scrivener, former George Washington University pitcher, out of the box before the fourth inning was finished. Foteh Mathias, Coffey pitcher, kept the seven Heurich hits well scattered, yielding runs only in the third frame.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

THE suspicion that Danno O'Mahoney, of Balleydehob, could not wrestle a little bit, even if he were the world's heavyweight champion, is now rather well defined. At least, it would appear so inasmuch as O'Mahoney's own promoters have given up on the big Irishman to the extent of forfeiting whatever remaining claims he had to the title he used to own.

POVICH.

They didn't come right out and say that O'Mahoney is a bum and can't wrestle a little bit, but it is rather clear now that they do not think much of O'Mahoney. I gather that from the fact that Mr. O'Mahoney was flopped up in Philadelphia the other evening by Mister Rudy Dusek, of the Durable Dusek, who happens to be one of the gents who was promoting O'Mahoney around the country.

You remember Danno. He is the big Mick that Paul Bowser imported from Ireland 18 months ago on the well-founded suspicion that he would draw well in that part of transplanted Erin known as Boston. That Mr. O'Mahoney was not very proficient as a wrestler did not disturb Mr. Bowser, and rightly, because any guy with an Irish monicker and an Irish pan has two strikes on any Boston audience.

But even Mr. Bowser did not reckon with the tremendous enthusiasm with which O'Mahoney would be greeted in Boston town. Against the veriest setups he packed the Boston Garden and Braves Field, and it was unthinkable that Danno should lose a match—at least, his promoters took care that he didn't.

One of those promoters was the same Rudy Dusek I was telling about. Rudy Dusek is the office man for M. Jacques Curley, who recently admitted in court that he was associated with Mr. Bowser in the promotion of wrestling matches in the East. So, you see, when Mr. O'Mahoney was flopped by Rudy up in Philly the other night he was beaten virtually by one of his management.

The reason for all of that was, no doubt, that the Bowser-Curley-Dusek crowd does not care to trifle any longer with the Irishman, who, I understand, was in severe danger of losing every time he met a gent who disregarded the blueprints, as did Dick Shikat last winter up in Madison Square Garden. O'Mahoney was no man to protect himself if, perchance, the enemy chose to ignore the specifications for the match, and the nervous strain on Bowser-Curley-Dusek was terrific.

In disposing of Danno, the Bowser-Curley-Dusek people apparently were willing to forfeit his remaining claims to the title. New England, Canada and a couple of other States were still recognizing him as the champion despite his beating by Shikat, but that did not disturb his managers. Those claims now are being taken over by Dusek, who, if champion of nothing else, is at least champion of O'Mahoney.

This Rudy Dusek, incidentally, would probably be a legitimate champion even if he won the title without benefit of legitimacy. He is the oldest of the four Duseks and probably the best wrestler in a family of high-grade wrestlers. If Bowser and Curley are advancing Rudy as their new claimant to the title, they have chosen wisely.

In striking contrast to O'Mahoney, Dusek can defend himself on the mat. His part ever since he joined the Bowser-Curley combine was to stooge for every new build-up that those gentlemen decided upon, but Rudy with the bandages off is a very swell wrestler, indeed.

As I was saying, Rudy is the oldest of the Dusek "Riot Squad," as the Dusek literature calls the Duseks. His name isn't really Dusek—but Hason, a Bohemian derivation. The reason that it became Dusek was because when Rudy started out as a wrestler he didn't know exactly how Daddy Dusek would receive his chucking of his machinist's job, and Daddy Dusek was no softie when aroused.

But when Rudy tossed a $1,500 purse into the lap of his mom after a few weeks of wrestling, all was forgiven and Daddy Dusek began to inquire how long such things had been going on. Anyway, parental objections evaporated under that kind of persuasions and other boys of the family—Emil, Ernie and Joe—followed Rudy into professional wrestling. There are still four boys at home, biding their time about it.

Danno O'Mahoney has announced that he is returning to Ireland. He didn't do badly over here. He acquired a fair-sized fortune, a wife, a pretty good idea of the expanse of the United States and the world's championship. If he had only learned to wrestle——

G. P. O. Wins.

Two Jockeys Set Down at Hagerstown; Six Collect $472 Double

Royal Canopy Pays $118 In First

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Hagerstown, Md., May 28.—Things happened at this cozy race track today, which is not unusual. Perhaps the most important item was that of a $472.20 (cash) payoff on the daily double that brought six very satisfied customers to the windows. The large profit-taking was mostly the work of an ancient mare in the first race. Radial, the elderly daughter of Royal Canopy, chose today to do her running and she thoroughly shocked the majority of betters. Only three $2 tickets were sold on her chances. The lucky and faithful collected a $118.30 mutuel.

The concluding half of the "double" was also the work of the fair sex. Star Queen dug her hoofs into the soft track and came sailing home in the colors of Mrs. T. J. Donohue, of Washington, D. C. Star Queen was a $7.40 second choice.

Two jockeys drew suspensions as the result of the day's program. Jockey N. Brooks was given a vacation for the remainder of the meeting for rough and ready riding in the third race on Counsellor Billy. Apprentice J. Leonard not only had himself set down and had his case referred to the Maryland Racing Commission, but he carried many of his backers with him.

Red Label Wins.

After giving Scotty Don a million-dollar ride to mid-stretch in the fourth race, he suddenly swung his mount in front of Shaggy Ann and the stewards said no go. In the meanwhile, Red Label had won, so Scotty Don's number was taken down. Miss Patches, which had closed fast, was given second money and third went to Shaggy Ann. Red Label's public just grinned and went to collect a $23.90 mutuel.

Young Leonard, as usual, was allowed to ride out his assignments for the day and he took some revenge by piloting Tell It to victory in the Mayor Howard W. Jaskson Purse, the day's feature race. The mayor was detained in Baltimore on business, so his representative said, and did not see the race. However, that meant little to those who celebrated with an $18 mutuel. Tell It's time of one minute was the best of the meeting.

Gracias Takes Thriller.

The second race brought a thrilling finish in which Gracias, under a pounding from Jockey V. Wisner, came up in final strides to take a decision from Follow On. The money flowed freely again with a $19.50 payoff in order.

Manual, a gelding that was as stiff as a board on his last appearance here, was well oiled today and simply galloped off with the sixth race. More Pep did a lot of futile chasing. Those who knew Manual's day collected an $8 mutuel.

The finishing touches and the complete rout of the favorite players was accomplished with the running of the seventh race. Lady Glasgow, at an $86.90 mutuel, just jogged along in front of her field.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TELL IT, $18.00, $7.90, $6.00; SOUPCON, $4.40, $3.70; DOESKIN, $4.90.

TELL IT proved indolent in behind the pace for a half, took command in stretch to win ridden out. SOUPCON, kept out in center of track for five-eighths, closed with rush, DOESKIN, used up setting pace, had nothing left. AELLA tired after showing speed for half.

SIXTH RACE—About one and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $300; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place, same. Went to post at 5:10. Off at 5:10. Winner, Mrs. Anni Boots' b. m. (6), by Dress Parade—Carrie Moore. Trained by F. Booker. Value to winner, $200; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:49 4-5, 1:15 4-5, 1:42 4-5, 1:51 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MANUAL, $8.00, $4.20, $3.10; MORE PEP, $3.40, $2.90; FIFE, $2.80.

MANUAL, showing startling improvement over last race, took command opening quarter to win in common gallop. It was sharp reversal of form. MORE PEP, away poorly, saved ground at every turn and closed gamely under punishment. FIFE forced pace to stretch turn, and was next best. THIS PLAY ran an even race.

SEVENTH RACE—About one and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $300; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:42. Off at 5:44. Winner, H. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADY GLASGOW, $86.90, $25.50, $8.40; JIM BROWN, $6.90, $4.50; MACO, $3.10.

LADY GLASGOW, exhibiting fine foot from the gate, opened a long lead and just lasted to win. JIM BROWN, showing a rush in stretch, came from away back the last half and just missed. MACO, well up throughout, had no excuses. BARNEY SEXTON chased the winner for three-quarters and then quit.

'Out Fishin' . . . . .

By Jack Hawley.

The fly fisherman tells me that he has had some great sport recently with the dry fly and native brook trout in some of the fairly well-known mountain streams in Virginia. Mostly 9, 10 and 11 inch ones, though I suspected a few of 'em that "got away" were better than that, and I saw some that were much larger.

That's near enough unless you feel inclined to read this writer's column under date of Wednesday, April 22, on "The Better Trout Streams." If you aren't interested enough to find out for yourself, you aren't a trout fisherman. I don't believe in drawing blueprints and making things too easy for any fresh-water fishing (salt-water fishing is a different story).

Seek and ye shall find. But remember, you won't find many near the beaten paths. Go up stream and back into the hills; remember the brook trout like the cold, clear headwaters, protecting cover and plenty of food. Given these conditions, you will probably find trout—nice ones. And the farther you get away from the beaten paths on such a stream, the greater the likelihood of good fishing.

Use Best Terminal Tackle.

The streams are now low and and it is absolutely necessary to use the finest terminal tackle and small flies. A 7½-foot leader tapered to .009 and number 12 and 14 flies are just about right. Make sure your leader sinks and your fly and line float, for they won't take a sunken fly, nor will they take a floating fly if the leader is floating also, unless, of course, it is in fast water where a floating leader is not so conspicuous.

This means a well-dressed line, soap or glycerine to use on the leader every once in a while, and dry fly oil. Of course, fish up stream, slowly and cautiously. When possible, after catching a fish on one fly, I washed it, dried it with a few casts, dipped it in oil and dried it again, then replaced it with a duplicate from the fly-box.

Don't let anyone tell you that the fly fisherman tries to make it sound refined and difficult. Sloppy fishing, heavy, short leaders, wet flies, spinners, etc., may be all right for early season fishing when the water is high and often roily, but when the dry fly season comes along you either refine your tackle and methods, or you don't rise any trout.

Each man should have a half-mile or longer section of the stream to himself. Then he can fish as slowly and cautiously, experiment as much, and change flies as often as he wishes.

Once one rises to the fly and you miss him, or he rises only to drown the fly or "to skip rope with your leader," as friend has put it, that is generally the end of that trout's rising, regardless of how long you rest him, or how many other flies you try on him. So I emphasize, fish slowly, cautiously and carefully from the standpoint of preventing drag and having to lift your fly from likely water, etc. Many a good trout is warned by lack of carefully studying the pools from these standpoints before fishing it.

The smaller and more difficult pools often prove to be the best, for everybody fishes the easier and larger ones, passing up or carelessly fishing the others. Bait fishermen are prone to sit at the heads of the larger ones for hours and generally keep them pretty well cleaned out, to say nothing of the dynamiting and liming which I am told goes on back in these mountains in these large pools.

Experimenting Necessary.

Not only are some people suspicious of our opinions concerning the refinements necessary to take trout in such streams and on dry flies, but also of the many different patterns and sizes of flies we carry.

On brown bivisibles, one day I couldn't get a rise after marked success there previously. In the morning after experimenting with many patterns I finally began to take trout on a No. 14 McGinty and the same size Western Bee. In the afternoon they stopped taking them, and I finally got around to a Ginger Quill and a Dark Montreal, which took trout alternately most of the afternoon.

Yet, because they float so well, I have gone through my stock of bivisibles during the day without a rise. I have the same experience with small-mouth bass. The Cahills and Royal Coachman have disappointed me all season, yet they were excellent last season, and may save the day the very next time out. One day I had excellent results on a No. 12 Coachman, but finally lost it on a good fish, probably because the leader had become frayed and I had neglected to inspect it. The only other one I had was a No. 10, and I couldn't get a rise to it. Finally I started taking them again on No. 12 modified (without wings) Royal Coachman.

There's no sense to that admittedly, but it is so. So what? So we carry a box full of flies, many sizes and patterns. We spend a lot of time, gas and disposition hunting trout streams, we find a few and enjoy them more because they are'nt blue printed, we are'nt bothered with crowds, and we find them ourselves.

Your correspondent didn't get in his trip to the Honga River—sinus incapacitated him completely. We are able, however, to convey to our readers what happened over the week end. "It wasn't so hot." Capt. Harry Woodburn, Solomons Island, phoned and said, "Who knows, maybe that sinus is a good indication or barometer, we caught 30 of the so-called croakers, per boat. Capt. Dick Lore reluctantly sends in the same report from this area. Captains in the vicinity of Point Lookout begin to tell us that the hardheads are getting harder to catch every day, bait is the same but they just don't take hold.

Messick, Va., hardheads are bigger than ever before, getting plenty of them, says Capt. Floyd Rollins, adding, "but who wants to come this far for croakers."

Wachapreague on the phone—"Best week-end we have had this season, to date." Quinby, Va., "Big trout very plentiful, had a good catch today, three of my boats (Capt. Corbin) out, returning with salmon trout (speckled) up to 9 pounds."

Manteo, N. C., calling—"A good day." And so far into the night.

Our predictions were good, but never again will we try to emulate "Bill Bennings" by predicting winners in the briny deep. Point Lookout and Solomons Island trailed home looking for "warmer water" other points predicted on Saturday in "Out Fishin'" came through with flying colors.

Hugh E. Blair phones some news that is authentic and to the point (we predicted the early arrival of bluefish at Oregon Inlet):

"In company with J. L. Goldsborough, of Piney Point (par excellence for rock fishing), J. E. Thompson and myself tried out the old stone pile off Tall Timbers Sunday. No luck with soft shell crabs, too early. Your Friday column proved your assertions that the Mr. Rock was a smart fellow—so we found out. We went trolling with spoons and, believe it or not, we made the first catch of the season, early? Sure we got 'em and nice one's, too."

Oh, the Gallant Fisher's Life! It Is the Best of Any"

Porgies, Sea Bass Plentiful in N. J.

Forked River, N. J., May 28.—The current warm spell brought the long awaited porgies, sea bass and blackfish into shore at the Forked River fishing area last week-end and local fishing rose from its low point at the end of the flounder season to a high spot that sent several hundred fishermen home over the week-end with well filled bags.

The first blackfish and a very few sea bass and porgies were taken here last week but were few and scattered until the warm spell broke. The week-end brought these species to their usual haunts outside Barnegat Inlet with a rush that open-boat captains and their passengers took full advantage of.

Those Blues.

Looks like those infernal blue fish were going to camp along the North Carolina coast all spring. Why? The answer is very simple—part of it we answered in Friday's column the remainder is very simple—as soon as the nights' cease to be cool, as they are now, and warm up, then and only then you will see fishing as you want it.

The hungry youngsters in nearby institutions, and the bread line. Please don't forget 'em.

Nats, Athletics Divide Two Contests

of the situation was the tying run. That scored when Travis slashed a grounder to first that Finney knocked down for an unassisted putout. With men on third and second and only one out, the Nets went away——

Signals Mixed.

Because somebody, Red Kress, or Buddy Myer got their signals mixed. Myer thinking that Kress was going to bunt on a squeeze play, raced home and was caught at the plate. The threat ended when Kress fouled out.

Before the inning was over, Bucky Harris found himself banished from the game. Earl Mack, the A's coach, delayed the battle for 10 minutes attempting to convince Umpire Johnson that Kress had attempted to bunt the pitch which had been called a ball. When it seemed that Johnson was about to be overruled by his umpiratical colleagues, Harris dashed out on the field, said something, not much, and was immediately ruled out of the park for the day.

Minus Harris, the Nats made short shrift of the A's in that second game. It was a dismal affair for the Athletics with DeShong shutting 'em out the entire route, striking out six, and otherwise pitching like a combination of Johnson, Mathewson and Three-Finger Brown.

Wilshere Is Pounded.

The Nats' victim in that second game was Vernon Wilshere, their left-handed nemesis of last year. They picked up a run off Wilshere at the start after Lewis and Myer singled, and they made it 2-0 in the third when DeShong, who had walked, stole second and scored on Myer's second straight hit.

It was 3-0 after the fourth when Travis led off with a double to left and in the seventh, Jesse Hill boosted it to the final 5-0 figures with a line-drive triple to right that scored Kuhel and Millies.

DeShong ran into a storm at the strat when the A's filled the bases on Finney's single, Warstler's bruised foot and an error by Kress. But they were turned back scoreless when Pucinelli lined into a double play and DeShong struck out Higgins.

DeShong's shutout bid was endangered seriously in the ninth when Higgins tripled with one out, but in this emergency he slipped a third strike over on Johnson and retired Newsom on a grounder to Lewis.

Bond Offerings In April Reach Six-Year Peak

Total of 688 Millions Is Chiefly in Refunding Operations.

New York, May 28.—The volume of corporate financing increased in April to the highest level since May, 1930, according to the monthly survey of the National Industrial Conference board. Total financing amounted to approximately $688,000,000, as compared with $595,000,000 for the preceding month and $150,000,000 a year ago. The greater proportion of new financing continues to be in refunding issues, rather than in new capital issues. New capital issues, however, more than doubled from March to April, reaching a total of $128,000,000, the highest since September, 1931.

Total corporate financing for the four months ended April 30 amounted to $1,751,000,000, as compared with an average level of $198,000,000 for the corresponding period of the preceding four years. Financing to date for this year was about 15 per cent higher than for the corresponding period in 1931, and 30 per cent below that for the first four months of 1930.

Industry Is Active.

Industrial activity advanced sharply in April, according to the survey. Activity, however, was still below the high point for the recovery period, which occurred in December, 1935.

The increase during April was led by expansion of activity in the steel, automobile, building and machine tool industries. Output of zinc, on a seasonably adjusted basis, rose to the highest point since October, 1930. Electric power production also advanced.

Output of crude petroleum declined moderately from the high level of March. There was also a less-than-seasonal decline in bituminous coal production. Total carloadings increased substantially, largely as a result of increased coal shipments. The gain in loadings of miscellaneous freight was slightly more than seasonal.

Retail trade movements were mixed. Sales in rural areas increased, but department store sales rose by less than the usual seasonal amount as compared with the March level. Wholesale and retail prices were substantially unchanged.

National Steel Sells $10,000,000 Bonds

New York, May 28 (AP).—National Steel Corporation has sold $10,000,000 first collateral mortgage sinking fund 3¾ per cent bonds to Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and associates, it was announced today.

Proceeds of the bonds, which have all been placed privately by the bankers, will be used for capital expenditures in connection with improvements and additions to the steel company's Great Lakes plant in Detroit. The issue will be due June 1, 1965.

Reserve Funds $53,000,000 More in Week

Normal Gold Influx Lifts Total $13,000,000 to 10.388 Billions.

By the Associated Press.

The weekly condition statement of Federal Reserve banks showed member bank reserve balances resumed their upward climb during the week ended May 27 which saw the admission of $53,000,000 to the total. Total reserve balances are now $5,747,000,000, estimated by the Reserve Board at about $2,900,000,000 in excess of legal requirements.

The inflow of gold was near normal during the week, which showed an increase of $13,000,000 to bring the total to $10,388,000,000. This gain is in contrast with an increase of $73,000,000 during the previous week when the latest movement of gold from France was in full swing. The condition statement said:

"The daily average volume of Federal Reserve Bank credit outstanding during the week ended May 27, as reported by the Federal Reserve banks, was $2,474,000,000, a decrease of $7,000,000 compared with the preceding week and of $1,000,000 compared with the corresponding week in 1935."

$100,000,000 Bills Offered by Treasury

The Secretary of the Treasury gives notice that tenders are invited for two series of Treasury bills to the aggregate amount of $100,000,000, or thereabouts. One series will be 195-day bills and the other series will be 273-day bills. Both series will be sold on a discount basis to the highest bidders.

Tenders will be received at the Federal Reserve banks or branches up to 2 o'clock on Monday, June 1. Tenders will not be received at the Treasury Department.

Bank Clearings Hold to Level Of Last Year

Increase Reported by 22 Leading Cities Only 0.8 Per Cent.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 28. — Bank clearings tended lower for the latest week, but continued to top the 1935 aggregate. The total for 22 leading cities in the United States for the week ended Wednesday, May 27, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., was $4,725,125,000, against $4,689,790,000 for the same week of last year, an increase of 0.8 per cent. This contrasted with a gain of 3.8 per cent in the previous week.

Clearings of $2,868,977,000 at New York City were 5.0 per cent under the 1935 comparative, and touched the lowest point since the week ended February 11. At outside centers, the aggregate of $1,856,175,000 was 11.1 per cent in excess of the figure for last year.

(Totals in thousands.)

Gain in Washington.

The Washington Clearing House reports total clearings of $18,788,725.51 for the week ended May 27, which compares with $15,224,384.25 for the corresponding period last year, an increase of 234 per cent. Compared with a total of $24,949,502.84 for the previous week, clearings decreased 24.6 per cent.

Cotton Is Steady In Narrow Range

New York, May 28 (AP).—Cotton made small gains today, closing steady, 2 to 8 points net higher. Closing quotations were 2 points higher on July, while new crop months showed net gains of 4 to 8 points.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil turned easy today declining 10 to 15 points on sales of 77 contracts. The sharp advance of the day previous weakened the technical position, which combined with a setback in lard and corn, accomplished a price reaction. Bleachable spot nominal; July closed 8.79, September 8.82, October 8.70, December 8.65, January 8.63.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent

Stocks Irregular in Less Active Trading; Government Bonds and Wheat Higher.

New York, May 28.—Stocks felt the brakes a little. Turnover fell to around 800,000 shares and the narrow irregularity in prices up to the last hour caused a little slipping before the close. Bonds also were quiet, but the tone was steady in the best issues. September wheat rose ⅝ of a cent to 84⅛ cents a bushel.

Without much to stir the imagination in stocks or commodities, attention was drawn to the Government bond market as preparations progress for the huge soldiers' bonus financing and the redemption of maturing issues. Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau suggested that the total of the new issues on the June 15 tax date would be a little more than $2,000,000,000, of which about half would be for new money. Bonus payments probably will require a good deal more than that—perhaps at least 50 per cent more—but the additional money has been accumulated for some time through the process of lifting the total of the weekly discount bill offerings.

Interest rates are yet to be announced, but the method of preventing subscription padding was revealed in a letter from the Treasury to the Federal Reserve banks. Upon receipt of copies of Secretary Morgenthau's letter to President Harrison of the local Reserve bank member banks at once stopped their practice of making unsecured loans to dealers in Government securities. This practice, a development of recent years, has involved the advance by the banks of funds to dealers to enable the latter to make advance payment on subscriptions, the bank theoretically accepting the securities to be allotted as collateral for the loan.

Small Dealers Hurt.

Since the collateral at all times was within the control of the bank, they were protected, although actually the loan was always for a limited time unsecured. There was a lot of scurrying about by dealers, especially small ones with limited capital, to find some way of escaping the necessity of putting up cash or collateral to pay down the initial installment of their subscriptions which, it was intimated, would be 10 per cent of the amount subscribed for.

The banks were fairly stiff in their refusals to do anything which might look like circumventing the Treasury's efforts to cut down subscription padding and they did not like that phrase in the secretary's letter which said that "Federal Reserve banks as fiscal agents of the United States are authorized and instructed to take such other action as may be necessary to assure compliance" with the Treasury's demand for elimination of joyriders. Under such a phrase the Reserve banks might do anything even to the extent of giving no allotment of securities on a member bank's subscription for its own account, and most of the banks felt that "co-operation" with the Treasury was mandatory.

May Point a Moral.

Conservative banks officers see much to be said in favor of the Treasury's new rules designed to cut down padding, but they wonder whether it was wise to make the new rules apply to the largest financing the Treasury has done in some time. Only through making enthusiasm less ebullient will it be possible to curtail Government borrowing and inflation of the national debt, and every time a $1,000,000,000 loan is met with an oversubscription of four or five billions it makes it only too easy for a fresh wave of extravagance to get under way, based in part upon the ease with which money can be borrowed.

Treasury issues were a little softer on announcement of the new offering, although it was merely an extension of the recent trend. Treasury support may be in the market, or it may be only a potential help, but with each additional billion or so added to the public debt the market naturally bends a little. It would do not harm in the long run for the market to weaken a good deal more, and for the new issue to have at close shave, for it has been all too rosy a path leading to the public debt heights.

Currency Hoarding.

In the foreign exchange market the feature was weakness in Dutch currency, the fate of which is no better than that of the franc, and probably a bit worse. Francs were held steady at the gold point, where necessarily the quotation will stay so long as the Bank of France ships gold. This week's statement of the bank shows only a small further loss of gold ($3,687,000), principally because of the recent slack operations on the holidays. However, the decline brought the bank's gold to the lowest point in five years. The ratio of gold to notes rose a little, on a drop in circulation, which item is bound to increase this week on the month-end operations.

The Bank of England reported a further increase in note circulation, along with a rise in gold. The bank steadily has been acquiring gold, and its currency expansion has occurred less because of any increase in business activity than because of hoarding by foreigners. The same influence has accounted for a considerable part of the total circulation of United States currency.

Trade Increases.

Markets were kept in suspense over the new taxation, views on which in Congress, and doubtless in Administration circles, appear to change every hour or so; but a considerable resistance to that species of bad news is being set up. One source of assistance is in the trade news. Industry in April, according to the Federal Reserve Board, showed a reversal of the downward trend of earlier in the year. Industrial production increased sharply over March and the same month of a year ago, as did employment and pay rolls.

The board's index of industrial production for April, with seasonal adjustments, stood at 100 per cent of the 1923-1925 average, compared with 93 per cent in March and 86 per cent of April of last year. The board also reports that the April rate of activity was maintained in the first three weeks of this month, thanks largely to steel and motors. Retail also advanced.

Stock Movements.

Wright Aero, recent recipient of large airplane orders, rose 10 points at the start of trading. Yesterday the stock climbed 10 points on moderate volume. Little of the stock is outstanding, and the price is easy to move on any real attempt or in response to buying at a time when holders are content to stay. The stock is at the odd-lot post . . . United States Industrial Alcohol, true to predictions, suffered a cut in the dividend, the rate being halved. The market had fully allowed for the reduction and the price for the stock was steadier than it had been in the last few days, when insiders with a sniff of what was in the wind had poured out the shares . . . Another case in which insiders seem to have had the inevitable advantage (but presumably didn't take it) is that of Atlantic Gulf & West Indies. Recently the stock was selling around the lowest of the year. Yesterday the common and preferred jumped nearly 4 points and today they climbed another 2 or 3 points. Yesterday a report was issued showing that last year a profit of around $400,000 had been substituted for a deficit of like amount in the previous year.

Fleming Urges Understanding Of Banking

By Gerald G. Gross.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., May 28.—Lifting of the veil of mystery which now hinders the relations of bankers and their patrons was urged here today by Robert V. Fleming, president of the American Bankers Association.

Addressing the opening session of the District of Columbia Bankers Association's eighteenth annual convention, Fleming, who is president of the Riggs National Bank, predicted that if bankers, governmental authorities and the general public work together understandingly, "there is no question in my mind that we shall develop a far more stable and serviceable banking system than we have ever known in the history of our country."

His speech was one of the highlights of a meeting at which a report was presented showing that business conditions in the Nation's Capital are markedly on the upswing. Association President Charles H. Doing cited sharp increases in commercial bank deposits and two guest speakers discussed investment bonds and securityships. Pointing to the unique responsibilities incumbent upon bankers in the Capital City, Fleming declared:

"Banking is vital to the economic life of the country. Without it and the service it performs it would not be possible for modern business to function. In our daily contacts I urge that we keep in mind, in addition to our direct responsibilities toward depositors and stockholders the social responsibilities of our business."

Doing's Address.

President Doing, facing the representatives of 21 member banks in the association, drew a heartening picture in reviewing activities of the past. "Nevertheless," he said, "all is not smooth sailing yet and bankers are being compelled to study the technique of their profession more than ever before. Since 1934, when the association was asked to co-operate in the Government's home renovation program, Washington banks have made over 5,300 loans for about $2,500,000 under Title I of the national housing act."

Echoing the sentiment of the A. B. A. head, Mr. Doing said: "Believing that public disapproval of banks is largely due to a misconception on the part of the individual as to the proper functions of banking, bankers throughout the country under the leadership of the A. B. A., having adjusted some of the more pressing considerations, have turned their attention to the task of restoring their good name and developing a better general understanding of sound banking principles and practices."

Norman E. Towson, chairman of the committee on commercial trade activities, reported that Washington is well ahead of the rest of the country in percentage of income tax returns filed, ownership of radio sets and automobiles and the number of persons employed. Face value of bonds traded in during 1935 on the Washington Stock Exchange was $1,117,400, compared to $801,200 in 1934. For the first four months of 1936 the total was $425,000.

Bank clearings rose 25 per cent in 1935 over the previous year, and building operations, automobile registrations, hotel occupancy and department store sales are mounting steadily, Towson reported.

He recommended that the District Bankers Association through cooperation with Washington agencies which gathered statistical data make itself a clearing point for all basic economic statistics respecting Washington. Comprehensive reports, he said further, could then be compiled and published at brief intervals for the benefit of the bankers' body and all co-operating organizations.

Bishop's Invocation.

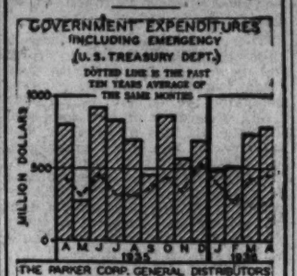
The Right Rev. Arthur C. Thomson, bishop of southern Virginia, gave the invocation at the inaugural session of the three-day convention.

J. Harvie Wilkinson, vice president of the State Planters Bank & Trust Co., Richmond, discussed "Bonds in and Out of a Bank's Portfolio." Charles H. McComas, of the Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland, traced the development of surety coverage and strongly recommended that all banks secure adequate protection.

In the absence of Lanier P. McLachlen, Nelson B. O'Neal presented the report of the treasury relations committee.

President Doing appointed Victor B. Deyber, chairman; Sidney F. Taliaferro, and Frederick P. H. Siddons to the resolutions committee, and George O. Vass, chairman; Edward L. Hillyer and Bruce Baird to the nominating committee.

U. S. April Deficit 20% Under Year Ago



Boston, Mass., May 27.—Although Government expenditures continue at a high rate, there is some consolation in the fact that the April deficit was smaller than a year ago. April Government expenditures, including emergency, were nearly 20 per cent less than last year, while receipts were slightly greater. The Federal debt now stands at about $31,500,000,000.

Wheat Prices Rise on Fear Of Heat Wave

3 Cents a Bushel Advance Registered in Minneapolis.

Chicago, May 28 (AP).—Sudden fears aroused by extraordinarily high temperatures Northwest and by complaints of dearth of moisture there threatening crops turned wheat prices strongly upward today. Three cents a bushel jump of the Minneapolis wheat market gave emphasis to anxiety concerning the spring crop outlook. Temperatures of 98 in Montana and 102 in Saskatchewan were reported, but a restraining factor was likelihood of showers.

Wheat closed firm, ⅛@⅝ above yesterday's finish, July, 84⅛@84¼; September, 84@84⅛; December, 85⅝@85¾; corn, unchanged to ⅜ lower; July, 59⅞@60; September, 57⅝@57¾; December, 52⅝; oats, ⅛@¼ up; July, 24⅝, and rye at ½@⅝ advance; July, 53½. Socony-Vacuum Net Up $7,000,000 in 4 Months

New York, May 28 (AP).—Socony-Vacuum Oil Co.'s earnings in the first four months of this year were $7,000,000 ahead of the same period last year, J. A. Brown, president, stated at the annual stockholders' meeting today. The company is one of the largest oil concerns in the country, having been created through consolidation of the old Vacuum Oil Co. and Standard Oil Co. of New York.

A suggestion that the company increase its dividend was made by several stockholders. One shareholder claimed that in earning 71 cents a share last year and reducing the dividend to 30 cents, the market price of the stock "was cut $5 a share." He complained that the dividend action had kept Socony-Vacuum stock at around its low for the year while shares of other oil companies apparently were selling well above their low points.

Thomas, deceased, having been returned as to Betty Jones Lacey, "not to be found" it is this 4th day of May, 1936, ordered that the issues be set down for trial on the 2d day of June, 1936 and that this order and the substance of said issues to wit, was the said James H. Thomas, deceased, at the time of making and subscribing or of the acknowledging said writing of and concerning writing dated the 11th day of June, 1934, of sound mind and memory and capable of making a will, and was said paper writing, dated the 11th day of June, 1934, obtained or the execution thereof procured from said James H. Thomas, deceased, by fraud or undue influence of William Cosger of any other person or persons, shall be published once a week for four weeks in The Washington Law Reporter and twice a week for the same period in The Washington Post. JOSEPH W. COX, Justice. Attest: (Seal.) THEODORE COGSWELL, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 14,15,21,22,28,29.

E. P. MOREY, Attorney, 1317 F Street Northwest.

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE DISTRICT of Columbia, holding an Equity Court, in re: Frank M. Edmonston, Lunacy, No. 17153. Filed May 26, 1936. Frank E. Cunningham, Clerk. Order Nisi for Sale. Rose E. Edmonston, committee of the person and estate of said Frank M. Edmonston, duly adjudged to be of unsound mind on April 3, 1936, having reported to the Court that she has received a private offer for the purchase of Lot 58, in Square 2941, with improvements thereon, at and for the price of seven thousand five hundred dollars ($7,500.00), terms of sale: Five hundred dollars ($500.00) cash, for the balance purchaser to assume a first trust in the sum of approximately four thousand five hundred dollars ($4,500.00), interest at five and one-half per cent (5½%) due in approximately three years after settlement, and give back a deferred purchase note in the sum of approximately two thousand five hundred dollars ($2,500.00) payable in monthly installments of thirty dollars ($30.00) including interest at six per cent (6%) until paid, and secured by a second deed of trust, subject to a commission of three hundred twenty-five dollars ($325.00), it is, by the Court, this 26TH DAY OF MAY, A. D. 1936, adjudged, ordered and decreed, that said offer be accepted and said sale be ratified and confirmed unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 8TH DAY OF JUNE, A. D. 1936, provided a copy of this order be published in the Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post for three successive days prior to said last mentioned date, and provided further that the first publication be made on May 28, the second on May 29 and the third on June 1, 1936. IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE DISTRICT of Columbia. G. Thomas Dunlop, 929 E street northwest, Washington, D. C., Plaintiff, vs. McKenzie Engraving Company, a corporation, 1010 Commonwealth avenue, Boston, Mass., Defendant. At Law No. 87277. The object of this suit is to recover judgment upon a claim of the plaintiff for compensation for professional service rendered to defendant and to have judgment of condemnation of certain property of the defendant levied on under an attachment issued in this suit to satisfy the plaintiff's claim. It is, therefore, this 20th day of May, 1936, ordered that the defendant appear in this court on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, after the day of the first publication of this order, to defend this suit and show cause why said condemnation should not be had; otherwise the suit will be proceeded with as in case of default; provided that this order be published in the Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post once a week for three successive weeks. By the Court: O. R. LUHRING, Justice. A true copy. Test: (Seal.) FRANK E. CUNNINGHAM, Clerk. By RICHARD J. KIRKLAND, Assistant Clerk. my22,29,je5

NED BRANT—A Story of College Athletics

By Bob Zuppke
Famous Football Coach

ALL RIGHT! I WILL ASK YOU ANOTHER QUESTION
5-29
I COME BY THIS INTELLIGENCE NATURALLY, MY SONS
IF I PUT $1,000 IN THE BANK FOR 47 YEARS, HOW MUCH INTEREST WILL I DRAW?
LISTEN, MY DEAR PROFESSOR PARSONS—
YOU WOULDN'T DRAW ANY INTEREST EVEN IF YOU JUMPED OUT OF A HOTEL WINDOW!
DUMP HIM, NED—I'LL PAY YOU WELL!
HI, FELLOWS!
HOW'D YOU COME OUT, REO? PASS IN ALL YOUR SUBJECTS? ELIGIBLE FOR FOOTBALL NEXT FALL?

APPLE MARY

By Martha Orr

LISTEN. MAYBE IT'S THE APPLE WOMAN WHOSE PICTURE WE TOOK IN THE CITY.
5-29
Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.; Copyright, 1936, by Publishers Syndicate
IN THE STUDIO—
TONIGHT'S ADVENTURE TAKES US TO THE OFFICE OF A CERTAIN POLITICIAN.
FIFTEEN MINUTES LATER.
SOMEONE SMASHED A SWITCH OUT AT THE TOWERS! OUR PROGRAM HAS BEEN CANCELLED.
I'LL BET IT WAS LOOTER. HE SAID I'D NEVER GO ON THE AIR AGAIN.
THAT STATION HAS BEEN DEAD FOR TWENTY MINUTES.
—AND I WANTED TO HEAR IF THAT WAS THE SAME APPLE WOMAN AS THE ONE IN THIS PICTURE.

MICKEY FINN

By Lank Leonard

WELL, MICKEY, I'M GLAD YOU ENJOYED THE DINNER—NOW I WANT TO TALK ABOUT YOUR FATHER—THAT'S WHY I BROUGHT YOU IN HERE AWAY FROM THAT WISE GUY, BENTON.
HE SURE DOES SEEM LIKE A VERY SMART FELLA. I WISH THAT—DAD—DAD—COME QUICK! BUBBLES IS LOOSE—AND HE CHASED BIFF RIGHT OFF THE PORCH!
MICKEY—WAIT—THAT DOG WILL BITE YOU! —COME BACK!
HERE BOY NICE BOY!
KITTY—BRING A FLASHLIGHT, HURRY!
CAN YOU BEAT THAT! MICKEY, YOU'RE THE FIRST STRANGER HE'S EVER TAKEN TO.
HE DIDN'T BITE YOU, DID HE BIFF?
NO HE DIDN'T BITE ME—BUT HE RUINED THIS SUIT!! I THOUGHT YOU SAID HE WAS TIED UP.
TEE HEE!
WHY—MR. FINN—HE'S CHEWING ON SOMETHING!
YES, I KNOW—IT'S A CHOCOLATE BAR—I ALWAYS HAVE ONE IN ME POCKET IN CASE I GET HUNGRY

YOU SAY THE CHECK HAS NOT BEEN CASHED?
AH-HA! OF COURSE NOT—THAT CHECK IS ONLY WORTH $1000 AT THIS BANK—BUT AS EVIDENCE, IT'S WORTH $1,000,000.
EVIDENCE? WHAT DO YOU MEAN?
WHAT DO I MEAN? HOW MUCH WOULD YOU PAY TO KEEP MILLIE FROM SEEING THAT CHECK?
ARE YOU HINTING THAT THE WIDOW ZANDER WOULD STOOP AS LOW AS THAT??
HINTING?—BOY—IF THAT'S A HINT—A TWENTY-ONE GUN SALUTE IS JUST A WHISPER!
